Reports of Suffering and Loss of Life Begin to Reach Pittsburgh, Pa.

Disturbance in Ohio Valley Increases in Intensity. Flood Fears.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Jan. 3.—The storm which broke over Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania last night increased in intensity as the day wore on, moving down into West Virginia and causing great damage to telegraph and telephone wires. Many communities were cut off because of the heavy snow, while others could be reached only by one shaky wire. Snow fell steadily during the evening and the local weather bureau sent out a special warning to all railroad and river interests to prepare for a continuation of existing conditions tomorrow.

Fear of flood, prevalent all day along the upper Ohio and the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers, was quieted by the prediction of lower temperatures, but craft in the local harbor were made snug in anticipation of eventualities.

Stories of suffering and loss of life began today to reach Pittsburgh. Railroads operated under difficulties, the trouble making the movement of trains uncertain. East of Pittsburgh it was snowing heavily in the mountains, but trains were moving.

Natives in Africa Amazed at What They Call Unprecedented Event.

[By Cable and Direct Wire to The Times.]

MELILLA (Morocco) Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the first recorded time in history snow fell early this morning in the country surrounding this town, the cold wave that swept Southern Europe having for the first time crossed the Straits of Gibraltar and invaded Africa. The natives were greatly surprised and the great majority of them did not know what snow was. The cold wave has been very favorable to the Spanish military campaign and in the last two days of unprecedented low temperature the natives have been more quiet than at any time since the beginning of the war.

Insists Hundreds Are Evading the Laws in the Guise of Students.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Positive recommendation will be made by the Bureau of Immigration for the further restriction of certain kinds of oriental immigration.

A. Caminetti, Commissioner-General of Immigration, returned today to Washington from an extended official trip to immigration stations on the Pacific Coast. He plunged at once into the preparation of his annual report, which will submit some important recommendations, particularly with regard to the tide of oriental immigration that is tending in the direction of the United States.

"It is not my purpose," he said today, "to direct my recommendations at any particular people, but it is manifest that many orientals are getting into this country unlawfully. This is particularly true of the so-called students, who ostensibly come to this country to obtain an education. Many of these, I am satisfied, are merely laborers, who come here in the guise of students. Proposed regulations and laws will be drafted in an effort to restrict this sort of immigration.

"On the Pacific Coast, the admission to the country of Hindus has become a serious problem. I am having a search made of our records now to ascertain how many of those people are in the United States legally. I am convinced that scores, perhaps hundreds, have gotten in surreptitiously and have no lawful right here. Some of them have come across the Mexican or Canadian border, where hitherto it has been impossible entirely to prevent smuggling. This smuggling applies not only to undesirable persons, but to opium and to other articles. I expect to recommend that provision be made for a more rigid patrol of both borders than we ever have had."

Commissioner Caminetti probably will recommend that an extensive patrol force be established on the northern border from the Cascade Mountains to the ocean and on the southern border from Arizona to the sea. It will be his effort to co-operate with the customs service on both borders, not only to prevent the smuggling of immigrants, but to keep out opium.

ENGLISH NOBLEMAN TOILS TO GET OUT OF PERU.

Lord Richard Farrer Herschill Reaches San Francisco on Oil Tanker, His Valet Acting in Capacity of Cook Because Vessel Couldn't Carry Passengers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lord Richard Farrer Herschill, of the English nobility, today reached San Francisco as a sailor on the tanker Prometheus, having shipped from Lobitas, Peru.

With him came his valet, Annett, who booked as a cook on the same ship. As soon as they landed they got into fashionable clothes and registered at the Fairmont.

Necessity forced Lord Herschill to stoop to ordinary labor as a sailor on the Prometheus. That vessel has no papers for carrying passengers, and the nobleman and his servant were so eager to leave Peru they willingly signed up and all the way up the coast toiled at hard labor, one in the galley, the other on deck.

Burke's "Peerage" says Richard Farrer Herschill is a baron born in 1878, was educated at Eton College, and is an expert golfer, cricket player and musician, and a first-class sportsman.

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I don't believe in talking for the newspapers and forever getting your name into print," said Thomas Milton Schumacher, head of the Rock Island Railroad system, "but there are some things that ought to be told."

Mr. Schumacher's record shows that he doesn't spend overmuch time in useless conversation with the newspapers or anyone else, for at 20 he was a bill clerk at $65 a month for the Missouri Pacific at St. Louis. And at 52 he is relied upon by a big syndicate of conservative bankers to push the great Rock Island system to the forefront of western roads that pay.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT ENGAGED.

Son of Ex-President to Wed Daughter of Ambassador Willard Accredited to Madrid.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RICHMOND (Va.) Jan. 3.—Personal letters received here today from Madrid by friends of Ambassador Willard report the engagement of the Ambassador's daughter, Miss Belle Willard, to Kermit Roosevelt, son of Theodore Roosevelt.

The wedding, it is said, will take place in the spring, probably here in Richmond, the home of the Willards.

Miss Willard and Kermit Roosevelt were guests of the Willards on a long motor trip through Virginia and ending at Hot Springs a little over a year ago. Miss Willard was one of the guests last winter at the wedding in New York of Ethel Roosevelt to Richard Derby, but the romance between the two was not suspected.

English Suffragist Protests That the Arson Squad's Doings Will not Keep the Votes From Women.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Failure of members of the British Parliament to keep their campaign promises is largely responsible for the "madness of the militants," according to George Lansbury, a noted English suffragist, in an address today at the City Club. Mr. Lansbury, who is a member of the Parliament, freed himself from imprisonment for the use of alleged "seditious language" last July by a three-day hunger strike. He said that of the 670 members of the Parliament, about 400 had pledged themselves in favor of woman suffrage, but had changed their minds since the election.

Asked whether the excesses of the English militants had not hurt the cause, Mr. Lansbury said:

"Woman suffrage is either right or wrong and what one man or woman does will not alter that fact."

ADVANCED STAND BY DR. ELIOT.

PREDICTS FUTURE RELIGION WILL BE SCIENTIFIC.

Declares Miracles of the Bible Will Never Be Accepted by Leaders of the New Creed and He Would Substitute Term "Our Father" in Speaking of Deity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A new interpretation of the divine being is advanced today by President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard in a continuation of his prediction on religion of the future.

The noted educator would bar the word "God" and substitute "Our Father." Nothing so radical as his ideas on the appellation of the "divine being" has been advanced for many years. This statement has been published by the American Unitarian Association. "Our Father" he considers the right name in approaching the Almighty.

This twentieth-century Christianity of Dr. Eliot's does not believe in the Garden of Eden. The serpent tempting Eve and then tempting Adam, he turns over to the rubbish heap. He says God did not make man out of the dust of the ground. God did not turn stone mason and give into the hands of Moses the Ten Commandments, neither did the sun stand still for Joshua, neither did Jonah go through his thrilling experience in the closed quarters of the whale. These and other stories Dr. Eliot would designate pleasant reading, but none for belief.

There will be nothing like dogmas or creed in this twentieth-century religion. No miracle will be found in it. "Men of science," says Dr. Eliot, "have no faith in magic or miracle."

WISCONSIN STATUTE TO BE PUT TO SUPREME TEST.

Class Legislation Is Discovered in the Enactment Heralded as a Panacea—Common Law Is Invoked by a Couple Who Refused to Forego a Marriage Celebration.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Jan. 3.—Application for a writ of mandamus to compel County Clerk L. G. Widule to issue a marriage license to Alfred A. Peterson without the submission of a medical certificate as required by the eugenic law will be presented early next week, Attorney Harry R. McLogan said today.

The measure is unreasonable and an unjust exercise of police powers, it will be contended, and further, it is class legislation in that it demands from the man what it does not guarantee from the woman. For a third cause, the lawyer for Peterson will set forth that the law discriminates against physicians under thirty years of age, the majority of them being capable and if anything, better qualified, for the reason that they have received later and more advanced medical teachings than older men.

A foreigner, whose name has not been divulged, was refused a license along with two other prospective bridegrooms today. He refused to undergo the physical examination and went to an attorney where he secured a statement, after which he and his prospective bride affixed their signatures which will make them common-law man and wife, according to a Wisconsin statute. He said he had rented a hall for the wedding and no eugenic law was "going to spoil the event."

BUILDING'S FALL KILLS THREE.

Three Men and Woman Dead as Result of Collapse of Structure in Indianapolis.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) Jan. 3.—Three men and one negro woman were killed when a recently remodeled three-story building, the lower floor of which was vacant, collapsed here today. One of the victims was a Chinese.

He and the negress were employed in a restaurant, which occupied the second floor of the building.

The building collapsed while the streets were crowded and a number of persons had narrow escapes from injury.

One man was caught by the falling timbers and pinned to the ground, but was released in a short time. He was not seriously injured.

Miss Pankhurst was released from jail on December 15, after having endured a hunger, thirst and sleep strike to the point of seeming collapse.

JOHN LIND GOES BACK.

Returns to Mexico as an Observer.

Mystery of Envoy's Visit to Pass Christian Is Only Partly Cleared.

The President Declares that "Nothing Specific" Has Been Developed.

Wilson Denies that He Talked Over Any Particular Plan of Action.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PASS CHRISTIAN (Miss.) Jan. 3.—With the departure late today, of the scout cruiser Chester, bearing John Lind, the President's personal envoy, back to Mexico to continue his observations of Mexican affairs, the mystery which has enveloped Mr. Lind's visit to President Wilson was only partially cleared.

Just why the nation's chief executive decided not to permit Mr. Lind to have any "shore leave," and took upon himself the inconvenience of being trans-shipped four times at sea, has not been explained. President Wilson volunteered no explanation, but one of the suppositions current is that he did not wish the special envoy to be subjected to the inquisition of newspaper correspondents. Another theory is that the President desired to show Mexico that there is no change in the American policy and no actual interruption of Mr. Lind's mission to Mexico.

The peculiar movements of the revenue cutter Winona and the long delay before the President and Mr. Lind actually met were partly accounted for today when it became known that the lack of wireless facilities on the revenue cutter had confused the plans. When the Chester reported her arrival the Winona's launch had to make a fifteen-mile trip to shore and back again before arrangements could be made for the President's visit.

The President was the only source of information concerning the conference with Mr. Lind. He spoke of it today only in broad generalities, saying that nothing specific had been developed and that nothing of any definite character occasioned the meeting. The President asserted he discussed no particular plan of action.

Norman and John Lind, Jr., returned late today from the Chester after five hours' visit with their father. They said he gave them little information about the Mexican situation. The Linds will start for their home in Minneapolis tomorrow.

President Wilson worked in his study all afternoon reading documents and writing letters. He had enjoyed a morning of golf and seemed greatly benefited by today's balmy weather.

REBELS HAMPER RED CROSS.

POLICY IS TO LET FEDERAL SYMPATHIZERS STARVE.

Relief Work for the Victims in Northern Sinaloa Is Practically Suspended With Plenty of Supplies to Relieve the Suffering People at Hand.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HERMOSILLO (Mex.) Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Relief work by the American Red Cross in the famine districts of Northern Sinaloa has been entirely suspended by the unexpected opposition manifested by the authorities there.

Ineffectual efforts have been made by Consul Simpich of Nogales to induce the officials to work in harmony with the relief measures already provided for, but at a late hour tonight it was made known that no assistance could be expected from this end of the line.

In a telegram to the officials of the Department of Communications, Consul Simpich asks that telegrams between the consular officials and the agent of the Red Cross be sent over the military lines under a frank such as is issued to the newspapers.

"I do not wish to expend the entire appropriation in telegraph tolls," the message stated. But at a late hour no action had been taken to afford relief.

The reason advanced by the American authorities is that the famine sufferers have been inclined to support the Huerta cause in the past and that the present officers of this particular territory are not in sympathy with any movement to alleviate the sufferings of those who are considered enemies of the cause.

Although funds and money have been provided to allay the pangs of hunger in the Choix district, at least until other provisions can be made, not a pound of either beans or corn has reached the starving people.

The inability of the consular officers to communicate with Dr. Mensendieck is considered part of a well-developed plan to prevent the Amer-

HUNTING FOOD FOR REFUGEES.

Red Cross Facing Serious Problem at Presidio.

Hundreds Fleeing from Fight Crossing Into Texas.

Rebels' Ammunition Is Said to Be Running Low.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PRESIDIO (Tex.) Jan. 3.—Fleeing from the heaviest firing in all the five days' battle between the Federals at Ojinaga, Mex., and Gen. Ortega's rebel army, which is surrounding the village, women, children and deserting soldiers flocked to the border and crossed the river in such numbers today that the United States border patrol and the Red Cross faced a serious problem of feeding the refugees.

It was necessary to permit food to be sent across the river to save the lives of women, children and wounded Federals. For such as waded through the river there was no shelter. The church and the few buildings here had been converted into Red Cross hospitals.

Maj. Michael W. McNamee, commanding officer of the patrol, also received a few Federal deserters and held them prisoners on this side.

In the line streaming down the battlefield about a mile back from the river, women nursing babies mingled with the hobbling wounded. They were scattered for almost two miles up and down the river bank. Most of these refugees were camp followers. At remote points wounded rebels also came to the river. Maj. McNamee extended to the combatants of both sides such aid as humanity dictated.

The arrival of the camp followers, who usually remain with the soldiers until the situation becomes untenable for them, was regarded as the precursor of a greater exodus. Maj. McNamee has been on the alert for a week for a possible flight of the whole Federal army.

Though the battle between the 4000 defending Federals and 6000 or more rebels among the hills progressed until late in the day, it remained undecided at nightfall. The rebels put their artillery into action. One shell alone, it was observed through field glasses, brought seventy-six soldiers to the ground. Observers on the American side were of the opinion that the total wounded may be 700 or 800, while the number of killed would be less than half of that number.

Toward night the firing of the rebels slackened. This was followed at once by the silencing of the Federal arms. The United States troops along the river, while prepared for an emergency, had not lost sight of the possibility that the rebels' ammunition might run out, which would necessitate their temporarily falling back.

The few shots which fell in United States territory caused no damage. There is some sickness among the refugees, but the Red Cross officials believe it has been checked.

FEDERALS HOLD NUEVO LAREDO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAREDO (Tex.) Jan. 3.—Constitutionalists, who for two days have unsuccessfully assaulted Nuevo Laredo have withdrawn and are encamped five miles east today. It was reported that they had been reinforced by 400 cavalry and 400 artillery and that the assault would be resumed.

Rebel officials announced here this afternoon that they would renew their attack on Nuevo Laredo in two days. Within this time, it is expected, reinforcements of 2800 men will have reached Nuevo Laredo. Eight hundred of this number already are encamped here. The rebels said they met a much more stubborn resistance than they feared. Two hundred rebel wounded are receiving care at hospitals on this side of the border. Their dead in recent fighting included one Japanese.

British Refuse to Allow Constitutionalist Refugees to Land from Dutch Steamer.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

GUATEMALA CITY, Jan. 3.—When the Dutch steamer Marowijne of the United Fruit Company's service arrived at Belisse, British Honduras, from New Orleans a few days ago, an armed force from the British warship Lancaster boarded the vessel and refused to allow Senor Castillo, a Mexican Constitutionalist and his wife to land. Boats from the warship patrolled the bay to prevent any Mexicans from going ashore or communicating with those on shore.

The action of the British naval officers was taken to prevent Mexican Constitutionalists from entering Yucatan or Chiapas by way of Belisse.

"DON'T GO BACK," WARNING ISSUED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Warning to Americans who have left Mexico against returning to that country were issued late today by the State Department.

"The information in the possession of the department," says an official statement, "indicates that economic and political conditions have not changed in such a way as to justify an attempt to return to Mexico and resume industrial operations there, and that any purpose to take such a step is due to misunderstanding or to misrepresentations as to the actual conditions and prospect at the present moment."

SENT BACK AS INVADERS.

BLISS EXPLAINS STATUS OF THE OJINAGA REFUGEES.

In Those Cases in Which They Enter the United States With Arms the Men of Either Faction Are Held to Be a Menace to the Big Bend Country.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Further official explanation of the action of the Texas border patrol in disarming Mexicans and forcing them back across the Rio Grande was received today from Brig.-Gen. Bliss. His report says:

"So far as known at the headquarters, what has been done at Presidio is in accordance with the unbroken practice along the border. Any one seeking refuge or claiming asylum is received and protected. Frequently armed parties of Federals or rebels cross without even the intention to surrender or seek asylum. If not found by the patrols, they cross back at convenient time and place. Their international status is that of armed invaders of United States territory. Caught by our patrols, they are disarmed and either held or put back across the river, according to circumstances of the case. Under no circumstances are they obliged to return where they can be taken by their enemies. Federals are sent over to the command from which they came and the same is true of the rebels. Depriving them of their arms is absolutely necessary. Any other rule will result in the Big Bend country being overrun with swarms of small armed parties of Mexicans terrorizing the people. To round them up would require all of Maj. McNamee's force and probably more, and he would be unable to perform his present duty of receiving the Mexican body which may eventually be driven across at Presidio. The requirements of humanity are fully met. All civilian refugees, men, women and children, and all wounded persons are received and cared for. All armed men who seek asylum are received, disarmed and cared for. All armed men who do not evidently seek asylum and whose good faith is in doubt, are also disarmed.

"If humanity prevents sending them over the river we take care of them. If humanity does not forbid and we can send the men back to join their army, the local officer acts according to his best discretion."

The gunboat Yorktown, en route from San Diego to Mazatlan, reported her arrival today at Ensenada on the Bay of Todos Santos. Americans in Ensenada asked for a warship.

The threatening situation at Ensenada, according to today's official dispatches, grows out of the failure of the Federal troops there to receive their pay. Efforts are being made to raise the money by contributions from business men.

The Federals are forcing delivery of fuel oil to the railroad near Tampico. From San Luis Potosi, it is reported that railways to the west, north and east have been cut, about thirty miles from the city, which is threatened by Constitutionalist forces from the north.

EXECUTE FOUR AT JUAREZ.

Prisoners Shout "Viva Orozco" and Rebel Lieutenant Is Fatally Shot During a Struggle.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ (Mex.) Jan. 3.—Four men charged with having cried "Viva Orozco" were executed in an alley in Juarez today. The men were first held on suspicion of being Huerta sympathisers. In a fight preceding the execution a rebel lieutenant was fatally shot.

MEXICANS ESCAPE.

BROWNSVILLE (Tex.) Jan. 3.—Thirty-nine Mexican soldiers, confined in the guardhouse at Ft. Brown, escaped last night and are believed to be trying to reach Nuevo Laredo. Of more than 100 Mexican Federals confined at Ft. Brown, six months ago, all but twenty have escaped. When Constitutionalists captured Matamoros, Mex., they crossed the river and surrendered.

THE LOS ANGELES TIMES.

Again Proves Itself the Greatest of All Publicity Mediums By Printing More Advertising in 1913 Than Any Other Newspaper in the World.

During the year 1913, The Times printed the enormous total of 16,925,909 lines of paid advertising, approximately 3,000,000 lines more than the total volume printed by any other American newspaper.

That successful business builders in Los Angeles and Southern California concentrate their advertising in The Times is conclusively proved by the unfailing regularity with which this newspaper overwhelms its local contemporaries and tops every other newspaper on the globe in the volume of advertising printed, and in the number of separate advertising patrons.

The Times' tremendous popularity is further attested by the fact that during 1913 it printed 846,242 separate classified advertisements, which is almost double the number printed by its nearest local contemporary.

The Times covers Los Angeles and Southern California absolutely, and its circulation is greater in quantity, better in quality and more permanent than that of any other newspaper in the Pacific Southwest.

For more than a quarter of a century The Times has been the home paper of this great, constantly-expanding section, and today its prestige and influence with the rank and file of the people of Southern California and surrounding territory are greater than ever.

MEXICO PAYS ITS INTEREST.

Bankers Think United States' Position Untenable.

Declare America Is Barred from Blockading Ports.

Foreign Office, However, Is Opposed to This View.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The loan to Mexico arranged by an international group of bankers for the sole purpose of meeting the January interest on the Mexican government and City of Mexico bonds amounted to $6,000,000. Of this total New York bankers took $930,000; London, $3,465,000, and Paris, $1,505,000.

The negotiations were conducted by Albert Turrettini, general manager of the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, who was assisted by the Mexican Minister of Finance, Adolfo de la Lama.

Some curious points of view developed at the conferences of the bankers here as to what might happen in the event of a default in the interest of the Mexican debt. One view, which was strongly supported by financiers who disapproved of Washington's policy toward Huerta, was that the loan of 1910 is secured by 62 per cent. of the Mexican customs and the loan of 1913 by 38 per cent., it would be the duty and privilege of the European governments, whose subjects hold the bonds, to seize the custom-houses by international landing parties and to collect the interest themselves.

The bankers holding this opinion also affirmed that the United States government could not blockade the ports of Mexico without destroying the value of the customs receipts mortgage to foreign bondholders. The arguments will be presented again when the next interest and installments fall due, unless the situation is changed in the interval. At the French Foreign Office it was said that the government has no sympathy whatever with the views.

"GETTING TOGETHER."

While Wilson and Lind Confer, Washington Hears of "Bloody Battles" Down in Mexico.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—While President Wilson and his personal representative, John Lind, were "getting together" at Gulfport, Miss., regarding the situation in Mexico, bloody battles were in progress on the Mexican border.

At Ojinaga the Federals though beset by a superior force of Constitutionalists had been able to hold their own, the American commander at Presidio, Tex., adjacent to the beleaguered Mexican town, reported today through Gen. Bliss. He said the situation was unchanged after nearly three days of fighting.

One Federal prisoner at Presidio treated by the Red Cross was found to have smallpox, a very dangerous development in the situation, as Gen. Bliss reported about 1000 men, women and children refugees are on the American side awaiting the result of the fighting.

Immigration officials and the Red Cross have taken charge of these refugees and the American military commander is also co-operating and lending all possible assistance.

American Consul Garrett at Laredo reported today that the fighting had ceased at Nuevo Laredo and that the rebels had withdrawn.

Press reports that fiendish atrocities were perpetrated on wounded and helpless captives are being investigated by Col. Blocksom, under instructions from Gen. Bliss.

MORE MONEY COINED.

Almost Two Million More Dollars Turned Out in Philadelphia This Year Than Was Made Last Year.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—Almost $2,000,000 more money was coined in the United States mint in this city during 1913 than during 1912. There was a general increase in the coinage of almost all metals, but most of the increase represents the manufacture of the new Buffalo nickels. In the annual report of John H. Landis, superintendent of the mint, which was compiled yesterday, it is shown that during 1913 there were 160,067,826 pieces of money coined from all metals, amounting to $20,182,841. During 1912 the coinage was 121,653,122 pieces and the money value $18,342,482. Last year there were $3,042,611 worth of nickels struck, while in the year previous the nickels amounted to $1,311,835.

No money was coined for foreign countries at the mint during last year, although in 1912 a large number of dimes were struck for Costa Rica and more than $500,000 in silver dollars were coined for San Salvador.

The coining of 1914 nickels, the only coinage thus far ordered by the Treasury Department for use in the United States, was begun yesterday. An order has been received, however, for the coinage of thousands of dollars for San Salvador and this work is expected to be started in the near future.

As usual all dies used during the past year were destroyed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The mine planter San Francisco, the repair ship Vestal and the tugs Patuxent and Patapco were ordered today to leave Pensacola, Fla., early next week for Culebra, Porto Rico, to participate in the advance base maneuvers of the marine brigade.

The Man Who Kidnaped "Mona Lisa."

Vincenzo Perugia,

Who stole Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting from the Louvre in Paris to avenge, as he says, crimes done to the art of Italy by Napoleon. It is said Perugia may escape punishment for what he calls a patriotic act unless the French government insists more strongly than it now is doing.

Two and One.

A TRIANGULAR PUZZLE IN "MONA LISA" CASE.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FLORENCE (Italy) Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vincenzo Perugia, who stole the Mona Lisa, may escape punishment for the act unless the French government insists more strongly than at present indicated, that an example be made of him. Three commissions may sit in his case to decide his mental condition and suggest what should be done with him.

It is a moot question whether he is an intense patriot, a reckless thief or insane or perhaps all three. France is not disposed to push the case against him, now that the painting is safely back in the Louvre. A majority of the Italian people praise Perugia's act as a mark of fine patriotism and France has no desire to offend this national feeling.

Present indications are that the case will be permitted to drag along until public feeling has something new to divert its attention and Perugia, if punished at all, will not be sentenced to anything that would tend to make of him a martyr and arouse resentment of the Italian public.

ROUTE SHIPS VIA CANAL WITHIN SEVENTY DAYS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Panama Canal will be in condition to pass vessels all the way across the isthmus within the next sevenay days, it was learned today, unless some unexpected obstacle is encountered. This is the judgment of a high canal official.

The only remaining obstacles to prevent the passage of vessels at this moment are the Cucaracha slide which blocks the cut at Culebra, and the few additional slides of relatively minor importance in the same locality. The dredging is progressing satisfactorily on those slides, and as soon as a channel of sufficient width and depth is established, it will be possible to pass vessels through from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

In view of the uncertain conditions surrounding the work, it has been deemed impolitic to attempt to fix a date for the opening of the canal.

An effort will be made tomorrow to bring the circumstances directly to the notice of Gen. Carranza and the consular officials are satisfied that the revolutionary chieftain will sweep aside all prejudice and allow the supplies to go forward.

No one has yet accused Carranza of not being humane and it is believed that he will take an interest in the movement so soon as he is placed in possession of the real facts.

Meanwhile it is reported that nearly sixty victims of starvation succumbed during the last seven days.

Prices of foodstuffs in the provisional capital have mounted in some cases as high as 200 per cent. over prices in normal times. The poor are beginning to suffer terribly, but the Constitutionalist authorities are doing all in their power to prevent food corners and to relieve the situation, which admittedly is growing worse daily.

BANKS ASK TO GET IN.

Eleven National Institutions Send in Applications to Join Reserve System.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The first legal applications for membership in the Federal reserve system were received today at the Treasury Department from eleven national banks in the form of regulations approved by the Reserve Bank Organization Committee declaring the boards of directors of the banks had accepted the terms of the new law.

The applications were from banks mainly in the South. The organization committee fixed dates for hearings in cities of the Pacific Coast, in the South and in the Central States. The committee will leave Washington January 17 and after holding hearings in Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver, will arrive in Seattle January 31. It will be in Seattle February 1, Portland February 2, San Francisco February 4, Los Angeles February 7, Houston, Tex., February 12, New Orleans February 14, Atlanta February 16, Cincinnati February 19, Cleveland February 21 and Washington February 22.

WALKS OF RURAL CARRIERS.

Many Miles Traveled and Five Million Families Served with Mail, the Report Indicates.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Reports from practically every one of the 42,000 rural mail carriers just received by Jonathan Bourne, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Federal Aid in the Construction of Postroads, shows that the carriers cover 1,003,284 miles of highway. This does not include any portion covered twice.

The reports show that 61,000 miles of this road is paved or constructed of crushed stone, flag or shell; 128,604 miles of gravel; 500,000 miles improved earth, and 275,000 unimproved earth. It also shows that 469,000 miles of road was bad part of the year and 80,000 all the year.

Nearly 30,000 of the carriers use one-horse vehicles, 7000 two-horse vehicles, 400 automobiles, 250 motorcycles, 110 horseback and five bicycles.

Approximately 5,000,000 families are served.

MORGAN FIRM WITHDRAWAL.

No Change Will Be Made in Plans for Trust Investigation by Secretary Redfield.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—No change in the plans of the Department of Commerce for investigating the trusts nor in its study of their economic efficiency is to result from the withdrawal of Morgan & Co. from the directorates of many corporations. The withdrawal of the Morgan firm, it was pointed out today, would not make of any less value the present and proposed work. Secretary Redfield has asked for an increase of appropriation for the bureau of corporations amounting from $250,000 to $685,000. Much of that fund he desires to use in undertaking a study of certain fundamental economic laws on which all our industries are based.

Secretary Redfield holds that the massing of capital has in it certain elements of efficiency, but doubts whether it is for the best interests of the country as a whole.

SAYS STARVATION DRIVES MEXICO TO CANNIBALISM.

Ten Thousand Yaqui Indians and Peons Dying in Upper Sinaloa as Result of War's Plague, Declares Civil Engineer Just Returned—Killing Own Children to Stave Off Hunger—American Consul's Appeal.

"STARVATION has driven the Yaqui Indians and Mexican peons of the upper Sinaloa, or Alamos, district to cannibalism.

"Human flesh is being roasted over mountain and desert camp fires to stave off the death that is facing 10,000 men, women and children.

"Mothers are butchering their own children or contrarily sacrificing themselves by suicide to feed their dying offspring.

"Strong men are slaughtering the weak, and the cripples, battle-wounded and deformed are being potted by their own brothers and sisters.

"Hunger has driven practically the whole mountain and desert population insane, and white men cornered there are eating rattlesnakes and wolves.

"Federal, Constitutionalist and guerrilla raids have wiped the ranch country clean of foodstuffs and the ranchers who have been able to escape the massacre that has swept the northeastern part of the State have nothing left."

Otto Roscher, 27 years of age, a civil engineer, of No. 645 South Spaulding avenue, Chicago, who returned yesterday to Los Angeles on his way East after battling his way from stricken Sinaloa, brought this story of death and desolation to The Times on instructions from Consul Hostetter of Hermosillo, he stated last night.

PLEA TO CHRISTIANS.

Roscher brings a plea to the philanthropic and charitable institutions of the world to take immediate action and prevent continued depredation against human life by sending food to the plague-ridden country.

"For the sake of Christianity," he says, "steps should be taken at once to alleviate the terrible sufferings of the thousands who are dying at the hands of the starving and by hunger.

"Save in the towns, which are practically all controlled by the Constitutionalists and where food prices are exorbitant, the whole of upper Sinoloa is within the starvation belt.

"Where ten ranches are encountered, nine are abandoned and the only means of procuring food from the tenth is at the point of guns or, when fight is offered, by killing the tenants of the property.

SKELETONS LITTER TRAILS.

"Skeletons litter the trails through the mountains and over the deserts and the scattered, picked bones, charred and blackened, tell the tale of cannibalism.

"The peons of the interior are practically ape-men and the results of the war have driven them to the depths of degradation.

"One day investigators will come upon a hut with a dozen children and hunger-mad parents; the next day, the children are gone, the parents insane, but fed, and tiny skeletons cover the sands.

"Horses and burros have long since been slaughtered to satisfy the wants of the starving and of all the rich ranch land, one cannot find a square mile of corn.

MOTHERS KILL YOUNG.

"Go a hundred kilometers from any Sinaloa town and the evidences of the catastrophic conditions are seen on every trail, at every deserted ranch, by every camp fire, and near every adobe shack.

"Existence has become a matter of hours. Casualties in Mexican battles are an infinitesimal consideration in comparison to the deaths by starvation, murder and suicide—but suicide is the last resort.

"Mexican mothers, who bear children on the trails as a wild animal does its offspring, are prone to believe that self-preservation is the first law of nature, and they kill their young nine times out of ten before turning the knives upon themselves.

"Conditions in the war-famous towns and villages are, of course, not so bad and the American and European public hears only of life and battle there; they get little or no information of the terror of plague that is holding the countryside in its grasp.

"And most of the Mexicans live in the mountains and on the desert, where, for centuries they have been used to subsisting as best they could and the majority of whom have never seen even a hamlet.

FIGHT OFF DEATH.

Roscher, who went into the interior of Sinaloa with four other American engineers in October prospecting, purchased a quartz claim from peons for $400 and three Winchester rifles, which are worth as much there as the cash he proffered. Roscher retained five Winchesters and five Colt 45's.

After getting the guns, the Indians surrounded the Americans' camp and attempted to kill them, but one of the engineers was awake, on guard, and he gave the alarm which resulted in a pitched battle, the death of three of the peons and the Americans' flight.

After twenty-five days' flight across the desert and mountains, with no food supplies save stray burros, an occasional dog, rattlesnakes and what corn they procured by force of arms from adobe hut squatters, they reached Tonichi on the Mexican Pacific.

Afoot, the party walked 180 kilometers to Hermosillo, where they were given succor by the American Consul.

EAT RATTLESNAKES.

"In eating the rattlesnakes I spoke of," Roscher says, "we cut the heads off about four inches back and cut the tails off about the same distance. We put the meat on a spit. It made good steaks to hungry men.

"Burro flesh is too tough, but it was all we could get. Wolves are good only a little sweet, something like venison. Dog is fair eating, but the name alone is nauseating. But we would have eaten anything.

"Rattlesnake steak has them all beat; it's plentiful and good. The Mexicans fry them under the desert sun after slicing them open. But we preferred to put them over a fire.

"At Esperanza we were arrested by Constitutionalists for crossing from Federal into Constitutionalist territory and, being armed, we were held and thrown in jail, where we remained sixteen days. The guard got drunk one night and we simply walked out of the jail, taking their guns. We hit back to the hills again and then made our way to Hermosillo."

Roscher had several thousand dollars in gold when he went into Mexico in October. The [illegible] burro outfit, including guns, ammunition and grubstake, the cost of the quartz claim and incidental expenses such as guides and servants, depleted his funds and he is awaiting [illegible] tance from Chicago.

Roscher intends to return temporarily to Chicago, enlist a force of men and then go back to Sinaloa to regain control of and develop his property.

THE MOYER CASE.

Circumstances of His Departure From Calumet District Before Special Grand Jury.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HOUGHTON (Mich.) Jan. 3.—The circumstances of the departure of Charles H. Moyer were brought to the attention of the special grand jury here today. Circuit Judge O'Brien charged the men who have officially investigated all lawlessness growing out of the copper miners' strike that reports were current that citizens of Colorado have been forced to leave Michigan and that the case might be considered in connection with the Michigan statute on kidnaping.

Judge O'Brien then read the statute which provided that if the person concerned is forced to leave the State, that it is no defense to show that he went willingly, if his consent was obtained by duress. The penalty provided is a fine of $[illegible] or indefinite imprisonment or both.

British Tramp Steamer Badly Battered by Storm.

San Francisco Lightship Breaks from Moorings.

Sacramento River Is Still Rising by Stages.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The ocean shore was thronged today by sightseers watching the thundering assault of the surf on the beach. A lone sea lion perched on a weather ledge of the Seal Rocks, forty feet above the tide, craned his neck complacently over the welter and turmoil of breakers. At times the spray flew 100 feet over his head.

Northward the potato patch off Point Bonita was a smother of foam. The British tramp steamer Cowrie, with a crew of forty-five Chinese, bound for Shanghai with a cargo of gasoline, which attempted the northern passage of the bar, grounded on the potato patch and was so badly battered that she put back to port with her bottom plates stove in and was beached in Mission Cove, inside the harbor, to prevent her sinking. For several days the bar has been breaking badly and entrance to and exit from the harbor have been perilous.

So desperate appeared for a time the plight of the Cowrie that her Chinese crew of forty-nine men put on life preservers and were preparing to lower away the small boats, when the captain succeeded in working the ship into deep water.

This is the second time the vessel has been obliged to postpone her departure. On December 31, United States inspectors, learning that the Cowrie carried a crew of fifty-nine men, which was ten more than the law allows for a vessel not equipped with wireless, forced her to drop ten of her crew. They were taken to the detention station on Angel Island and thence will be sent to China at the expense of the Cowrie's charterers.

SCHOONER TOTAL LOSS.

The little lumber steamer Pomo is a total loss in Drakes Bay.

Swept of her deck load by heavy seas and pounded until her seams opened and she became waterlogged, the Pomo was taken in tow three days ago by the Steamer Adeline Smith. A breaking bar made it unsafe to bring her through the Golden Gate and Thursday night she broke loose and capsized. Her six passengers previously had been taken aboard the Adeline Smith. They arrived in port this morning.

The revenue cutter which attempted to salve the Pomo, after she had been abandoned by the Smith, returned today and reported that the Pomo had been driven ashore by a southerly gale in such a position that there was no hope of freeing her.

Heavy weather at sea continues. The San Francisco lightship broke loose from her mooring yesterday six miles out, but was brought safely to port and today the tender Sequoia is taking her place.

The woman answered the question whether she used intoxicating liquors or not by writing: "I use it only in cooking."

Thinking of various plum puddings and other delicacies where a little "stick" does no harm, the Civil Service Commission decided that the culinary secrets of a good cook shouldn't be held against her ability as a future State employee.

SEATTLE (Wash.) Jan. 3.—The total pack of salmon on the Pacific Coast for 1913 was 8,068,000 cases, according to an estimate published today by the Alaska Salmon Canners' Association. The figures exceed the total of the preceding year by 2,100,000 cases. The value of the pack for 1913 is placed at $35,000,000.

Puget Sound and British Columbia produced a total pack of all grades of 3,937,364 cases, or nearly half of the total of the Pacific Coast.

Reports from the Columbia River and the Oregon and California coast have not all been received. Otherwise the figures are said to be complete.

Densmore of the Department of Labor so announced after a final effort to bring the warring interests together. He did not hesitate to blame his failure upon the uncompromising attitude of the mine owners.

Word of the failure of the negotiations spread rapidly through the district. In company circles there was no surprise. Among union leaders there was manifest a strong feeling of indignation against the companies.

THREATS.

Every possible resource of the labor world is to be called on for further prosecution of the strike, it was announced. Virtually every local in the country will be asked to contribute, and leaders of experience in conducting strikes, are to be invited to aid the strikers.

THE ROCK.

The rock that split the negotiations and shattered hopes of peace was the question of recognition of the union.

"In a nutshell the question was whether the union men should go back to work with or without discrimination—the companies refused to do anything but discriminate against members of the union," Mr. Densmore said.

"It means a struggle to the bitter end," said O. N. Hilton, chief of counsel of the Western Federation of Miners.

The employing interest suggested to Mr. Densmore that a secret vote of the men on strike, if properly safeguarded, would show a majority of them in favor of returning to work outside the union fold. The federation men declined to submit the case to such test.

DENTON'S STATEMENT.

"It was simply a case of asking us to burden ourselves with an organization whose history is one of violence," said F. E. Denton of the Copper Range Consolidated Company. "The proposals that reached us were mere subterfuges, did not go to the merits of the question, and sought to force us to recognize indirectly an organization with which we will have nothing to do and have never treated.

"As a matter of fact, we have already settled this strike. The men now working for us are entitled to every possible consideration, and it would have been rank ingratitude for the companies to have promised them our protection and then asked them to labor alongside members of the Western Federation. There is no doubt that constant trouble would have resulted with the men, with all sorts of cases of violence and reprisals. This was a condition which we could not and would not overlook.

"Then, too, anything less than elimination of the Western Federation from the district would have meant that within five years, if not sooner we should have had all the work to do over again. There was no doubt in the minds of any of us that the first work that the federation members left in the mines would do would be to spread a propaganda of discontent, follow it up with a series of unreasonable demands and then start another strike.

"From every consideration of humanity to our loyal employees, of self-respect on our own part and of good, sound business sense, we could do nothing else than decline to be buncoed by such alternative plans as were brought to our attention."

COURT DEFIED BY MILITARY.

Col. Lawton Scouts Order of Oregon Circuit Judge.

Tells Gov. West He Intends to Keep Saloons Closed.

Confiscates All Liquor in Town of Copperfield.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COPPERFIELD (Or.) Jan. 3.—When served today with an injunction issued by Judge Anderson of the Circuit Court at Baker, and which had been sent here for service by telegraph to a special deputy sheriff who had been appointed by telegraph earlier in the day, Col. D. K. Lawton, in charge of Gov. West's crusading force, flouted it.

The injunction sought to restrain Col. Lawton from keeping the saloons of Copperfield closed and from preventing the Mayor and Councilmen of the town from fulfilling their respective functions.

Immediately after defying U. N. Jackson, the special deputy, to enforce the injunction, Col. Lawton telegraphed to Gov. West asking for immediate reinforcements of militia to the number of fifty.

"I don't want Sheriff Rand to come up here from Baker and to put me in jail," said Col. Lawton, "and I am going to have force sufficient to insure against his doing it."

All the saloon keepers under arrest refused today to ship their liquors and fixtures out of town, at the colonel's order and all the stocks were confiscated.

Col. Lawton appointed today a provisional Mayor and Councilmen, but announced that martial law would continue.

Strict censorship on all telegraph and telephone messages was exercised. Not until tonight would Col. Lawton allow press correspondents to file their press dispatches.

GOVERNOR TAKES A HAND.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Jan. 3.—Stating that he is of the opinion that the criminal laws are not being faithfully executed in Baker county, Gov. West wired Circuit Judge Anderson of that county, asking when a hearing can be held looking to the temporary removal of the Sheriff. Miss Fern Hobbs, the Governor's secretary, will act as special counsel for the State at the hearing.

The Governor has ordered Col. Lawton, in command of the troops that hold Copperfield under martial law, to send all liquors and bar fixtures there to Baker, while the mining town is in charge of State soldiers. Railroad officials have been warned by the Governor not to send any liquors into Copperfield while that place is under martial law.

WILL SEND MORE TROOPS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKER (Or.) Jan. 3.—When word reached Baker tonight that Gov. West had been appealed to to send additional troops to Copperfield to prevent Sheriff Rand from carrying out the injunction order of the court, and to prevent him from arresting the military officers at Copperfield for contempt of court, offers from persons who wishes to be deputized to accompany the Sheriff to Copperfield began pouring in. There was talk of obtaining a special train tomorrow and advancing on Copperfield before Gov. West would have time to bring in his additional militia.

Sheriff Rand, however, said there would be plenty of time to organize a posse before the train started Monday from Copperfield.

GOV. WEST'S ADVICE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALEM (Or.) Jan. 3.—"Pay no attention to any injunction or court order," was the message telegraphed tonight by Gov. West to Col. Lawton at Copperfield. "If any attorney tries to harass you, put him in jail," was another of the Governor's orders.

Gov. West said he had told Col. Lawton to bring all his prisoners to Salem if he found such a course advisable.

"Col. Lawton will be given all the reinforcements he needs," declared Gov. West.

OFFICER BANDITS' VICTIM.

Seventh Detroit Patrolman to Be Shot Since Last March Passes Away. Italian Suspects Accused.

Gordon was the seventh Detroit officer to be shot down while on duty since last March. Of this number six officers either were killed outright or died as the result of their injuries.

Soon after the shooting today four Italian suspects were identified by Gordon as the men he encountered.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Presidential and other leading candidates of the Socialist party in 1916 will be named by referendum vote and not by convention. This was determined by a mail referendum just completed and announced today by Walter Langfersiek, executive secretary of the party. The proposition carried by 4 to 1, the executive secretary said.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Robert Linn, 60 years old, a mining promoter, was sentenced today by Judge Mack in the Federal Court to serve six months in the House of Correction and pay a fine of $250 for using the mails to fraudulently represent a mining property he was promoting.

Spectacular.

EL MORO HOTEL FIRE LIGHTS UP THE CITY.

A SPECTACULAR fire, which attracted several thousand spectators from the down-town streets, almost totally destroyed the front portion of the Hotel El Moro, No. 109 South Hill street, last night.

The sixty guests of the house hurriedly packed their belongings and made their escape from the burning building in various states of deshabille. The location of the place, about 150 feet above the level of the sidewalk, made fighting it a difficult matter.

Miss Dorothy Moore, manager of the hotel, first attempted to put out the blaze with an extinguisher, but failing in this, put in the alarm after the fire had gotten well started.

Mrs. I. Bradley, who owns a cafeteria on Sixth street and was a guest of the hotel on the second floor, had just retired with her 11-year-old niece, Merle McClung. Without taking time to put on any clothes or pack any of her belongings, she ran out of the house with her little niece and took refuge in the Emergency Hospital across the way.

The building formerly was the H. H. M. Sale mansion, built in the early 90's by H. M. Sale, a pioneer druggist. It is now owned by W. E. Porter of Hollywood. The damage amounted to about $12,000 and is fully covered by insurance.

LOPEZ HAS ESCAPED, UTAH SHERIFF ADMITS IT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BINGHAM (Utah) Jan. 3.—All hope of finding Ralph Lopez, dead or alive, in the Utah-Apex mine was abandoned suddenly tonight. Sheriff Smith withdrew his searchers from the interior workings and the guards from the portals, leaving the mine unwatched for the first time since November 27.

After killing two deputies in an underground battle on November 29, making six he had killed within eight days, Lopez called to his pursuers that more than six men would have to sacrifice their lives if they expected to capture him. That he had made good his boast by escaping, although no more men were killed, was conceded tonight by his pursuers.

Sheriff Smith said his sudden determination to abandon the search was reached only after he was satisfied Lopez either had escaped or had been crushed to death beneath some cave-in that would prevent his body being found. However, many miners planned to begin a search on their own account tomorrow. A reward of $1000 is offered for Lopez's capture or the recovery of his body.

After the underground battle on November 27, the mine portals were bulkheaded and poisonous gases were generated in the workings in an attempt to asphyxiate Lopez. That he escaped before the fumes became overpowering is the general belief.

"BILLY" ASTOR, AGED SIX, WOULD BE A CARPENTER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Manifesting her interest in the suffragist movement in the United States, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, whose husband is a member of the British Parliament, left New York for London today on board the North German Lloyd line steamship George Washington.

Mrs. Astor was accompanied by her six-year-old son, William, who likes to be called "Billy."

When Mrs. Astor was asked about her son's future, she said:

"He will have to be a bread-winner; all the Astors were."

"I'd like to be a carpenter," interrupted the boy.

Mrs. Astor and her son have been spending a few weeks at the Astor home in Virginia, where the boy has been enjoying himself, chiefly, Mrs. Astor said, in picking apples. Mrs. Astor's sisters, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, and Mrs. Brooks, were at the pier to bid her good-by.

"Billy" said he hoped to see the Giants and White Sox play ball in England on their world tour.

EXPERT PRAISES ROWAN FOWLS.

ANGELENO'S SUCCESS CALLED WONDERFUL FEAT.

Carrying Away Five Prizes in Each of Four Classes for Which He Had Entered Said to Have Been an Unheard of Event in Poultry Annals.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.—"Mr. Rowan clearly deserves the honors," said Charles D. Cleveland, secretary of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association, which has just ended an exhibition in Madison Square Garden, in speaking of the fact that all the prizes for White Face Spanish fowls were won by R. A. Rowan of Los Angeles, Cal. "It was a wonderful collection of birds. Such a large number of such quality is very rare and seldom shown. The eighteen cockerels which comprised a part of the collection in particular are the greatest and finest ever shown here or any where else. The show at Crystal Palace, London, never exhibited such a collection of birds."

Mr. Rowan's collection of fowls is said to be valued at nearly $10,000. They are almost entirely of the "fancy" types.

Five prizes were allotted to Mr. Rowan in each of the four classes of eight Black Spanish variety of fowls which included cocks, hens, cockerels and pullets. Harry M. Stevens, who probably has had more experience with such exhibits in his twenty-two years of service at the garden as catalogue compiler, than any one else, said:

"It was an unheard of event in my experience of such shows. He surely swept the boards. If there had been any more prizes for other classes, Mr. Rowan would probably have captured them also. He should be proud of his collection. No one here ever before saw anything that approached them in beauty and value. I never before heard of any one exhibitor winning all the events."

Mr. Rowan has made the collection of prize fowls a hobby. There were more than 8000 birds of all kinds at the garden during the exhibition, which continued for a week.

Mr. Rowan's fifty White Face Spanish fowls, when the awards were made, strutted about the narrow confines of their cages bedecked with blue, red and white ribbons as tokens to their jealous and chagrined competitors that their superior qualities had been recognized. The collection of prize beauties left today for Baltimore, where they will seek fresh laurels.

BUYERS' TRUST ALLEGED.

Governor of Porto Rico Protests That a Move Is on to Reduce Price Paid to Sugar Planters.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Gov. Yager of Porto Rico has asked the Department of Justice to break up a combination of sugar buyers in New York, which, he asserts, plans to reduce the price paid to Porto Rican sugar planters.

Porto Rican sugar comes into the United States duty free. Cuban sugar, competing with Porto Rican, pays various rates of duty, according to grade. On March 1, the duty on Cuban sugars, under a provision in the new tariff act, will be reduced on standard grade about 33 cents a 100 pounds. The price for Porto Rican sugar has been based largely on the Cuban duty, and Gov. Yager says that instead of waiting until March 1, the New York buyers have announced that they will pay prices for the Porto Rican article based on the lower Cuban duty beginning February 1, gaining a full month's advantage thereby.

Although no decision has been reached, it is not probable that the department will prosecute the buyers.

Do Clams Think?

does it dimly realize its own struggle for survival?

Does animal behavior offer to the evolutionist a tangible means of understanding human individuality?

To answer these questions, Dr. William E. Ritter, noted zoologist of the University of California, has determined, after twenty years of research in sea life, to devote his life to their study. He will carry on his investigations at the Institution for Biological Research at La Jolla, near San Diego, of which he is director.

No more profound a scientific study has ever been undertaken in an American university, it is said. The inquiry touches the great problem of the development of human personality.

Dr. Ritter believes that the ultimate fundamental law of life is unknown; that life probably arose in the sea, and that the most primitive life forms, abounding together with highly specialized forms, offer the one source of tracing the growth of habit into consciousness and so on up through the evolutionary scale to man's intellect.

"To learn more than we know about the laws that prevail in the wealth of life of the great oceans seems to me an object of great importance for the highest welfare of mankind," Dr. Ritter said. "We must learn, for one thing, whether the infinite hosts of animate creatures that dwell in the sea live their lives in an orderly way—whether law or anarchy prevails among them.

"We must consider questions as to how the 'small fry,' constituting the ocean's free living population, is related to its environment. Organisms are yet passive and plastic to the forces of their environment our studies indicate."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The placing of beef on the tariff free list has resulted in a vast increase in the importation of foreign beef and meat products. During October and November, the Department of Agriculture reported today, 18,000,000 pounds of beef and its products were brought from abroad. This is more than the amount imported for the whole of 1912.

The foreign beef and meat products are being rigidly inspected by agents of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who, during the two months, condemned 18,100 pounds.

Nearly half of the imports, or ,000 pounds, came from Canada; Argentina supplied 6,000,000 pounds, Australia 3,000,000 and Uruguay

During the two months 200,000 head of cattle from Canada and Mexico were imported.

EXPECTATIONS.

Treasury officials were inclined to believe tonight that the Underwood tariff act will produce several millions more revenue annually than had been estimated by tariff experts. The treasury expected to see customs fall off about $45,000,000 a year, but reports for the first two months under the new law have led to the belief that this estimate is excessive.

Some officials predicted the falling off would not amount to more than ,000,000 a year, which would give the government $9,000,000 more than counted upon for 1914. Customs receipts fell off more than $4,000,000 during November, but for December figures just out show the decrease from December, 1912, was only about Although Christmas business may account for the increase in December this year it was pointed out the normal decrease from now on will run about $3,000,000 monthly. The total treasury disbursements for December amounted to $61,894,- compared with $62,698,269 for December, 1912, but the total excess of disbursements over receipts in December was nearly $2,000,000 greater than in November.

The net balance in the treasury general fund on December 31 was $11,- and the grand total of assets in the treasury $2,088,864,977.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Eyesight Can Be Strengthened and Most Forms of Diseased Eyes Successfully Treated Without Cutting or Drugging.

That the eyes can be strengthened so that eye-glasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been proven beyond a doubt by the testimony of hundreds of people who publicly claim that their eyesight has been restored by that wonderful little instrument called "Actina." "Actina" also relieves Sore and Granulated Lids, Iritis, Cataracts, etc., without cutting or drugging. Over 100,000 "Actinas" have been sold; therefore, the Actina treatment is not an experiment, but is reliable. The following letters are but samples of hundreds we receive:

Mr. M. M. Moyer, 1170 E. 20th St., Oakland, Cal., writes: "My wife suffered excruciating pain in one of her eyes. The use of the 'Actina' completely removed this. Granulated lids cannot exist where 'Actina' is used."

Augustina L. Vietz, 429 Commerce St., Stockton, Cal., writes: "I think 'Actina' a fine instrument, invaluable in the household. It strengthens the eyes and acts as a tonic and a massage."

The combination which the department will prosecute, if sufficient evidence is forthcoming, will be among the commission merchants.

Alveolar Dentistry

Class "A" Dentistry

at Half Price

(Until further notice.)

While our charges for Alveolar work are the same as the standard price of high-class bridgework, in such cases where it is possible to have bridge-work and the patient desires it for any reason, we will put in for him the very best and classiest bridgework, crowns, plates, etc., possible to be made, at exactly one-half the price charged by dentists whose work will compare favorably with ours. "And there is a reason."

Alveolar Teeth, Where Bridgework is Impossible.

If only your front teeth are left, say three or four or more, we can replace all of those that have been lost on both sides clear back with perfect Alveolar teeth, whilst bridgework would be impossible even if you had eight or ten front teeth to tie to. If you have only two back teeth on each side, any molars, we can supply all the front teeth that are missing with beautiful, serviceable, lifelike Alveolar teeth. This could not possibly be done by the bridge route. And where bridgework is possible there is no comparison between the two. A very large percentage of our work is taking out bridgework put in by supposedly high-class dentists, and replacing it with the beautiful and artistic Alveolar Teeth. And, unlike bridgework in another respect, it is practically painless. No boring or cutting into the gums, nothing to be dreaded. Now, then, prices being equal, which would you choose?

We have samples in our office to show at all times. Examinations and booklets on Alveolar dentistry are absolutely free.

Remember that in addition to our specialty, Alveolar Dentistry and treating Pyorrhea (loose teeth,) we are experts in every branch of dentistry from the simple filling up.

the Southern Pacific Railway lands purchased by the Imperial Valley Farm Lands Association are placed on the market.

OPENING
VAST 45,000 ACRE EMPIRE
S.P. IMPERIAL VALLEY LANDS

The subdivision of these lands in small tracts is one of the most important land deals ever consummated in Southern California. They embrace the last cheap lands that will ever come under the Imperial Valley irrigation system.

A region of unparalleled fertility—near the markets—in the midst of the biggest and cheapest irrigation system in the world. Lands that grow highly profitable crops with tropical luxuriance, and mature them for market six weeks earlier than any other part of the United States.

Imperial Valley has been transformed in 12 years from a desert waste to the most productive spot in America—with a $60,000,000 property valuation. The opening of these S. P. lands marks the dawn of Imperial Valley's real intense development and value enhancement.

The first division of 5000 acres of these lands is now on the market — and the remainder will be ready within a few days. These 5000 acres are already surrounded by growing crops. A few of the choicest sections have been divided into tracts of from 5 to 40 acres. Other tracts from 40 to 160 acres and up.

Applications for these lands have been enormous—and those desiring to purchase are advised to make selection early.

Low Opening Prices
$60 to $120 per Acre
Terms one-fifth cash—balance, 1, 2, 3, and 4 years 7%.

INCARNATION OF WICKEDNESS.

Mantell Vividly Portrays Shakespeare's Monster.

Likes Richard Least of All, but Accepts Him.

Fine Performance Marred by One Imperfection.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK

Robert B. Mantell, grand in the traditional idea, superb in emphasis and perfect in enunciation, limits an otherwise magnificent presentation of Richard III by an inadequate widow of Edward of Wales.

How else are we to know the deep offense of the monster Duke of Gloucester in stopping a funeral cortege to make love to the widow of his murdered husband, if she be incapable of fury and scorn?

Failing in the right resentment of the outrage, the part falls flat and one of the most daring, not to say startling, of Shakespeare's conceptions is enfeebled beyond relief.

Perhaps Shakespeare never enjoyed writing "Richard III" any more than a saint relishes the idea of the devil. The landlord of a vast estate might in precisely the same fashion and with as much good taste regret his stables and the humbler quarters of the servants.

It happens that this is not an ideal world, or at least that its ideality is not realized by everybody with the luck or misfortune to be born upon a particular handful of dust. Shakespeare recognizes the faults of the planet in "Richard III." He employs that deformed churl as a symbol of a class of persons who must be punished if they cannot be palliated and reckoned with if never justified. Shakespeare here treats with his mistaken children as a pitying father with a perverse son whom he loves but cannot help. It may be that in this fashion a Higher Father looks with infinite love on the erring of the earth, yet suffers the sun to smile upon them and rain to fall upon the fields of just and unjust.

Shakespeare would have been incomplete without this tragic and macabre creature, nor would Mantell be a true disciple of his master did he not play this vivid and wicked incarnation.

In nothing is Mantell's genius and versatility more finely illustrated. Nothing short of greatness could swing from the universalism of Hamlet or the sublime pathos of Lear to the bitter venom of Richard with such consummate appreciation. Mantell offers in this role an impersonation of hate and ugliness to make the flesh creep. It is not a pleasant play. One regards it as the farewell offering of an age so magnificent. Nevertheless, it has its place with Shakespeare and the world, and we should all be such men in the ranks of life as not to shrink from the bitter-sweet of its lessons.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

Manager of State Bureau Says Employers Are Rallying to Support of New Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The State Industrial Accident Commission announced today the appointment of heads of the various departments concerned with the operation of the new Boynston Compensation, Insurance and Safety Law.

Dr. Morton R. Gibbons was appointed medical director; C. W. Fellows, manager of the insurance department; Chris M. Bradley, attorney, and John R. Brownell, superintendent of safety.

With the exception of Brownell, whose home has been at Steelton, Pa., all of the appointees are residents of San Francisco.

Figures compiled late today by the insurance department show that since the first of the month, when the Boynston law became effective, $150,000 has been paid in premiums, representing an aggregate of $15,000,000 in pay-rolls.

Manager Fellows said the rush of employers to insure against accidents to their employees had been far greater than expected. "The success of this department," he continued, "is assured. The amount of business in sight indicates that we can operate the department within the 20 per cent. usually paid by insurance companies to agencies. The policyholders therefore will be getting their insurance after the first year virtually at the cost of the work."

STRIKERS STONE FIREMEN.

Unionists Assault Party Being Taken to Tacoma Smelter in an Automobile.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Jan. 3.—Stones and pistols are reported to have greeted a party of firemen who were being taken in an automobile to the smelter here last night. The machine was met with a volley of stones, and, as it neared the plant, the headlights were shot out and the tires punctured with bullets. The machine went at full speed through the pickets, one of whom, an Austrian, is reported to have been run down and badly injured. Strike leaders today denied the machine was fired upon.

The strike committee issued a statement, saying offers of assistance from Industrial Workers of the World had been received. They said that Joe Ettor, prominent in the strike at the mills in Lawrence, Mass., was told that the strikers at the smelter could handle their own affairs.

Although the smelter appears to be shut down, Manager Rust said the company is operating part of the plant.

GEM IMPORTS BREAK RECORDS.

Receipts of New York for the Past Year Valued at Forty-six Million Dollars.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Diamonds and other gems valued at $46,137,328 were received here from foreign markets in 1913, according to figures compiled by William B. Treadwell, jewelry examiner at the customs appraisers' stores. According to Treadwell the gem imports in 1913 broke all records.

The figures for 1913 are said to be due in part to the desire of importers to get in large quantities of gems before the higher duty becomes effective.

LESLIE KENYON DIES.

Popular Impersonator of Stage Englishmen Succumbs to a Stroke of Apoplexy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Leslie Kenyon, the popular impersonator of stage Englishmen, died yesterday in Miss Allstone's Sanatorium. He was taken there on Tuesday, following a stroke of apoplexy.

Kenyon was born in England fifty-four years ago, and for the last fifteen years has been acting in this country. He came here to play in "The Sins of Society" at the Broadway. He was rehearsing before his illness for Charles Frohman's forthcoming production of "The Laughing Husband."

He played recently in "The Woman Haters" and was playing in vaudeville theaters with Bayes and Norworth last summer. He acted with Wallace Eddinger in "The Only Son."

The first stage appearance of Kenyon was in England and he acted with Sir Charles Wyndham at the Criterion Theater for some years. He was in the original cast of "The Liars."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—According to an advance report issued yesterday by the New York Chamber of Commerce, the total foreign trade of this port in 1914 reached the $2,000,000,000 mark for the first time in its existence. The total value of its foreign trade for the year just past is $2,149,265,622, as against $1,915,644,233 in 1912, an increase of $223,621,389. This is 47.08 per cent. of the value of the total foreign commerce of the United States, given for 1913 as $4,544,157,797, or $468,364,722 more than last year.

The percentages of gain in foreign commerce of all other American ports and of New York for 1913 are given as respectively 10.19 and 10.45, making an average of approximately 10.30 per cent. for the United States.

Motion Picture Cowboys at a Loss to Replace Stolen Wild West Articles.

Stanley and Bob Lester, moving-picture cowboys employed by the Selig Polyscope Company in the animal farm pictures at Eastlake Park, are minus their equipment. No more thrilling pictures will depict them until they have replenished a portion of their "properties" box.

They reported to the police last night that their room at the Madison Hotel, No. 631½ South Main street, had been despoiled of a revolver, cartridge belt, mand-carved revolver and knife holsters, kodak, white riding gloves, riding boots and spurs.

They gave the police the name, with five aliases, of a young man who left the hotel suddenly yesterday noon. They charge that this young man showed some of the stolen goods to a young woman in the hotel before departing.

EASTERLY GALE IN NEW JERSEY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) Jan. 3.—For the second time within a fortnight, the Southern New Jersey coast is being lashed by an easterly gale that is sending the tide high on the beaches and causing damage at several points between here and Cape May. Atlantic City thus far has not suffered much damage.

At Ocean City several houses were undermined. George Mulford, a member of the Federal coast guard, stationed there, died suddenly of heart disease while assisting in the removal of household goods.

LASHED BY WIND AND WAVE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEABRIGHT (N. J.) Jan. 3.—This village, not yet normal after the disastrous storm of Christmas Eve, was lashed by wind and wave again today. The bulkheading replaced after the recent storm was swept away by the high tide and strong wind during the night, and at daybreak the wind was still in the east and the sea was inundating all buildings along the shore line. The worst damage was at the Octagon Hotel, where the seas tore away piling and wrecked the dining-room wing of the structure. In the fishing section of the village buildings were undermined and toppled over.

Emergency squads of workers were doing everything in their power to erect barriers to meet the sea at high tide at noon.

Later the sea broke through the bulkheading and swept away parts of the railroad tracks, stopping all traffic. A big gang of men faught to save the railroad embankment, but the sea beat them back and washed through, tearing the sand from under the rails and opening a gap which cannot be filled until the storm subsides.

At the same time the sea tore under the Octagon Hotel, which seemed doomed. Everything that could be moved was carried away. The whole front seemed to collapse. The hotel is valued at $150,000.

At 2 o'clock the wind registered sixty-one miles an hour and was rising. Atlantic City sent word that a ninety-mile gale might be looked for.

The Octagon Hotel pier, which had stood the batterings of the sea for twenty-five years, was torn out and the piling was hurled like a battering ram against the hotel front. The bath-houses were smashed to matchwood. On a level piece of sand in the shelter of a house just out of reach of the waves a group of women knelt in prayer with the spray dashing over them. They prayed that the sea might be calmed.

Twelve hundred feet of the bulkheading directly in front of Seabright appeared to be torn out.

STORM DELAYS TRANSPORT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) Jan. 3.—A high gale was kicking up such a sea outside the Delaware Capes today that the commander of the transport Hancock decided to postpone his departure from the Philadelphia navy yard for Culebra, Porto Rico, with the first advance regiment of the Marine Corps, until tomorrow morning. Wind was blowing fifty miles an hour on the coast this afternoon.

Besides the 800 marines, the Hancock is taking a large quantity of ammunition, twelve field guns and sixty mines.

OCEAN SWELLS IN THEIR YARDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAPE MAY (N. J.) Jan. 3.—The heavy northeast gale which prevailed here all day caused high water to wash out the trolley lines at Sewell's Point and at Cape May Point. At Cape May City the tide cut across the Ocean Front boulevard and into the front yards of some cottages.

LIGHTSHIP GOES ADRIFT.

Vessel Stationed at Umatilla Reef Off Coast of Oregon Gets Into Port Angeles.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 3.—Before the fury of an eighty-mile gale which swept the Oregon Coast last night and today, relief lightship No. 92, stationed temporarily at Umatilla Reef, broke adrift. She made port at Port Angeles, Wash. A big gas-light and whistling buoy stationed off the Columbia River also is gone.

A large fleet of vessels are bar-bound at Astoria.

ALLEGED BURGLARS NABBED.

W. M. Campbell, a negro, of No. 1626 East Twenty-second street, and Bert Burton, an expressman of No. 2007 East Thirty-seventh street, were arrested last night by Private Detective De Motte on charges of burglarizing the shop of H. A. Landwehr, a cement contractor, at Thirtythird street and Long Beach avenue a few days ago. The robbers broke into the place and despoiled machinery and tools of their valuable parts. They sold the loot to the United Casting Company, Wilson and Violet streets, for $12. It was valued at over $1400, according to the police. The men are held at the City Jail.

An Unfailing Remedy For Coughs and Colds

Make It Yourself.

Add 1½ oz. Balm of Gilead buds to 1 pint of Duffy's pure malt whiskey; let it stand 48 hours and strain. To this add 1 lb. bruised Rock Candy, which will slowly dissolve.

This remedy is invaluable as an assuager for all troubles along the course of the air passages—including throat affections, bronchitis, asthma, and all deep seated coughs and solds. Increase the dose gradually from a teaspoonful every hour to a tablespoonful every hour, or if the condition is acute, take every half hour until decided relief is felt.

MAY ABANDON THE WHARF.

Experts Declare That El Segundo Cannot Be Made Safe Without Construction of a Breakwater.

REDONDO BEACH, Jan. 3.—It is the opinion of those acquainted with marine conditions here and with the coast that the El Segundo wharf cannot be rebuilt to withstand the big ground swells at that point and that the Standard Oil Company will probably resort to the system of pumping their shipments from wharf No. 1 here to the refinery at El Segundo. This was neither confirmed nor denied by the officials at El Segundo, but the plan is said by many to be feasible as a pipe line is now laid from the wharf to the refinery and the company also has the power for the pumping. No work of repairing damage to the long wharf at El Segundo has been attempted as yet, as it has not been considered safe by Superintendent F. J. Faber for the men to work on the weakened pier. Faber said tonight that the matter of rebuilding the wharf will be settled within a few days by the directors.

The city of Redondo Beach has made overtures to the Pacific Electric Company to secure a price on the wharf or to secure it from the company for a municipal pleasure wharf, and the officials of the railroad company appeared to favor the idea. For this reason it is not unreasonable to suppose the wharf might be purchased by the oil company for loading purposes.

NEWS BRIEFS.

While ont on his own recognizance on the charge of drawing a dirk on an officer, waiting his trial in Superior Court next Wednesday, L. T. Happe, a resident of Manhattan Beach, was again arrested last night by Deputy Constable Moeser at Compton on the charge of stealing thirteen bales of hay. Happe, MacHughson and Walter Matthews are alleged to have taken the hay from the property of Councilman W. H. Jones of Manhattan Beach. Their preliminary hearing was set today by Judge L. F. Wells for next Thursday. Happe is alleged to have resisted Constable Moeser November 24, when the latter went to Happe's home to make an attachment on a wagon for debt. Happe was held on $1000 bail, but owing to the influence of Manhattan residents was released on his own recognizance. Happe's appearance in court for various offenses has been so frequent in the past few years it is nearly habitual.

Capt. Reiner, master of the Willamette, the ship attacked by pirates, is well known here where he has been coming for many years. Capt. F. H. Walters, master of the wharves here, says Reiner is one of the bravest men along the coast. He holds a medal of the Legion of Honor presented to him by the government fifteen years ago for saving the lives of the passengers on a steam schooner at Eureka that was wrecked.

Truck Manufacturers Make Good Impression on Anaheim Committee of Business Men.

ANAHEIM, Jan. 3.—The committee composed of Messrs. A. A. Mills, Herman Noll and Louis Bushard, appointed by the Board of Trade for the purpose of investigating the assets of the Hydraulic Motor Truck Company, reported favorably at the special meeting of the board last evening. Convinced of the substantial rating of the concern after examining the company's books and contracts thoroughly, the committee expressed an opinion that the proposition presented by the company, relative to the establishment of a factory for the purpose of manufacturing the motor truck in Anaheim, was worthy of further consideration.

W. E. Barnes of Los Angeles, president of the Hydraulic Motor Truck Company, was present and stated that the company would have one of their trucks in Anaheim for demonstration purposes all day Monday. In view of this, the board adjourned until Monday evening, when the enterprise will probably receive endorsement.

LAYING GAS MAINS.

Construction work of laying gas mains from the oil fields to connect with the distributing systems of Anaheim, Fullerton and Placentia, is progressing rapidly and the Southern Counties Gas Company plan to have the gas ready for delivery early in February. This project is of great significance to the gas consumers in Orange country, inasmuch as the rate for the natural gas will be greatly reduced from the present rate of the manufactured article, which is not nearly so great in heat and lighting energy. When interviewed by a Times representative, Mr. S. W. Todd, manager of the Southern Counties Gas Company stated that, although the amount of gas contracted for from the three oil companies was greatly in excess of the amount needed to meet the demand, it is expected that the new rate of 75 cents per 1000 feet will increase the consumption.

It is also true that the supply of one or more wells may decrease in flow at any time and without the excess supply, the company would be seriously inconvenienced, if not crippled. Although Mr. Todd hesitated in making any definite statement with regard to the exact date of turning the gas into the mains, he said it would not be later than March, at which time natural gas in quantities to suit any and all demands will be pouring through the Southern Counties Gas Company's mains, and it will make the beginning of a large commercial expansion in the surrounding vicinity.

FEAR FURTHER DAMAGE.

EL SEGUNDO, Jan. 3.—The workmen of the Standard Oil Company's wharf have been engaged today in pulling out the floating wreckage from the oil company's wharf away from the Los Angeles outlet sewage wharf at Hyperion to save that wharf from threatened damage by the loosened pilings. No further damage has resulted to the Standard Oil pier since Thursday. The highest tides of the year will be January 21 and 22, and it is feared that further damage may be done then to the weakened wharf.

Prominent Angelenos Visit New Motor Ship.

Revolutionizing Vessel Is Center of Interest.

Simplicity of Operation Is Subject for Comment.

For the first time in their experience prominent oil men and financiers of the city yesterday were introduced to the mysteries of the Diesel engine, which is expected to revolutionize the industry, in which they are all more or less interested, as well as the shipping trade. The scene for the unfolding of this little drama was the motor ship Siam on the placid waters of the outer Los Angeles Harbor.

The host of the occasion was Capt. H. J. Hansen, who was assisted by Otto Jelstrup, San Francisco agent for the East Asiatic Company, Ltd., which owns the Siam, and F. F. Brown, manager of Parrott & Co. These men were ably aided in making the affair a success by Andrew Weir, R. Tilden Smith and Capt. John Barneson of the Central Petroleum Company, who, by virtue of their acquaintance with the new Diesel motor in its relation to the future of the shipping trade, did much toward explaining the significance of the motor to interested auditors.

About 100 persons were in the party which left the Pacific Electric station in private cars in the morning. They arrived at the outer harbor at about noon and were then taken out in the tug Warrior to the Siam, which lay moored near the breakwater.

Following their arrival on board, the first hour or two was taken up with a general examination of the huge mechanism of the vessel. The comparative simplicity of its structure and operation received special comment, as well as the general cleanliness of the equipment, as compared with that in a coal-burning ship. During the progress of the inspection of the ship lunch was also served in the messroom and on the decks.

PROPELLING WONDERS.

After lunch the visitors were allowed to enjoy themselves as they would, roaming about the big ship and delving into the wonders of the new propelling power. Then gradually a stir came over the crowd. It was time for the vessel to move. From her depths came rumblings, which indicated that she was preparing to start.

All rushed to the entrance to the motor-room and crowded down the stairs toward the awakening monster of power. The rumbling increased and suddenly joining with this was audible the hiss of the air as it rushed into the cylinders.

A quiver ran through the vessel, the sound reached a crescendo and then suddenly died down to the steady purr of wheels and cranks, as familiar as the sound of a muffled automobile engine, and the vessel was in motion.

Smoothly she made her way into the inner harbor, up to the turning basin, and there, without difficulty or hesitation, swung around until she faced the open sea. Then quietly she headed to the East San Pedro dock and landed her passengers.

The trip, although very brief, was the first on the new type of vessel for the oil men, and its significance will probably not soon be forgotten.

The day was ideal. The pall of a high fog hung over the sea with just a glimpse or so of the sun during the day. There was practically no breeze.

Besides oil men and financiers, several women also indirectly interested in Diesel engines and their significance, were guests of honor on board the Siam. They were Mrs. Tilden Smith, Mrs. Loring N. Farnum, Miss Muriel E. Barneson, Mrs. James Bunting and Mrs. D. E. Parrish. They found much to interest them on board and were active in their inspection of the modus operandi of the new engine.

WHO WERE THERE.

Among those who visited the Siam were the following: Lyman Stewart, president of the Union Oil Company; W. L. Stewart, vice-president of the same concern; William R. Staats, director of the Union; J. C. Drake, J. S. Torrance, Arthur W. Kinney, Frank Wiggins, L. P. St. Clair, W. B. Robb, T. A. O'Donnell, Chester W. Brown, W. W. Orcutt, John Llewellyn, M. J. Connell, W. K. Thompson, L. N. Farnum, Gregory Perkins, Jr., Herbert G. Wylie, Lewis E. Spear, F. L. Maynard, W. B. Scott, W. E. Howard, H. Logan, John R. Brown, Walter Taylor, J. H. Wilcox, Walter Calvert Fertig, V. A. Martin, John E. Jardine, W. A. Brackenridge, Bendix Nelson, Olaf von Werneck, D. E. Parrish, H. Z. Osborne, J. S. Muir Simpson, Edward Double, E. I. Dyer, W. M. Martin, Matthew Bridge, A. B. Rogers, C. H. McLaurin, Alexander Nicolson, Frank Simpson, Edward Germain, A. L. Stetson, D. P. N. Little, H. G. Miller, R. S. Campbell, Lucius K. Chase, William R. Spindrup, L. A. Hoskins, Max Lowenthal, E. T. Earl, James C. Sorensen, H. F. Anderson, Constan Jensen, Thorwald von Werneck, F. H. Little, John Gaffey, James Sentous, William Hunter, Adolf Sprehn, E. T. Soderastrom and Edward J. Leach.

On her run to San Francisco the Siam will make a test of California oil, which, it is undoubted, will prove highly satisfactory as fuel for the new vessel. California petroleum contains only a very slight percentage of sulphur—far less than oil from most of the other fields, and for this reason should prove exceedingly efficient.

The greater the knowledge gained concerning the Diesel engine in its application on marine craft, the greater does its significance appear in relation to the oil industry of California. The world at large is becoming more and more cognizant of the fact that oil is the fuel of the future. In nearly every respect it is more satisfactory than coal. The ease with which it can be handled and its low cost and efficiency are only a few among its many important advantages.

The men who are now interested in the projected converting of ships into oil burners of the Diesel type are anxious to secure a sufficient supply of petroleum before they do so. Their representatives are very optimistic concerning this phase of the outlook.

COAL NEARLY GONE.

"Some years ago we were told that the time was not far distant when the world's supply of coal would be exhausted," said Weir. "Since then, however, we have opened up new coal fields, and the prediction has failed to come true. It will be the same with oil. Development will solve the problem of supply."

Although California will be the fulcrum upon which the projects of Weir, Smith and their associates will be based, it is not unlikely that their activities will extend to other sections of the world. One of the important projects contemplated in this connection is the establishment of fuel oil stations in various sections of the world, similar to the coaling stations now in existence.

Indiactions are that many of the projects which are now only visualized will be brought into actual application by the time the Panama Canal is opened. The connections of Weir and Smith are known to be among the most influential in foreign countries. Many shipping firms whose names have not been mentioned directly in connection with the Western Ocean Syndicate are deeply interested in the movement toward the long-awaited era of oil which the syndicate is furthering. They, too, will later probably actively join in the movement.

ANNOUNCEMENT DELIGHTS.

Ocean Park Business Men Pleased That Fraser Has Declared Intention of Building Two Structures.

OCEAN PARK, Jan. 3.—Ocean front property owners who have been awaiting the beginning of rebuilding by A. R. Fraser, rejoice over the announcement by Fraser that two large buildings will be erected on the ocean property west of the walk immediately. The Ocean Park builder will apply to the City Council Monday for permits to erect two brick and concrete structures between Marine street and the entrance to the Fraser pier, work to begin as soon as the permit is issued. The contracts have already been let.

The building to face on the promenade will be sixty feet in depth by 110 feet front. The two-story structure to be erected in the rear of this will be 50x110 feet. The buildings will be ornate in design, and will be completed for the summer season. The Breakers' Club has leased the second story of the west building. There is a great demand for the storerooms on the front. Many more ocean front buildings will follow the beginning of work on Fraser's buildings.

MANHATTAN BEACH.

MANHATTAN BEACH, Jan. 3.—The bond issue of $111,000 issued by the city of Manhattan Beach for a water system has been sold at a premium of $572 to the firm of Perrin, Drake and Riley of Los Angeles. The purchase price and the accrued interest to be paid by the bond company will amount to $114,000. The bids for the contract for the system will be opened in two weeks and it is probable that work on it will be begun within thirty days. Frank A. Lathrop has been retained as the hydraulic engineer by the city and will have charge of the work. It is planned to build a system to supply 24,000 people.

The contract for the Highland avenue improvement of $84,000 will be awarded tonight by the City Council. The street will be paved with a concrete base and warrenite wearing surface. The street is to be paved the entire length of the town.

THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

Excited a Suggestion in the Mother's Mind That Sent Her Scurrying Home to Rescue Her Child.

[Indianapolis Star:] The woman's perturbation was pitiable.

"I must do something!" she insisted.

"Sit down," suggested the great detective.

She did so, seeming relieved, and immediately murmuring, as she looked at the remarkable man in wonder, "I never thought of that."

"But you came to see me about something," said the great detective.

She started.

"You know everything, don't you?" she whispered.

The great detective blushed over the length and breadth of his manly features, for she had unwittingly put the truth very baldly, and the woman (an English woman he deduced from the fact that this was all happening in London) continued:

"You are right. It is about my baby. I left the house at 2 o'clock this afternoon, after giving him his medicine and fastening all the doors and windows so that my darling might be perfectly safe, and at 4 o'clock, while I was shopping, I remembered that instead of bay [illegible] I had given the child a dose of benzine. I rushed back, but the child had disappeared. No one could have entered the house, and the baby is almost too young to go out by itself. He is only 4 months old."

"Benzine, eh?" mused the great detective.

"Yes," she replied impatiently, "but that's a mere detail."

"Don't be too sure," said the great detective. "Isn't it just possible that the child swallowed a lighted [illegible] and—"

But with a cry of annoyance the woman was bounding downstairs on her way home to count the matches.

TRAGEDY AND GAYETY.

A Mingling of Serious Events at the White House During the Past Century.

[Leslie's Weekly:] Between [illegible] and 1844 the White House saw a greater mingling of tragedy and gayety than it ever did in any equal interval before or since. William Henry Harrison, Tyler's immediate predecessor, died when only a month in office, and Tyler served out the remainder of the term. Mrs. [illegible] Tyler died a few months after her youngest daughter, Elizabeth, was married to William Waller of Virginia. This was on September [illegible] 1842. In February, 1844, a great gun burst while exhibiting it in a [illegible] down the Potomac, in the midst of a brilliant company, among whom were Tyler, many members of Congress and of the Cabinet and other distinguished guests. About forty persons were killed or injured. Among the killed was the father of Miss Gardiner, who soon afterward became Tyler's second wife. Although married while her husband was in the White House, the second Mrs. Tyler had her wedding at her home in New York, but she held her reception in the Executive mansion. She became popular in Washington society and undoubtedly strengthened the social side of her husband's administration.

The largest social event in the White House in the dozen years immediately succeeding the Civil War was the marriage of Miss [illegible] Grant, daughter of Gen. Grant, to Algernon Sartoris, on May 21, [illegible]. It was the only wedding which the Executive mansion had seen since the Tylers stepped down, and was performed in the east room. "Never before has the east room presented so brilliant a display as on the present occasion," said one report of the affair. Sartoris was an Englishman, and the wedding received more space in the leading British newspapers than any previous American social function had attracted.

PRESENT LEGAL STATUS OF TIDE LAND TITLES.

New Light—A Review of the Supreme Court Decision, Showing Where Judge Bordwell Was Sustained and Reversed—Title of the Southern Pacific Company to Valuable Lands Sustained.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

THE tide lands, the titles to which were involved in the several cases recently decided by the Supreme Court, were purchased from the State of California under the general laws; and in all cases, except one, the applications to purchase were made subsequent to the adoption of the Constitution of 1879. The suits to determine the rights of the holders of patents from the State for the tide lands in question were suits to quiet title brought in the name of the people of the State on the relation of the Attorney-General; and the first suits were filed in the Superior Court of Los Angeles county on October 13, 1908. There were nine suits in all, and they were tried together before Judge Bordwell, late in 1910; and he rendered judgments in favor of the State's contention entered in each case on February 26, 1911, to the effect that all patents and certificates of purchase for tide lands (and swamp lands in one case) involved in the several cases were wholly void, and conveyed no title, for the reason that all tide lands were secured and held by the State in her sovereign capacity in trust forever for all the people for navigation and fisheries, and could not be alienated or sold into private ownership.

And, further, if the State could sell any interest in such lands, the laws of the State, enacted at different sessions of the Legislature during the last fifty years, were not intended to, nor were they adequate to authorize the sale of tide lands. He further held that as certain of the lands were within two miles of the city of Wilmington, incorporated by special act in 1872, and not repealed until 1887, and the city of San Pedro, incorporated March 1, 1888, such lands were withdrawn from sale (if any power to sell existed) by force of Article XV of the Constitution of 1879.

These were the main points of law upon which he based his decisions, from which it will be seen he was of the opinion that the State could not sell her tide lands, notwithstanding it had been previously decided by the Supreme Court, in the Oakland waterfront case, that she could; and did, by the act of 1852, convey to the city of Oakland all tide lands adjacent to the uplands of that city, as it then existed, as well as in other cases by special acts. But he attempted to distinguish these grants on the ground that they were done by special acts, and not alienated under general laws.

THE TWO-MILE LIMIT.

These cases were appealed from Judge Bordwell's decision to the Supreme Court of this State, and were exhaustively briefed on both sides, and were twice orally argued at Los Angeles—first at the April term in 1912 and again at the April term in 1913. The Supreme Court overruled Judge Bordwell and his two main points, and distinctly held that the State could and did sell the tide lands in question, outside of the two-mile limit, and that the laws were devised and adequate for that purpose. It sustained him as to all the lands that were within two miles limit of Wilmington, or San Pedro; but, that as to these tide lands, including the swamp land within and affected by the inhibited zone, they had been acquired from the State by adverse possession by a lumber company, who used the land thus occupied for a lumber yard for ten years prior to the commencement of the suit. So the judgments affecting the tide lands outside of the two-mile limit, as well as the tide land and swamp land within that limit acquired by adverse possession for ten years, were reversed and sent back to the trial court for further proceedings; and the judgments affecting the few pieces lying inside the above mentioned limit, and not acquired by adverse possession, were affirmed, not because the State has no inherent power to sell such lands, but on account of the prohibition against the sale of such lands within two miles of an incorporated city or town, found in the Constitution, Article XV.

The Supreme Court holds that tide lands, though they may be sold, can only be sold subject to a trust or easement for navigation and fishery. All the judges of that court agree on this qualification, but differ as to its character and extent. Judges Shaw, [illegible] and Sloss seem to think that the grantee under a tide-land patent takes the bare legal title only and that the State at any time may resume his land for the public uses whenever the State may see fit to do so. While the remainder of the court—namely, Chief Justice Beatty, Judges Henshaw, Melvin and Lorigan—constituting a majority of the court, are of the opinion that this easement or reservation for navigation or fishery can only be exercised by the State by eminent domain proceedings, in which the patentee or his successor would be entitled to compensation for the land and improvements taken by the State for public use; and that in the meantime the owner of the land may use and improve it as he may see fit, subject only to the restriction that he must not erect his structures or fill in, etc., so as to interfere with navigation or fishing in the natural or constructed navigable channels.

ACCESS TO WATER FRONT.

Tide lands may, for illustration, be filled in and subdivided in the same manner as the water front of San Francisco has been. All the justices, however, seem to be a unit as to reservations for rights of way for access to the water front since 1879, as declared in the Constitution, Article XV before referred to. Judge Bordwell also held that if tide lands could be granted by the State this could only be done where the land could be used for agricultural purposes. This the Supreme Court holds [illegible] him.

These rulings of the Supreme Court for the first time definitely establish the power of the State to pass into private ownership all tide lands under general laws that are not especially withdrawn from sale by the Constitution, as in Article XV of the Constitution; and also that the general laws heretofore existing were adequate to exercise that power and authorize qualified persons to purchase such lands from the State.

The question of the extent of the easement for navigation and fishery will only be determined when a case is presented involving an attempt of the State or its agents to locate and use such easement on some parcel of tide land that has passed into private ownership. It is questionable whether the so-called easement or trust arose in these cases, as the State claimed that the tide-land owners had no [illegible] to the tide lands granted them, or their predecessors; but however this may be, it will require a concrete case in the Supreme Court to fully settle this question, which has, since the Supreme Court's action, caused so much comment.

The reversal of Judge Bordwell makes the title of the Southern Pacific valid covering two tide-land patents involving the yards between Fourth street and the outer harbor, which the city of Los Angeles seeks to condemn for a boulevard, and also two patents held by the Bannings covering the Mormon Island reclamation project and most of the frontage on the east basin. The Southern Pacific patents are outside the two-mile limit from Wilmington and the Banning patents were granted after the disincorporation of Wilmington and before San Pedro was incorporated.

In a nutshell the city seems to get the unimproved tidelands in the west basin and the corporations practically all the improved frontage upon which money has been expended by these private interests.

GLEE CLUB HEROES.

Singers Fight Fire on Coalinga Stage—Come Here From University of California to Try Voices.

The presence of mind of two young college men saved the Coalinga Operahouse from a destructive fire and the possible loss of life at a concert given there recently by the University of California Glee Club.

While the club was on the stage, giving a comic song, a newspaper, lying on a table back of the stage, was blown into a gas heater by the wind from an open window. The burning paper then fell in a pile of rubbish, which was ignited and in turn set fire to the scenery.

The young men discovered the fire at the end of the number. Melvin Nuthan of San Francisco, president of the club, went to work on the blaze with an overcoat, while George Baker, popular in Oakland society and formerly of Los Angeles, ran for a fire extinguisher hanging at the stage entrance. The two amateur fire fighters soon had the blaze in check.

Director "Brick" Morse immediately ordered the club back on the stage and the audience learned nothing of the threatening danger.

The club is making its annual Christmas tour of the southern part of the State and will appear in the auditorium of the Los Angeles Athletic Club on the evening of the 8th inst. The aggregation presents an interesting programme of comic and classic songs, instrumental music, typical college wit and humor and a sketch by the well-known poet, Robert Service, depicting Alaska life.

UNNAMED PEAKS; LOSS.

Former United States Geological Survey Expert Points Out Unregistered Scenic Wonders.

Californians fail to realize the advertising value of many natural wonders, according to B. I. Preston, formerly of the United States Geological Survey, who is at the Lankershim.

"The mountains of the State," he says, "are more overlooked than any other feature, considering that there are at least sixty peaks rising 13,000 feet above sea level that have never been given a name, being overlooked because of a wealth of surrounding mountain scenery.

"If any one of these peaks were located in an eastern or Atlantic Coast State, millions of tourists would travel to see it. This State has seventy additional peaks, more than 13,000 feet high that have been named and at least a dozen of these rise more than 14,000 feet."

PIGEONS AND HARES.

Poultry Show This Week Augmented by Exhibition of Blooded Belgians and Dragoons.

While the poultry show, beginning Wednesday in the old postoffice building at Seventh street and Grand avenue, was originated for the purpose of exhibiting chickens, a large showing of pigeons and also of Belgian hares will be made at the same time.

A fine silver trophy cup will be awarded the best young bird of the dragoon class. The contest in this is open to any color of the breed, black, silver, red checker, blue, grizzle or yellow.

The dragoon pigeon was introduced to the Coast only a few years ago and is comparatively little known here. In the East and in several European countries it is the favorite of the pigeon family because of size and handsome coloring. Other varieties of pigeons and doves will have an opportunity of winning trophy cups offered in addition to the ribbons.

BRIBERY CHARGE.

Former Indiana Alderman Involved in Gary Municipal Scandal, Located Here, Waives Extradition.

Anthony Baukus, former Alderman of Gary, Ind., was arrested yesterday on a warrant from the East, in connection with bribery trials and a municipal scandal there.

It appears that with Mayor Knotts and five other Aldermen, Baukus was charged with having solicited a bribe in connection with the giving of the Dean heating franchise there in 1912.

This franchise served, it is alleged, as a means for detectives to involve the city officials in a scandal. During the progress of the trial several persons mysteriously disappeared, including Baukus.

Baukus came to Los Angeles more than eighteen months ago, leased a home at Fiftieth street and Vermont avenue, and got work as a carpenter and building contractor. He was living with his wife and children there when arrested yesterday.

Baukus denies guilt and is ready to waive extradition and return to Gary to face the prosecution.

ALLEGED LOTTERY.

Gee Sing, proprietor of a lottery joint at No. 619 Central avenue, and three customers were arrested shortly after 6 o'clock last night after a raid by Sergt. Hoover and Patrolman McAfee. The drawing was on when the police descended on the place. The arrested persons are Clara Herndon, a negress; J. W. Bunch, a negro Pullman porter; Joe Charlie, a German baker. The bail for Sing, the proprietor, was fixed at $50 and for the others at $10.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR NO DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Hair coming out? If dry, thin, faded, bring back its color and lustre.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—[Advertisement.

FOR WOMEN AND MEN.

Facts, Features and Fancies.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: A clever fad in regard to perfume is that put into use by a friend of mine. The odor, which at that season is in effect in natural flowers, is used upon the clothing and handkerchiefs. For instance, when violets are in the gardens in profusion, violet perfume is used; when roses are at their best, rose odors prevail; when the strong, pungent blossoms of the Dutch bulbs are bursting forth, hyacinth and narcissus is the perfume which milady exhales as well, and so on throughout the floral year. Is not this a charming conceit?

"Most people spend the first quarter of their lives in an earnest effort to grow older, and the last three-quarters in a determined struggle to remain young." Thus says a writer in a current magazine. Continuing the subject, the writer warns against the too prevalent failing of going to an extreme and retaining not only a youthful appearance and lightness of heart, but presenting the twin brother of youthfulness, immaturity.

The craze for the tango is doing its full share toward preserving this eternal youthfulness and in fact it is barely possible that the dance may qualify as a modern presentation of that famed spring at which it was possible to partake of draughts so copious as to reduce one to drooling infancy.

Safe Investment.

The expenditures of the woman who received money as a Christmas gift are, at present, bargain prices in the stores, an investment rather than a speculation. She is securing fully twice as much as though she had made her selections a pre-holiday affair.

Made by a Maid.

A girl who fashions with her deft fingers a confection composed of orange peel and fruit, candied and crystallized, has filled a very definite want for the afternoon tea table, when the aromatic sweet is extremely welcome in taste as well as in appearance.

To Keep 'Em In.

"And now," said Milady who received as a Christmas gift a fine set of furs, "what I want most is an after-Christmas gift of a roomy cedar chest with which to insure the safe-keeping of my newly acquired treasures." And I believe she is to have it, for I answered an inquiry from a member of her family as to the best and cheapest place to purchase such articles.

To Boil a Ham.

Having broken into the realm of extravagance by the purchase of turkey, you may be inclined to let yourself down easy by buying a whole ham and if so there is no better way of cooking the treasured morsel than as follows: Soak the ham over night. Place it in the large receptacle of the fireless cooker, with enough warm water to cover it well and into this pour about a cupful of pure cider vinegar, season with a few whole cloves, a nip of tea, a bayleaf, a lump of brown sugar, a little parsley and thyme. Place on top of the range until the ham is thoroughly heated through and when this is accomplished and the fireless radiators are hot, shut in the fireless and allow it to remain for at least six or seven hours. When taken from the liquor, the outer skin should be removed, the ham should be sifted over with flour and sugar, a few cloves should be stuck in the outer rind and the delicious viand should be placed in a hot oven for a few moments to brown. Served either hot or cold this is a dish for an epicure.

Silverware Sale.

Among the silverware sales, I discovered in a large Broadway department store some gigantic silver spoons which struck me as useful. As large as any tin or galvanized kitchen spoon, these triple-plated ones are of pretty design and could be put to many uses. The price is such as to prove alluring to the most wily housewife.

Charming Negligee.

One of the most charming negligees seen this season was in a French shop which makes a point of having only the most exclusive importations. This was of sky blue crepe de chine and for adornment it had a chaste and simple puffing of the material and a cord and ornaments of the same. This adorably simple garment was a relief from the many over-ornamented boudoir garments seen heretofore.

From Gay Paris.

A friend writes me from Paris that the extreme in dress is none too audacious for the smart set this season and she tells of a costume in which the skirt was actually sewed sack-wise across the lower edge, allowing merely two small openings through which her tiny feet were thrust. Again, the silhouette of the days of our great-grandmothers appeared in the ballooned skirt and the droopingly-rounded shoulders of another striking make-up. Furs and feathers have been put to the utmost test to create unthinkable combinations which startle a blase world into looking twice at the wearer. Feathers worn fur-wise and furs worn feather-wise have adorned hats and coats, while the incongruity of consortment in materials has seemingly reached a limit. And now it looks as though an era of fancy dress were to give still further rein to the imaginative maker of costumes.

A Fireless Hint.

A good housekeeper has learned that an asbestos mat in the bottom of the fireless compartments underneath the radiators will protect the inner surfaces of the compartments. She also says that a similar mat placed over the radiators while heating will facilitate this process.

Fashion's Pencilling.

Very good are the blouses of thinnest French batiste, hand-embroidered and lined with pink chiffon.

Tassels of braid, silk fringe or beads are found on everything, from hair ornaments to tailor-mades.

Separate skirts are of woolen plaids and worn with plain, colored, black, navy blue or green coats.

Evening wraps appear in very daring colors. Those of chiffon velvet are extensively worn at the opera.

Some of the velvet street costumes have extremely long coats, reaching nearly to the hem of the gown.

Silks is the most favored material at present, and the smart afternoon frocks are fashioned of this material or velvet.

The business girl will look smart and modish in navy blue. She should choose one of the hats of black velvet for her head.

Girdles are very important accessories to the costume, and they are made in all styles and sizes and of every material.

VETERANS LIVE WELL.

Annual Report Shows that Inmates of Soldiers' Home Have an Excellent Menu—Short News.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Jan. 3.—From a peep into the official report under the head of "Subsistence" and its tabulated statement of food-stuffs consumed in this branch of the Soldiers' Home during the year just ended, may be gathered an idea of the kind and quantity of provisions, as well as the cost of providing for the nation's aging heroes: Beef, 291,936 pounds, $29,222; corned beef, 11,000 pounds, $1008; bacon, 7894 pounds, $1587; salt pork, 25,240 pounds, $3611; shoulders of pork, 49,580 pounds, $5408; ham, 49,552 pounds, $7782; eggs, 46,810 dozens, $10,568, were consumed.

From the foregoing it will be seen that ham, bacon and eggs are luxuries—cost considered—the supply however, has been by no means stinted. The articles above quoted are but modicum of the amount of supplies provided.

Here are a few items in the larger quantities mentioned in the report referred to: Flour, 870,500 pounds; fresh fish, 37,000; codfish, 8000; coffee, 70,120; tea, 2200; granulated sugar, 135,374; potatoes, 535,328; onions, 40,060; corn meal, 19,890; navy beans, 17,238; oleo, 66,299; cheese, 7714; apples, 10,300; prunes, 11,000 and the many articles that go to make up the meals—in staple goods—too numerous to mention.

CHOIR CHANGES.

Among many changes occurring with the new year it may be noted that the choirs of both chapels are now on the pay roll. As at present organized the following comprise the Catholic choir: Miss Josephine M. Murray, soprano and director; Miss Kathleen Barry, mezzo soprano; Miss Rachel Moynier, contralto, and John Adams, baritone, and Miss Adelaide Alvers, organist. At the Protestant chapel the reorganized choir under direction of Maude E. Dickens, soprano, has for contralto, Mollie E. Price; tenor, George F. Burzell; baritone, Howard Fey, and for organist, Marie T. Mecum.

NEWS BRIEFS.

M'KITTRICK.

M'KITTRICK, Jan. 3.—The Carissa Chemical Company, which controls 2769 acres at Soda Lake, thirty miles in a southwesterly direction from McKittick, intends to develop the sulphide of soda deposits in Soda Lake. The concern, which has its headquarters in San Francisco, is said to have an authorized capital of $1,000,000, and the property where operations are to be conducted comprises a length of six and one-half miles and width of one mile. It is the intention to begin active work within the next two or three months, by which time it is hoped to have the necessary machinery installed. Those interested in the enterprise state that the deposits of sulphide of soda are quite extensive, and that the material is to be transported from the lake to McKittrick, and shipped thence to various points. The general manager of the Carissa Chemical Company is F. M. Meigs of San Francisco, and others actively connected with it are J. G. Jackson, R. L. Meigs and W. S. Meigs, the latter being in charge of the work at the lake. A small force of men are now engaged in preliminary operations at Soda Lake.

I CURE PILES
FISTULA AND ALL RECTAL DISEASES
WITHOUT AN OPERATION
BY MY PAINLESS DISSOLVENT METHOD

I TREAT NO DISEASES EXCEPT THOSE OF THE RECTUM AND BOWELS.

I cure without surgery. My patients are not confined in bed and they do do not lose a moment's time from their business.

My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic condition in my office.

WELL KNOWN SANTA MONICA MINISTER CURED.

This is to certify that Dr. C. H. White has cured me of a distressing hemorrhoidal ailment of 25 years' duration. His method of treatment is effective, but not severe. He has the appliances, the knowledge and the skill born of many years of specialization in this fruitful source of physical disease. He accomplishes all he claims in his advertising, and at reasonable expense.

I take pleasure in heartily commending the man and his methods.

WESLEY K. BEANS, Pastor First Methodist Episcopal Church, Santa Monica, Cal.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SUPERINTENDENT CURED.

My Dear Dr. White: I am thankful for the privilege of bearing witness to your ability to treat without pain, and with success, the delicate and disabling diseases which result from sedentary work. To all who need the services of a skillful, sympathetic and experienced specialist in your line I heartily commend you. Very sincerely yours,

ERVIN S. CHAPMAN, D.D., LLD., Superintendent State Anti-Saloon League.

PRESIDENT OF A PROMINENT COLLEGE CURED.

For more than ten years I was a sufferer from a painful affliction, which nearly ruined my usefulness as an organizer and teacher. Dr. C. H. White of Los Angeles has completely cured me by a process that was painless and rapid, and I desire to go on record as recommending the Doctor in diseases in his specialty.

THOMAS NEWLIN, President Whittier College.

UPSET STOMACH, COSTIVE, BILIOUS, CASCARETS TONIGHT---DIME A BOX

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is sour—your liver is torpid—your bowels constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation. Try Cascarets; they sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning.

San Jacinto Man Fatally Hurt by Telephone Pole Which Falls on Him—News Briefs.

SAN JACINTO, Jan. 3.—G. B. Kempton, local manager of the Southern Sierras Power Company, received injuries yesterday which will likely result in his death. He was passing along the street at a point where workmen of the Southwestern Telephone Company were removing poles. As he passed under the pole it fell, striking him on the head with such force as to crush in the skull. The victim was hurried to Riverside for treatment. Kempton arrived in San Jacinto the first of December from Buffalo, N. Y., to take the management of this branch of the Southern Sierra Power Company. He is 31 years of age and unmarried.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Jesse Hoback was seriously injured the last of the week in a bicycle collision. The young man was riding home at night and in a dark street collided with a Mexican boy riding a machine; both boys were riding without lights. Young Hoback was taken to the Riverside Hospital the following day.

Mrs. George Smith, formerly Mrs. L. Badgsley, has returned to San Jacinto to again take charge of the Lockwood Hotel. Mrs. Emma Lockwood, the owner, expects to remove to Los Angeles.

Another week of gentle showers has brought the total rainfall for the season in San Jacinto to 4.92 inches. Ranchers are skirmishing about for every acre of available land, and indications are now that the acreage sown this year will be the largest in many seasons. Old residents look for a fine year and their belief is strengthened by the claims of the Indians, who say that all signs indicate a year of big rains and deep mountain snows.

THREATENED THE MILKMAN.

Federal Officers Take Joseph Keller, Who Is Charged With Attempted Blackmail—Strong Evidence.

ANAHEIM, Jan. 3.—Joseph Keller, arrested late last night on a charge of attempted blackmail, was examined this afternoon by Postal Inspector C. D. Low and John Kellenberger, City Marshal. The letters which Keller is accused of having written to John Kellenberger and Boyd Webster, a 16-year-old boy, who drives a milk wagon, were produced.

It appears that Keller wrote eight letters, threatening all manner of dire consequences if they did not pay certain sums of money at a specified time and place. The first of the "threats terrible" was carried out New Year's night, when young Webster's horse and rig, which he had left hitched on one of the main thoroughfares, was completely demolished and the harness riddled to bits. The horse alone escaped injury and was found hitched further down the street.

At the time of Keller's arrest bottles of milk and a box of tickets taken from the milk wagon were found in the room, and the crayon pencil with which all of the letters were addressed, was found in his pockets. Paper and envelopes resembling the kind used in every instance were also disclosed. A local druggist was called in this afternoon to identify Keller as the man to whom he had sold the stationery, and another merchant stated that he recognized him as the man who addressed several epistles of like description from his place of business.

Notwithstanding the conclusiveness of the evidence, Keller refuses to admit his guilt, stolidly denying all knewledge of how he came by the damaging evidence. He was detained for further examination by the postal authorities Monday.

HUNTINGTON BEACH.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Jan. 3.—As showing the growth of the business of this city a comparative statement of the First National Bank, just issued, evidences a remarkable increase in the past three years. Its loans and discounts have increased from $54,000 to $118,000, and its deposits from $88,000 to $165,000, and it has declared another annual dividend of 8 per cent. besides placing a substantial sum in its surplus account which is now up to half its capital. William T. Newland, a wealthy rancher, is president and Ralph E. Graves cashier, and the increased business has resulted under their management of the bank's affairs.

Another act in the factional fight now in progress between City Marshal Vincent and his enemies was his arrest yesterday on a warrant charging him with assaulting and severely beating Charles Salisbury, a middle-aged man, last month. Salisbury was confined to his bed some time as a result of the affray which Vincent asserts was caused by the man offering an insult to his daughter. Vincent is being defendd by an array of able Santa Ana counsel.

WILL BECOME FIRST CLASS.

Santa Ana Postoffice Serves as a Financial Barometer for Orange County Capital—News Briefs.

SANTA ANA, Jan. 3.—There is every indication that Santa Ana's postoffice will become a first-class office in 1914. The postal year ends March 31, and postal receipts must exceed $40,000 before the office passes from the second class to the first class.

Postmaster L. L. Shaw feels certain of the office's ability to pass the figure. The month of December was the biggest in the history of the local postoffice. The receipts were $5499 as against $4428 for the same month of 1912. For the year ending December 31, 1913, the office's receipts were $39,683.46. If the receipts of the office for the next three months show an increase of $316 over the receipts of a corresponding period last year the office will become a first-class office.

Nothing so certainly indicates the growth of a city as its postal receipts. These figures taken in connection with the fact that the total building receipts for 1913 was $704,009 as against $611,536 for 1912 are proof of the steady advancement made by this county seat in the last twelve months.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Today workmen began tearing out portions of the Spurgeon block at the corner of Fourth and Sycamore streets, the first step in erecting at the corner a handsome four-story office building. The new structure will be built by the Spurgeon Realty Company, organized by Santa Ana's founder, W. H. Spurgeon. The five stores that now occupy the Spurgeon block have moved so that the work may be done.

Jealousy is supposed to have prompeted a quarrel between roommates last night, ending in a shot and an arrest. Stage fright when the time came to pull the trigger prevented anyone being hurt. Lawrence Englander and Arthur Jacobs were the men, each aged about 22. There were two girls, and from what the officess can learn Jacobs wanted to walk with both of them. Englander became angry and left. A few minutes later he drove up in an automobile, jumped out and pointed an automatic at Jacobs, telling Jacobs to put up his hands. Jacobs saw that Englander's hand was shaking, so he put down his hands and dared Engthe ground at Jacobs's feet. Englandcovered his eyes with one hand and pulled the trigger, the bullet striking the ground at Jacob's feet. Englander did not wait to see if he had hit his man. Later the two men returned to their room and slept together peacefully. This morning Jacobs had Englander arrested. Englander works in a laundry.

M. Nasatir today sought guardianship letters over his son Abraham that a damage suit may be brought against William Cochems, proprietor of the Vienna Bakery, for $7500. Abraham was skating on a sidewalk when Cochems drove out of an alley. The boy could not stop and, in falling, his hand was thrust under the auto and was taken off in the chain and cogs.

Rev. William Thomas, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, handed his resignation to his church last night. A meeting of members has been called for next Thursday night to consider it. Rev. Thomas has been here for about six months.

PRINTING CONTRACT LET.

South Pasadena Trustees Eager to Sell Bonds so That Minor Improvements May Be Started.

SOUTH PASADENA, Jan. 3.—Bids for printing the bonds for $50,000, which were recently voted for the improvements in the fire department, for the paving of an approach to the bridge over the Arroyo Seco at the Cawston ostrich farm and for municipal yards, have been awarded by the Board of Trustees to the W. P. Jefferies Lithographing Company of Los Angeles. As the amount was less than $300, bids were not advertised for, but several printing companies were asked to submit them.

Bids for the printing of the $200,000 bonds for the sewer system, will be received later. The board is anxious to obtain the money for the minor improvements at once, as the plans for them have been completed and they are badly needed. The sewer bonds necessarily take longer in their sale and the Trustees are utilizing the time in working out the plans.

NEWS BRIEFS.

An ordinance lessening the minimum size of cesspools allowed in the city has also been passed by the Board of Trustees, and property owners who are forced to put in new cesspools can now do so at a smaller cost. The measure is only temporary, but as it is expected to have the sewer system in running order before two years, the smaller size allowed will be sufficient.

Mrs. George A. Crandall and Miss Anne Mumford appeared before the dramatic section of the Woman's Improvement Association at the meeting yesterday and gave a description of the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Mrs. Crandall and Miss Mumford had witnessed the play and they told of the many details which are extremely interesting.

The organist at the St. James Episcopal Church will give a short recital Sunday evening before the service. Tuesday next will be the Festival of the Epiphany and holy communion will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. The members of the woman's auxiliary are expected to make a corporate communion on that day and to give an offering for the work. The Woman's Guild will give a "silver tea" in the parish house on Tuesday afternoon, and on Tuesday evening the Men's Club will hold an open meeting.

Rev. W. F. Cowden of Tacoma, Wash., evangelist, pastor and one of the leading ministers of the Christian Church, will occupy the pulpit of the Christian Church Sunday morning. Homer S. Fox, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., will sing, as will the male quartette.

Sunday evening the choir of the Presbyterian Church, by special request, will repeat some of the beautiful music rendered at the Christmas vesper service. A solo will also be presented by Miss Annie McLaren, formerly soloist for the "Billy" Sunday meetings. The pastor, Rev. Charles M. Fisher, D.D., will speak at both the morning and evening service.

A series of meetings for a special week of prayer is being planned by Rev. Curtis I. Meserve, pastor of the Oneonta Congregational Church, for each evening next week, excepting Monday and Saturday.

LIBRARY CONTRACT IS LET.

Nine Firms Submit Figures for the Construction of the Carnegie Institution at Beaumont—News Briefs.

BEAUMONT, Jan. 3.—The contract for the new Carnegie public library building to be erected in this city has been let by the library trustees to the Mann & Knox Construction Company of Los Angeles. There were nine bidders. The building is to be of reinforced concrete. The contract price is $7996, exclusive of heating, lighting and furnishings. Work is to be started on the building within a few days. It is expected that it will be completed ready to occupy on or about May 15.

NEWS BRIEFS.

R. E. LeBeau of Redlands, a representative of the Southern California Edison Company, was in Beaumont today and stated that work would be resumed Monday on the extension of the company's power lines to this city. He added that the placing of service wires throughout the city would immediately follow and that current could be furnished here within ninety days. The Edison company secured a franchise from the local City Council nearly a year ago, but no work has been done on the extension to this city during the past six months. Recently the Beaumont Gas and Power Company applied for an electric franchise. This application is now pending before the City Council.

The first real estate transfer in the Beaumont district of the new year, and one of the largest in several months, was closed yesterday when J. D. Funk sold for the El Casco Land Company the property known as the Jeffries ranch to C. L. Powell of Los Angeles. The ranch contains 293 acres.

Miss Lura Oakey resigned as teacher of one of the grammar grades in the local schools at the beginning of the Christmas vacation and was married on New Year's Day to the Rev. Mr. Ferris, pastor of the Congregational church in Corona. The board of education has filled the vacancy by the election of Miss Mamie Clark of this city to the position.

A rearrangement of the election precincts of Beaumont township has been made by the Board of Supervisors and two new voting districts are created. Precincts 1 and 2 are now entirely within the city limits. Precinct 3 comprises all territory situated between Beaumont and the north limits of the township. Precinct 4 is that portion of the township situated south of Beaumont.

Registration for the new great register of the county began in this city Friday morning, but only a few names have yet been placed on the rolls. A heavy registration is expected before March 14, which is the final date for enrollment for the city elections, which will be held on April 13. A complete set of city officers is to be elected.

A letter which was received here this week addressed to the Beaumont Board of Trade had required eighty-three days to reach its destination. It was mailed in Mexico City on October 8. There are no marks on the envelope to indicate the reason for its delay in transmission, but it is attributed to the impairment of service caused by the recent activities of the revolutionists.

GREEN HOUSE OF TRAGED

Ontario Has an Actual C of Crime.

Storm Water Question Is Discussed at Meeting.

First Annual Pigon Show Is Big Success.

ONTARIO, Jan. 3.—Another gruesome scene was enacted at what the local police have termed "The Little Green House of Tragedy" at No. [illegible] East State street shortly before noon today, when Pete Rivas, a paroled murderer, attempted suicide with a .38-caliber revolver and he is now thought to be dying at the County Hospital.

Four years ago, Rivas shot and killed S. Quintana, an aged Mexican, in a quarrel over a card game. About a year and a half ago he was paroled from San Quentin and until quite recently has been behaving well.

The house in which he attempted his rash act this morning has the reputation of being a veritable hotbed of tragedy, having to its credit two murders, a number of stabbing affairs and numerous lesser crimes. The police declare that four-fifths of the crime in the Mexican quarter, in the history of the city, has centered about this house.

The shot with which Rivas attempted to end his life missed its aim and passed into his left shoulder and neck, but it is feared that it will yet prove fatal. Clutched in his hand with the revolver, the police found a note: "I'm going to kill myself. Mother told me she did not want me home no more, so that is the reason I'm going to do this thing. Pete Rivas."

Since his return from San Quentin Rivas has lived with his mother, Mrs. Lola Moya, an aged and feeble Mexican woman. Of late he is said to have treated her shamefully, with the result that she told him he must leave. Mrs. Moya stated to the officers this morning that she believes her son is demented, and is plainly afraid of him, begging the police to see that he does not return to her house in the event of his recovery. Just before Rivas shot himself, he was heard to mutter "Here goes nothing." Rivas has until quite recently been employed by E. A. Simmons, paving contractor, and is said to have been a good workman.

HANDLING STORM WATER.

The question of handing the great rush of storm water, which each winter flows down Euclid avenue, and which has beer the bane of the existence of City Councilmen ever since Ontario became a city, was this morning settled once and for all, or so the present City Council hopes and believes.

At a special meeting this morning of the Council, property owners from south of the city and County Supervisor Samuel Pine, who represented the territory affected, a plan was worked out which it is thought will prove satisfactory to all concerned. The city agreed to construct a storm ditch on the north side of Ely street from Euclid to Fern avenue and to join with the county in the construction of a culvert across Ely street at Fern. The property owners agreed to divert the water so that it will not flow in Ely street. Heretofore, on account of the absence of the storm ditch, the water each winter has broken away from its regular channel and caused great damage to property and many fights between neighbors who diverted the flood onto each other's land.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Dr. Emma Drake, of Denver, a national worker of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is to occupy the pulpit at the First Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow evening. Princess Long is to sing special temperance hymns and all the churches of the city are invited to attend the services. Sunday afternoon, Dr. Drake is to hold a special meeting for mothers. Dr. Drake is the guest while here of Mrs. George A. McCrea, No. 1003 North [illegible] avenue.

A monster Christian Endeavor rally is planned for tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, when [illegible] Brown, secretary of Christian Endeavor work in Southern California, will deliver an address and launch an "efficiency campaign" in the Christian Endeavor work. The young people's societies of most of the churches in the city will attend.

The First Annual Ontario Pigeon Show, held under the auspices of the Ontario Pigeon Club, recently formed, at No. 243 North Euclid avenue, closed tonight after a most successful exhibit. Something like 200 birds were shown. F. I. Moore, a pigeon authority of Pasadena, awarded the prizes.

MOORPARK, Jan. 3.—The [illegible] Heights Development Company has leased 1100 acres of the east portion of its ranch to a company of capitalists for oil operations. The deal was made during the past week, a Mr. Duncan representing the lessees. Under the contract work is to be commenced within ninety days.

The Marine Street Oil Company finished rigging up and started drilling at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening at their prospect one mile north of Moorpark. Two shifts will be operated and the work of drilling continued day and night. This is the first actual drilling to be done in this district and the outcome will be watched with great interest.

COLTON NOTES.

COLTON, Jan. 3.—Minus the bridal frock and veil, the music and decorations and in fact, all the happy appointments that had been planned for the ceremony on New Year's Day that was to unite Miss Serena [illegible] and Eugene B. AN IMPORTANT OCCASION.

Pomona Christians Will Convene and Take Retrospective Glance Over the Year Just Gone.

POMONA, Jan. 3.—Tomorrow will be a red-letter day in the history of the First Christian Church of this city, when the annual meeting will be held and reports rendered of the progress made in the work of the different departments of the church during the past year, which has been an especially active and prosperous one. Frank Dowling, formerly pastor of the church, but now a resident of Placentia, will be present and address the meeting, and Rev. M. D. Clubb, State secretary of the church for Southern California, will speak at the afternoon programme. Mrs. Anna Paul Cason, State president, of the C.W.B.M., will also speak at the afternoon meeting. Rev. Dowling will preach at the evening service and the pastor, Rev. C. R. Hudson, will preach the sermon at the morning service, his subject being "The Spirit of a Great Church."

Covers were laid for fifteen guests. Mr. and Mrs. Lorbeer are in good health and are already planning to celebrate their "ruby" wedding.

A sketch of the life of Browning will be given at the meeting Monday afternoon.

The members of the Fraternal Brotherhood held a unique "box, bag and basket" social last evening at their hall at which there was a large crowd present. The ladies supplied the "luncheon for two" and the manner of choosing partners was novel and created much merriment. The local lodge of the order is constantly growing and the affairs of the organization are in excellent condition.

BANK ROBBERS PLEAD GUILTY.

Riverside Court Scene of a Dramatic Incident.

Business Men Feel Hopeful Over Year's Prospects.

Motorists Are Immune from Arrest Temporarily.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Standing where Ralph Fariss, the El Monte train robber, stood after his admission of guilt, Thomas Green and Paul Case, the young cowboys who robbed the Blythe bank and murdered Cashier Bowles, today pleaded guilty to the bloody deed before Judge Densmore.

Without in any wise betraying emotion, the youths informed the court in the presence of a crowded courtroom that they were fully aware of the possible results of a plea of guilty. On motion of attorney for defense, they were allowed to plead separately. January 10 was fixed as the date for determining the degree of guilt of the men. It is expected that Los Angeles friends of Case will be present on the date for fixing sentence to shed some light on his previous record as a passably good citizen.

HOPE RENEWED.

That the year 1914 is to see a renewed enthusiasm for the beautification of the city and the elimination of certain unsightly features not far distant from the civic center, now well developed, is assured from the important action taken by the Outdoor Aesthetics Committee of the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon.

There was recommended to the chamber the engaging of the services of an expert landscape gardener to be placed in charge of the "City Beautiful" plans of the city. It is hoped to achieve the unquestionable distinction of being the most beautiful city of Southern California as early as 1915, although the plans to be formulated by a landscape gardener would presumably call for a period of years to execute.

One of the first things proposed to be agitated by the committee is a flower-planting campaign that will be far-reaching in its scope, the efforts of private citizens in their own yards to be supplemented by the planting of flower seeds on all vacant lots and along country highways.

The formation of street and district improvement societies, of which there are already a large number, is also to be further encouraged.

The People's Loan and Trust Company, the first simon-pure trust company to be organized in this county, has received its charter from the State Department, which has the sum of $100,000 required to be deposited by the new concern under a recently-enacted statute. The company has the distinction of being the first in Southern California to organize under the new law. Although not yet permanently located in the new $40,000 concrete building on Eighth street, which is to be the home of the company, loans in the amount of $130,000 have already been placed in the city and county.

REGARD FOR MOTORISTS.

No arrests will be made in this city for failure to display license plates under the new automobile license law, until after January 15, according to Chief of Police Corrington, in recognition of the fact that it has been a physical impossibility for the State to furnish them in sufficient quantities before the new law went into effect. Sheriff Wilson takes the same view of the matter, and motorists who have been unable to secure their plates may expect fair treatment in this city and county.

Mark Butterfield, son of Dr. J. F. Butterfield of No. 277 Brockton avenue, is confined to his home with a broken leg, resulting from a collision with an automobile driven by Dr. J. N. Field, president of the University of Redlands. The accident occurred at Redlands yesterday, Butterfield at the time being on a motorcycle with Burtis Heiser, who escaped without a scratch.

Registration for the new Great Register opened with a rush at the office of County Clerk Pilch today, fifty-one filling out the necessary blanks before noon. The first man registered as a Socialist, and the first woman as a Progressive.

MORE LIGHTED HIGHWAY.

VAN NUYS, Jan. 3.—District headquarters for the Southern California Edison Company for this district will be moved from Lankershim to Van Nuys by February 1. The district headquarters employs from fifteen to forty men, and the location of headquarters in Van Nuys will mean the eventual location of about ten or twelve more families in this town. The garage, which will be 20x50 feet, will be large enough to accommodate five automobile trucks and a team. In the rear it will have a fine concrete wash sink for autos. The warehouse will be 30x50 feet. District Superintendent Coulter said that as soon as possible the company would begin work on its contract for the installation of the lights on the Ventura county road, and that work would also be started very soon on a 15,000-volt line from San Fernando to Van Nuys, which will give the Van Nuys section much better service than at present.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL.

Whittier Man Struck by Automobile Dies Within an Hour After the Accident—News Briefs.

WHITTIER, Jan. 3.—John M. White died at the Whittier Hospital last evening from injuries received about 7 o'clock, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Paul Denninger, local manager of the Southern California Edison Company.

The accident happened at the intersection of Greenleaf avenue and Philadelphia street. White was thrown several feet and then run over, being terribly torn and crushed. He was rushed to the hospital and died in about an hour. Just how the accident occurred will be brought out at the Coroner's inquest Monday.

White was 41 years old and leaves a widow and three children. He had resided here only a few weeks and was employed by a local contractor. The family formerly resided in Crisp City, Mo.

CONTINUE CHRISTMAS TREE.

The marked success and the general interest attending Whittier's first community Christmas tree prompted a demand that steps be taken at once to arrange for a similar observance of the holiday season next year. At the closing programme New Year's Eve a resolution was unanimously adopted commending the plan and asking for the organization of a committee to have charge of arrangements next year. The closing programme was held in the Methodist Church on account of the rain, and it was an evening of music. The city band and three choirs participated.

Whittier's Christmas tree was planted twenty-six years ago by John Tregoning, the pioneer nurseryman of this community. It was intended as a landmark, and it has fulfilled Tregoning's expectations to the fullest. It now stands, a perfect specimen of fir, eighty feet tall, in the center of Central Park. If it should be decorated annually for the next twenty-five years the next generation would certainly see a big Christmas tree.

Horse thieves have started operations actively and early here this year. New Year's Eve a horse and buggy belonging to Benjamin Sharpless were stolen while his son, Earl Sharpless, was attending a New Year's party on the county road. The horse was left tied near the residence where the party was held and when Sharpless went for it no trace of the rig could be found, nor has any trace of the missing rig been found yet. Last night another horse and buggy were taken, this time one belonging to J. S. Adams. In this latter case the rig was taken from the owner's barn. The officers are working every possible way to get a clew to the thieves.

Two cadets from the Whittier State School took leave yesterday, making a get-away about 8:30 in the evening. Frank Sabine and Oliver Leftwich are their names. Both lads were committed to the Preston School of Industry and from there sent to Whittier. The boys left after the battalion had returned from attendance at the Tournament of Roses. They were still at large this evening.

Miss Hazel Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of La Habra, was married to George Burnett of East Whittier at the commodious Scott home, New Year's Day. Mr. and Mrs. Burnett will spend a short time in Tulare county.

Word has just been received here that the Los Angeles county Sunday-school convention will be held in Whittier in April this year. Plans looking forward to such a consummation have been under way for some time, and seven Sunday-schools of the city united in tendering an invitation to the County Sunday-school Committee to hold the next county convention in Whittier. Taking favorable action on this invitation, Dr. H. A. Dowling, secretary of the Southern California Sunday-school Association, has announced that the county convention will be held here April 15, 16 and 17. Already arrangements are being made for a splendid programme.

Preliminary to the county convention a district conference will be held at the Methodist church here January 22, with an afternoon and an evening programme.

HANDSOME ARCHWAY.

Hermosa Beach Is Adding Decorative Additions to Its Pleasure Pier. Rest Rooms Provided.

HERMOSA BEACH, Jan. 3.—A handsome archway and two pavilions are being erected at the entrance to the recently completed municipal pier which will greatly enhance the beauty of the pier.

The archway and pavilions are of the mission style architecture and have a frontage of eighty-five feet. The center structure forming the archway will be two stories and have a balcony with stairs leading from the pavilions, where pleasure seekers may secure a view of the ocean and the hills on the east. The pavilions on either side will be but one story high and on the south side there will be a band stand and large auditorium. On the north side there will be rest rooms, a smoking-room for men, a library-room, a general reception-room and concessions. William Bell of Redondo Beach is the contractor and Montgomery and Montgomery of Los Angeles, the architects. The contract price is $6275. The pier proper cost $60,000.

WATER USERS ORGANIZE.

FRESNO, Jan. 3.—[B. A. P. Night Wire.] One hundred and fifty delegates from this and adjoining counties met here today to take preliminary steps toward the organization of a Water Users' Association for the conservation of valley water. It is planned to form irrigation districts totalling 1,000,000 acres and to build mountain reservoirs on the Kings River in the Sierras. The movement is the result of an insufficient supply of irrigation water during the last two dry years. Promoters of the new organization declare that water conservation is necessary in order that vast areas of unirrigated land in the San Joaquin Valley may be brought under cultivation.

JOHNSONITES DISCOURAGED.

San Bernardino Moosers Take to the Woods.

Leaders Will Beat the Brush for Effect.

Woman's Moods Make District Attorney Despair.

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 3.—Registration has thus far been very slow in this county, but little interest seeming to be taken among the voters to get their names on the big book.

The Johnsonites up to the hour of closing the County Clerk's office today had, however, gotten but four of their clan to get up sufficient courage to call for registration. There had been twenty-four Republicans registered, eight Democrats, four Socialists and two Prohibitionists.

It is said the Progressives will beat the brush in all parts of the county at once in an effort to make a big "showing" on the registration, with a view to getting the stray sheep to "follow the crowd" so far as possible. Up to this date, however, the results have been slim.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

In preparation for the "dry" campaign and also the referendum on the gambling ordinance to be voted on January 30 in this city the "drys" have named an executive committee composed of R. F. Garner, T. W. Duckworth, W. E. Leonard, W. H. Deardorff, H. H. Ham and J. W. Curtis to take charge of the campaign. An executive committee for the women's organization will also be named at once. It is probable few public meetings will be held, the work being confined to personal work and a thorough canvass of the voters.

WORK FOR MONEY.

Hundreds of men are now being employed in the thousands of acres of vineyards in the western end of this county, the work of pruning the vines being in progress. There are close to 10,000 acres in grapes in the west end of the county and the vines were never in finer shape than now. The pruning process is an important one and will require several weeks to complete, though the growers seek to complete the job as quickly as possible before the sap starts in the vines. The crop the past year was very good, but the vines are in prime condition and the outlook is for another excellent season in this great industry.

VARIABLE WOMAN.

It is now probable that Grant Trask will not be compelled to answer for the killing of his brother-in-law, Myron Kurtz. Because of the wavering of Mrs. Kurtz between love and possible duty, the officers have found it impossible to go ahead with the prosecution of Trask and it is more than probable the case will be discharged. Trask was first held for the killing, which occurred in a quarrel at the Kurtz home, Mrs. Kurtz being the only witness. She secured the release of her brother by saying he killed Kurtz in self-defense. Later, she made a statement to the contrary and Trask was rearrested, but owing to the changeableness of Mrs. Kurtz the case will probably end.

BARNS BURNED.

The hay barns of P. Quirez at Ninth and A streets were destroyed by fire this morning, the loss being about $1500. The structure was entirely burnt and much of the seventy-five tons of hay destroyed or damaged. Scores of the blazing bales were pulled away from the balance of the pile and thus much of it saved. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been tramps, as the door was found open.

BOND FIXED.

Martin C. Brown, the Colton merchant charged with lascivious conduct with a young girl he enticed away from the Orphan's Home in this city, has been held under $2000 bail for a preliminary to be held later. Brown's father is here from Los Angeles to look after his son's interests, while his wife, who was absent on a visit, has also returned home. Brown still insists that he meant no harm to the child, though the officers state that conditions are against him.

A. Bego of a wholesale liquor house was given a six months' suspended sentence in the police court for selling liquor to a boy under 21 years of age. He secured the suspension on showing that he did not know the boy, who stated that he was 22 years of age when he made the purchase. Owing to the mitigating circumstances no action to annul his license will be taken.

The handsome posters for the National Orange Show have arrived and are now being distributed all over Southern California and to many of the eastern tourist centers to catch the eye of easterners, who will spend the month of February in California.

A caboose on the rear of a Salt Lake freight train was reduced to kindling wood by a Santa Fe engine backing into the rear of the train, both being on their way down the mountain to this city. Owing to the fog, the engine crew failed to see the freight train until it was too late to avoid the collision. No one was hurt.

EL SEGUNDO.

EL SEGUNDO, Jan. 3.—The work of recovering the big pile driver of the Standard Oil Company which went down with the end of the wharf will be begun at once. It is hoped that the machinery may be recovered from the bottom of the ocean and much of the timber of the structure is now being saved by workmen on the beach. It was stated at the office of the oil company today that the work of rebuilding the wrecked portion of the wharf will be commenced immediately. The exact loss cannot be estimated as yet, though it is in the neighborhood of $50,000.

FAVOR THE ROAD BONDS.

Upland Mayor and Other Citizens Interest Themselves in Promoting Highway Movement.

UPLAND, Jan. 3.—A number of local men, among them Mayor C. V. Lambrigger, have been circulating petitions in favor of calling an election for the purpose of voting the road bonds, and the manner in which freeholders signed the petitions, indicates that local residents, at least to a considerable number, favor the bonds.

The Pacific Electric Railway has placed flagmen at five of the principal crossings of this city, pending the completion of the work of installing their new crossing signals. Several close calls to bad accidents have probably hastened this action by the company.

A consignment of potted plants, shipped to this city from Pomona and designed for sale to local parties, was condemned by Inspector Fred Anderson, for the Horticultural Commission, and was ordered shipped back to Pomona. Mealy bug, as well as scale, was found on some of the plants, and there is talk of seeking to prosecute the nurserymen who ship to this, a territory quarantined against them, this class of folige, as well as citrus nursery stock.

Upland is planning a splendid and unique exhibit at the forth-coming National Orange Show, at San Bernardino, though the details of the feature are not yet given out. Nearly every man on the committee which has the matter in charge is an experienced citrus man, and the result this year, under general direction of President Earl Paul, of the Chamber of Commerce, is expected to surpass any in the past.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Reynolds and daughter, Miss Marjorie, are the guests of relatives, the Colum C. Chapman family, on Mariposa avenue, Los Angeles, for the week's end.

Lancaster.

ANTELOPE IS PROSPEROUS.

PAST YEAR HAS BEEN ONE OF ADVANCEMENT.

Lancaster, the Hub of the Rich and Populous Valley, Has Also Made Remarkable Building Strides. Chamber of Commerce Formed Which Shows Signs of Life.

LANCASTER, Jan. 3.—It is interesting to glance over the photographs snapped along the principal thoroughfares of Lancaster one year ago and notice how the landscape has changed in all directions. In the business section two banks have erected new quarters, modern in every respect, several new stores have been constructed to provide room for the various commercial industries which have been established. Numerous street improvements have been made and many feet of sidewalks laid. Many comfortable homes have sprung up to the north, south, east and west.

A local investment company has been particularly active in this line, having erected a number of cozy bungalows in a choice section.

The new $15,000 grammar school is looming up on the horizon. It will be ready for occupancy within the next few months. During the year the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce was organized, made up of representative men of the Antelope Valley, and this body has given this region much publicity. Recently a Citizens' League has been organized for the purpose of making a determined effort to secure a county highway through the Antelope Valley. Although the residents of this vicinity voted to a man on the good roads bonds to date not one cent has been spent in this district.

An appeal will be made to the Supervisors shortly by a delegation from the Citizens' League for the construction of county road from the north line of Los Angeles county through Lancaster and Palmdale, there to unite with some connecting link to the south. At present this section has no outlet to the southern cities and consequently is seriously handicapped. It is the expectation that actual road work may commence in the near future.

Thousands of trees were planted in the Antelope Valley during the last season and indications are that the previous record will be eclipsed during 1914. More acreage is constantly being placed under cultivation and it is predicted that 1914 will witness a tremendous growth in every section.

Many of the ranchers are talking dairy and it is probable that rapid strides will also be made in this direction during the next few months. Men who have been in the dairy business elsewhere have purchased land and are moving their herds here.

The rainfall has been sufficiently heavy to date along the foothills to convince the ranchers that this will be a banner grain year. Many have been at work lately planting the seed and in several instances the green shoots have already appeared.

Lancaster and the Antelope Valley have experienced a year of prosperity, one in which extensive development has been taking place, but with the coming of the new year it is expected that with the construction of roads, the erection of new buildings and the cultivation of many thousands of acres that this region will enjoy a period of expansion such as has never been known in its history.

Last Trip for Fariss.

Sheriff Hammel and probably Deputy Wright will leave tomorrow for States prison with Ralph Fariss, condemned train bandit. The Sheriff stated yesterday he will not announce the hour, as he does not desire a crowd to gather about the County Jail. Fariss received his usual consignment of flowers, candy and notes from ridiculous women who apparently regard the murderer as a model of manly virtue. He has received many requests for photographs. He has been unable to have any taken except those for which he unwillingly posed in San Francisco and the newspaper portraits here.

Wilkie will acquaint those who may inquire with the technical educational advantages of this Y.M.C.A. department.

EAST SEVENTH HOLD-UP.

Bandit Loses His Gun in Scramble With Storekeeper, But Gets Even by Stealing Bicycle.

A hold-up man who started operations at No. 226 East Seventh street at about 7 o'clock last night is a prize opportunist. The police are searching for him, a hat which doesn't belong to him and a bicycle on which he made his escape.

He was first seen by A. V. Moldoffsky, a dry goods storekeeper of the Seventh-street address. He was tapping a tin sign outside the store with a vicious-looking revolver.

Moldoffsky rushed out to the sidewalk and engaged him in a catch-as-catch-can bout. They struggled about on the pavement, both their hats falling off. Finally the storekeeper got the gun out of the hold-up man's hand, but the hold-up man got the storekeeper's hat.

Tearing down the street at full speed, he collided with a bicyclist at Santee street. Another struggle ensued, as a result of which the would-be bandit tore the bicycle away from its rightful owner and pedaled away "to the beyond" and safety.

Detectives Stevens and Blinn visited Moldoffsyk's store and obtained a description of the robber. They are searching for him.

JUMPING "BURGLAR."

Young Woman Thinks She Has Captured Thieving Man, But It's Only a Cat.

Miss Elsie Crane, No. 836 Kensington road, thought she had captured a burglar at her home yesterday. Hearing a noise, she identified it as the sound of a burglar disappearing into the basement. The young woman closed the door, bolted it, and then bolted for the telephone.

The police, hurriedly notified, went as rapidly as six cylinders permit, ignoring the traffic laws to catch the thief.

They stepped around the house, saw where the man had disappeared, and followed him to his lair. Drawn guns illumined the dingy passageway. Five patrolmen walked through the basement. In one corner a noise rustled. It was the noise of a man, they thought, a man stealthily dragging his feet along the basement floor. They surrounded the place and ambushed the victim.

Suddenly the victim jumped—jumped through the window far above their heads, and disappeared with a glad "me-ow."

The real burglar, probably, had disappeared through the same window earlier in the day.

Other homes pillaged during the day were those of Frank Van Geel, No. 1846 San Pablo street, and S. H. Ball, No. 200 West Fortieth place.

Who?

UNKNOWN'S BODY FOUND IN PARK.

POSSIBLE MURDER MYSTERY IN BRUSH CANYON DELL.

Much-Decomposed Corpse Has No Identifying Marks to Indicate Manner of Death or Name of Man. Searching Party Finds Grewsome Thing in Lonely Spot.

A grewsome find in Griffith Park, yesterday, by Patrolman Pratt of the Hollywood station, has started a murder mystery which is baffling the detectives of the Central Police Station.

A much-decomposed body, headless, well-clothed and with the two ribs over the heart broken, was discovered by Pratt, who was accompanied by W. W. Conover, a park policeman, and J. C. Hasson.

The authorities are certain that the part of a skull and [illegible] discovered a fortnight ago, about twenty-five feet from the spot where the body was found yesterday, complement each other. Brush Canyon, where the ghoulish find was made, is a thickly-wooded part of the park and rarely visited.

Not far from the corpse was a suit case containing some old shirts and other clothes, but nothing in the way of a laundry mark or other identification could be seen.

Patrolman Pratt describes his discovery as follows: Body of medium height, badly decomposed, clothed in khaki trousers, soft linen negligee shirt with a silk stripe, black shoes, size No. 7, black socks, red garters.

J. C. Hasson was with the officers because he hoped to find some trace of a half-brother who disappeared from his home, No. 1739 North Berendo street, about eighteen months ago. He had had the habit of walking about in Griffith Park when unemployed. He stated positively that the body was not that of his relative.

The corpse will be taken from the park today by the Coroner and turned over to the D. J. Button Undertaking Company.

CONSIDER OUTLOOK GOOD.

Owl Drug Company Pays Fourteenth Semi-Annual Dividend—Issuing New Preferred Stock.

The Owl Drug Company last week paid its fourteenth semi-annual dividend. In a letter accompanying the checks sent to the stockholders, the company takes a very optimistic view of the outlook in the financial world for 1914. The letter in part is as follows:

"We look forward to 1914 as a year full of promise and prosperity. The great Panama Canal will soon be opened to the commerce of the world—changing the map of this western hemisphere—giving all enjoying a commercial standing and position an opportunity for development of exceptional value."

In order to carry out some of its plans, the company has actively taken up the disposal of a small remaining block of preferred stocks, the letter states.

The greatest twenty-four-hour rainfall, 0.64 of an inch, occurred at San Luis Obispo. The western high area will cause periods of fog in Los Angeles and vicinity Sunday, accompanied by somewhat lower temperatures.

…Butler, in charge of the …ad of the police department, was besieged with inquiries from automobilists all day yesterday. As nearly as can be determined, less than 3000 of the 21,000 automobiles in this city are equipped with the new tags. Of the remainder, a big percentage has applied for tags, which have not yet arrived.

IF LAW WERE ENFORCED.

The police department is replying to these queries by saying that the law is in force and has been since midnight of December 31, that no assurances nor promises can or will be made that the department will refrain from arresting violators of the law, but that any man who applied for a license as early as December 26 or 27 would undoubtedly have a good defense in case of arrest.

Atty-Gen. Webb has ruled that local ministerial officers, such as police, constables or court officers have no powers of discretion with regard to the law. It is on the statute books, is in force and theoretically should be strictly enforced.

If Chief Sebastian's men, therefore, had acted according to the strict letter of the law and had been able to reach all the offenders at least 15,000 arrests would have been made yesterday. Because this was not done, it was not necessary to provide the additional special officers that such wholesale arrests would have required, nor emergency places of confinement nor special court arrangements to pass on all the cases.

Even if the middle course had been pursued, the complications and embarrassing situations would be hardly less serious. This would be to stop every man whose machine was not properly tagged and release him only upon evidence that he had made application before the first day of the year. Such a procedure would mean that the automobilist would have to stop at practically every corner and produce his proof. Theoretically, he might even be stopped and examined

Income Tax Ruling.

CITY, COUNTY, STATE OFFICIALS NOT HIT.

THE employees of Los Angeles city and county and the State of California need not worry about the payment of the income tax.

They are immune, according to the following paragraph from the much-discussed law: "The compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof, except where such compensation shall be paid by the United States government, shall be excluded."

Collector Carter handed down an opinion yesterday that under the provision quoted these officers, in case their salary is in excess of $3000 a year, are not compelled to pay.

They are in a higher class than the President of the United States, for, in the opinion of the Collector, the Chief Executive will be liable for taxation under the law. But he is free until March 4, 1917, under the terms of the Constitution that provides the salary of a President cannot be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected.

There has been a great deal of inquiry on the part of county and city officials as to their liability under the law, and the ruling is that they are not compelled to make returns like ordinary persons whose annual compensation exceeds the dead line set by Congress.

Although the date when returns are to be made under the law was only last Thursday, Collector Carter reports that many are already received, showing a disposition on the part of those liable to the tax to comply with the law without undue delay. By reason of the educational campaign carried on by the Collector the past sixty days there seems to be an excellent understanding as to just what the new law provides for in the way of returns, and it is believed that within a very short time the machinery necessary for the making out of the returns and the collection of the tax will be running smoothly.

Collector Carter some time ago made a requisition upon the Treasury Department for six additional clerks to carry on the increased work but no word has been received as to just how this was received at Washington. Congress made a lump appropriation of $800,000 for hiring additional clerical help, and the Collector hopes he will be allowed sufficient assistance to carry on the work to the satisfaction of the many thousands of persons who must pay the tax and himself in the way of the quick dispatch of the business.

PLANS MADE FOR NEW LINE ACROSS ARIZONA.

A CUT-OFF across Arizona that will involve the building of a new line half across that State and which will put Phoenix on the Southern Pacific's trunk line between this city and New Orleans has come to the front as a possible future improvement in connection with a report that the Southern Pacific has secured its long-sought right-of-way through the Gila Box Canyon. General Superintendent Platt stated yesterday, however, that there is nothing official either on the new road or on the right-of-way concessions.

Though the line will involve the construction of 150 miles of new track, with much heavy blasting and grading work, it is understood that it will give the Southern Pacific the lowest uniform grade of any line crossing the Rocky Mountains. Regarding the probable cost of the road no information is available.

The project, it is stated, is to swing the new road away from the present main line east of Yuma and carry it to a connection with the existant branch line at Hassayampa, then over that line to Winkleman and from there through the Gila Box Canyon to San Carlos or Solomonville on the Gila Valley line. By this line there will be a considerable saving in distance compared with the present line,

EXTEND JOYS OF YULETIDE.

SANTA CLAUS MAKES SEASON'S FINAL VISIT.

Two Thousand Mexican Children Receive Gifts at Plaza Rectory Through Generosity of Society of El Amigo de los Ninos—Practical Help to Poor.

Yuletide good cheer extended clear over into the first week of the new year for the children of the parish of Our Lady of the Angels. Yesterday, the closing Christmas festivities were held in the court and patio of the old rectory, adjoining the church.

The setting made a picture not to be found elsewhere. On all sides arose the archways of the patio; a huge date palm spread its drooping branches over the center of the court, and from this palm to the four corners of the court and to the arc of the archways were sun strings of pennants of red, white and blue.

Around the base of the palm was a square made by counters. Beside the palm arose a graceful evergreen Christmas tree, brilliant in its array of colors and tinsel. Every available inch of the counter space was crowded with gifts for the children of the parish, and there were huge piles of gifts stored on the ground and in boxes. Not a child present of the nearly 2000 was overlooked. Every little one got bags of candies and Christmas goodies, and besides these some suitable gifts of toys and clothing.

Surrounding the Christmas tree were groups of angels, with arms raised in adoration of the Christ. The base of the counters holding the great piles of gifts was formed of colored shields representing American and Mexican emblems.

Packed closely around this central setting were the hundreds of Mexican children, representing more than 1200 families. In the archways and corridors of the old rectory mothers were grouped to watch their children's holiday.

The affair was in charge of the Missionary Sons of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, the order of priests now in charge of the old Plaza parish work. They are headed by Father Michael Onate, and his assistants are Fathers Dominic, Stephens, Triana and Diego. They were assisted in this entertainment for the parish children by two organizations, the Brotherhood of Guadeloupe and the members of El Amigo de los Ninos.

The latter society, which, in English is "The Friend of the Children," was organized recently to carry on work among the poor of the parish. It plans many activities for the new year, and at present is doing much to relieve the pitiable condition of families in the Mexican colony.

The money necessary to carry through yesterday's festivities and gift-distribution was provided by this society. More than $300 was expended in gifts, useful and delightful to the child heart.

Santa Claus was on hand in regulation red and white. The good old saint was personfied by Jose E. Villasenor. Father Michael gave an address to the children on "The Babe of Bethlehem," and under the direction of Father Diego the children sang with spirit religious and patriotic selections in English and Spanish.

Then came the long-anticipated event of distributing the gifts. Santa Claus was assisted by a committee from the society of El Amigo de los Ninos, composed of Mrs. Josefa del V. Forster (president,) Mrs. D. Lugo (secretary,) Mrs. Y. R. del Valle, Miss M. Etchemendy, Miss P. Pelanconi, Mrs. F. Dunn, Mrs. G. R. Williams, Miss G. Rodriguez, Miss Mary Carson, Mrs. M. Latz and Mrs. A. Freese.

So great was the crowd of children and their mothers that as soon as they received their gifts of toys, candies, shoes and clothing, they were forced to move out of the patio to the open court before the rectory while others took their places. Then there followed several Mexican holiday games, chief of which was that of "La Pinata," wherein jars of candies and Christmas sweetmeats and also jars of sawdust are hidden, and boys blindfolded try to strike them with sticks. When they break a jar they are entitled to its contents, be it sawdust or candies.

SNAPPY RALLY OF OLD GUARD.

County Republican Committee Full of Ginger.

Broad Invitation to All to Forget Differences.

Conference to Be Called in the Near Future.

The executive committee of the Republican County Central Committee, as representatives of the Old Guard, held an enthusiastic meeting yesterday in the office of Hon. N. Blackstock, Title Insurance building, who acted as chairman, with Oscar L. Horne as secretary.

The meeting of the committee was characterized by the old-time political fire that has marked the history of Republicanism for half a century. The treachery and subterfuge by which they were disfranchised last fall had burned deep into their senses of fairness and justice, and the meeting promises to result in presenting a united and vigorous force in the coming campaign.

How this executive committee came into being was well explained yesterday. It members were regularly elected by the Republicans of the county prior to the unholy Long Beach convention, but when they found their rights ignored they bodily withdrew from the convention, and have held themselves together as the rightful representatives of the party.

Their attitude and temper toward the entire body of Republicans of the county was shown by the adoption of the following broad and generous resolution offered by F. C. Roberts of Long Beach:

ALL INVITED IN.

Whereas, it is the desire of this body to array under the banner of Republicanism every man and woman, irrespective of past differences, therefore, be it

Resolved, that every man and woman in the county desiring to affiliate with the Republican party, be most cordially invited to attend the open conference of that party to be held in Los Angeles at an early day.

Prior to this another resolution had been adopted, offered by Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, authorizing the two representatives on the executive committee from each legislative district, to recommend the name of one committeeman from each precinct in their district, later to be acted upon by the full committee.

When a full representation of the county is thus secured, the open conference referred to in the above resolution, will be called and all Republicans will have opportunity to express themselves.

Hon. Phil A. Stanton addressed the committee and gave a comprehensive and enthusiastic review of the situation in the State and the country. He declared his belief in the election of a Republican Congress and the turning out of the Democratic misrulers at the first opportunity. The South, he said, cannot dictate the result, but at least one-third of the Northern States must join to elect the next President of the United States. In this State, he is confident that the only thing necessary is for the Republicans to unite and present a solid front.

In urging the importance of registration, Mr. Stanton declared that, in his opinion, at least 75,000 voters registered as Republicans in the last gubernatorial election, who were not Republicans. He urged that all Republicans register as Republicans, but denounced the system of perjury that caused thousands to register as Republicans in the election referred to, with no intention of voting the ticket.

DEMOCRATS AND WORSE.

W. J. Variel declared that the Republican party has only been divided, with the result of electing Democrats and worse things to office, and urged getting together as speedily as possible. He then reviewed some of the disastrous results of the election of a Democratic administration.

"This unemployed situation," he said, "was undoubtedly brought about by Democratic bad management—primarily that was at the bottom of all this uncalled-for agitation."

Mrs. Foltz, in presenting her resolution, declared that "the Republican party is very much alive and always will be the living, vital force it always has been," and she paid her respects to the usurpers of the party's birthright.

ONE RUNNER NAMED.

Col. Richardson made an enthusiastic talk in which he warmly declared that it is not a question of little differences that should engross the attention of Republicans, but that the great principles of the party are at stake. He said who was to run for Governor against "Holy Hi" or for Lieutenant-Governor against Wallace, had nothing to do with the present issue. "As to the latter, however, I understand the statute of limitations will run against him," he added.

Many others spoke briefly on various subjects, concerning the proper steps to accomplish a reorganization. The executive committee will be filled immediately by the plan adopted, and a conference will be called in a very short time.

SQUAW'S BELT WITH HISTORY.

Unique Gift for a Woman in Los Angeles.

Tragedy of Northern Indian Life Revealed.

And Unique Death Verdict Also Explained.

With a history in which an Indian tragedy of almost half a century ago is strangely mixed with one of the queerest death verdicts of the early days, a dusty, ancient-looking squaw belt was brought to light yesterday in almost as remarkable a manner as it disappeared thirty-five years ago.

Mrs. John W. Wheeler of Oakland, who is visiting friends at No. 438 Westlake avenue, received the old belt as a Christmas gift from an Indian woman, known as Klamath Jennie, the recognized "chief" of the few remaining Klamath Indians of Siskiyou county—fifty years ago one of the strongest, most aggressive tribes in the mountainous district of Northern California, now a mere handful. Klamath Jennie was cook in the Wheeler family during the early days, and through her loyalty, Mrs. Wheeler has accumulated the largest collection of Klamath baskets in existence. With the gift came a letter in which the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of this belt, following the murder of a Humboldt Indian in 1878, is disclosed.

Back to the days when the Klamath and Humboldt Indians lived in tribal relations, does the history of this queer old squaw belt go, and one of the early-day murders and mysteries is recalled by the letter from Klamath Jennie, who became head of the tribe twenty years ago.

It was the story of a feud between a brave from the Klamath tribe and one from the Humboldt territory—a feud such as was common in those turbulent days, and could be wiped out only with blood. Thus it happened that when at noon one day a Humboldt named Johnnie, stalked majestically into the little hamlet of Ft. Jones, a mining camp town, those who knew him whispered that Indian Dick, the other party to the feud, would better be on his guard and someone hastened to warn him. The others repaired to the nearest bar to discuss the possible encounter.

GETS JOHNNIE FIRST.

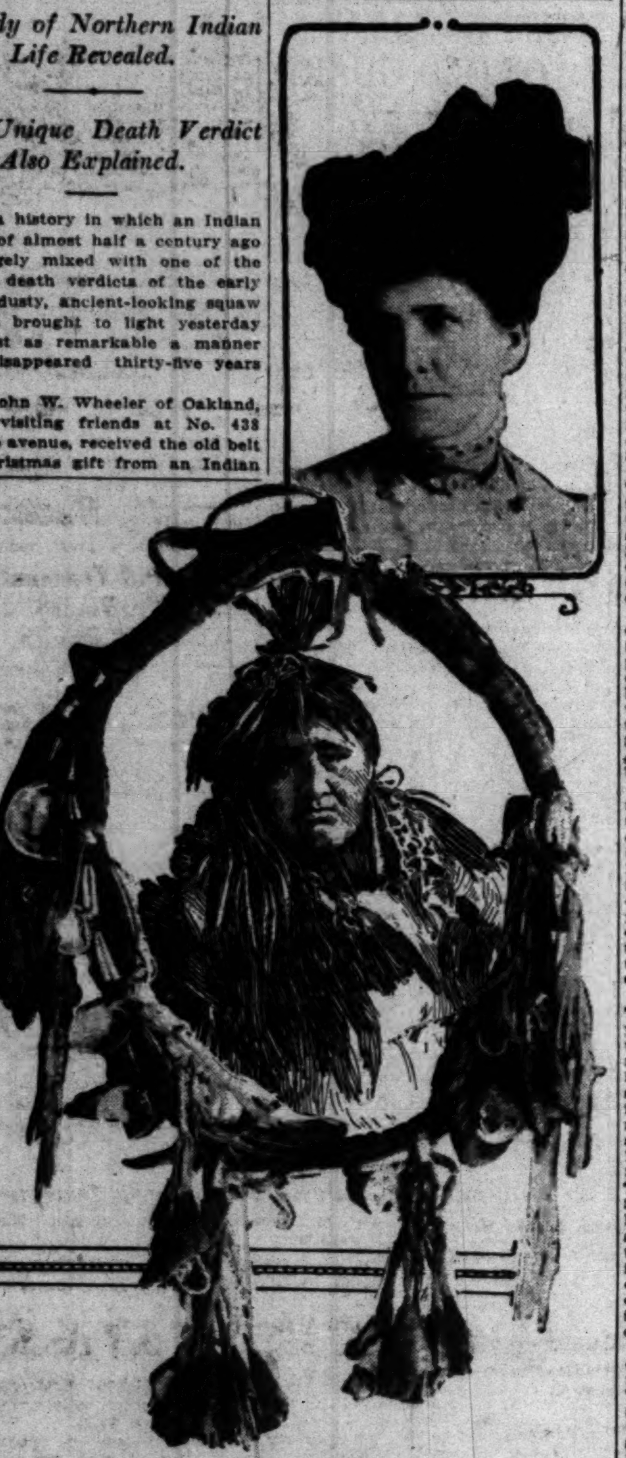
Toward sundown, a rider galloped into town with the news that Indian Johnnie was lying dead on the road at the edge of Scott River—shot through the heart.

Swiftly a posse was gathered and the little body of men who dashed to the scene, openly commented on the fact that Indian Dick evidently got Johnnie first. There was no difficulty in locating the spot where the killer stood when he shot, for the snow around a log thirty yards away told plainly how restless he had been while waiting for his victim. In the deep snow at the edge of the grade the Humboldt buck lay, the white blanket of the drift dyed crimson. Moccasin tracks led from the log to the body and then down the grade to the river's edge, where they were lost in the slow-moving water.

The deputy sheriff and his posse returned to town with the remains, and there one of the men noticed that the beautiful squaw belt that Johnnie had worn so proudly was missing. Evidently the killer had taken the trophy which it appears was evidence of the conquest of some squaw's heart. The deputy repaired to the little telegraph office where a single line joined Fort Jones with the outer world and a message was sent to the Sheriff at Yreka, eighteen miles distant. The message was unique—something like this: "Indian Johnnie of Humboldt tribe shot and killed by Indian Dick of the Klamaths. What shall I do?" In less than an hour the reply came: "Were they living in tribal relation?"

The deputy answered "Yes," whereupon the Sheriff wired: "Killed by unknown parties according to Squire Steel's ruling."

The deputy reported the finding to his posse and the men dispersed without comment, for the famous ruling of County Judge Steel, handed down five years before, was familiar and acceptable to all. The ruling was that the white man's law could not intervene where Indians were living in tribal relations. In such cases the Indians must make and execute their own laws. In this case clearly some law of the tribes had been broken and had as surely been "squared." Thus when the following morning a Coroner's jury brought a verdict of death by unknown parties not even a murmur of dissent was heard.



Tragic, romantic and historic.

Remarkable Indian belt received in this city yesterday, encircled by it the squaw who sent the relic and solved the mystery of its disappearance long ago, and Mrs. John W. Wheeler, above, the new possessor.

Likewise when a few days later Indian Oscar from the Humboldt tribe appeared, the miners looked the other way. Oscar sought out Indian Dick and the latter hurried into town. Because of his reputation for honesty he was able to borrow $150, which he said had to be paid to Johnnie's relatives. During the settlement the question of the missing squaw belt came up. Indian Dick stoutly maintained ignorance of its whereabouts. It now develops that he gave the belt to Klamath Jennie, who explains that she kept it because it was not good for a Humboldt Indian to have the belt belonging to a Klamath squaw. In the letter received by Mrs. Wheeler, Jennie states that the squaw whose belt Johnnie wore had a great deal to do with the shooting affair.

HAIR AND DEER HOOFS.

The belt is made of hair, each strand being braided from innumerable hairs, and these strands in turn being woven into the belt proper. Thin strips of buckskin reinforce it and form a zig-zag design. The belt is about five inches wide. From the lower edge nearly a hundred deer hoofs and many pieces of flint are strung on curiously woven thongs of buckskin and straw. Shells, beads and what was known as Indian money in those days finish the upper and lower edge.

With its bit of tragic history and dusky romance, the belt is an attractive link between the present and the days when the white man's law did not extend over the red man's wigwam.

NEGRO'S REGENERATION.

Dean of Howard University Tells of Uplift of Black Brethren Through System of Education.

The difference between a working man and a man working is the difference between the negro of two hundred years ago and the negro of today, Prof. Kelly Miller, dean of Howard University, Washington, D. C., told the City Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday. Howard University is the largest institution in the world devoted to the higher and professional education of the negro.

"This institution has a student body of over 1500 who are preparing to serve their race and the nation along the lines of leadership and useful service," said Dean Miller. "The negro was brought to this country to perform the rough work and to relieve the white race of drudgery. No account was taken at the time of his higher human qualities. For more than two centuries he was exploited merely as an instrument under the guidance and control of the higher intelligence of his master. The world is now learning that the only way to get efficient service is to quicken the human faculties of the individual who performs that service. Slavery and peonage have always proved to be a self-defeating policy. The negro's utility as a tool will depend upon his development as a man. What the world requires today is not so much a working man as a man working."

Auto Law Attacked.

in the course of a few days by every one of the 500 men of the police department.

While no such announcement has been made by the police department, it was generally assumed that no arrests under the law will be made until notification has been received from the Secretary of State that every tag has been issued for which application has been made. Herbert Drew, superintendent of the motorcycle division of the District Attorney's department, said yesterday that no arrests under the new act will be made in the county for the present.

FIRST LEGAL ACTION.

Opposition to the law was vigorous and widespread when it was before the Legislature. Every possible effort was made to have the objectionable features eliminated before it became a law. Failing in that, the Automobile Club of Southern California and other similar organizations prepared to attack the measure in the courts as soon as it became effective.

The first action was taken in the Superior Court of this city on the 17th ult. when the automobile club asked for an injunction restraining Gov. Johnson and other State officials from putting the law into effect. This petition has thus far neither been granted nor denied, and to adopt a procedure that would bring results more quickly habeas corpus proceedings in three cases have been taken directly to the Supreme Court in San Francisco.

Douglas Mitchell was arrested here Thursday and two men were arrested in San Francisco at the same time. All three of the actions to test the law are being taken on the same lines and in the Supreme Court. Just what procedure will be adopted in the actions decided upon yesterday has not been determined.

It is believed that few automobile owners have entirely ignored the law in spite of the fact that so large a proportion of them have failed to receive the tags. The automobile club has issued 45,000 protest notices, which would indicate that nearly all the applications from this end of the State have been made and the precaution of entering formal protest has been generally taken.

The question of whether or not the money paid for licenses will be returned in case the law is declared unconstitutional is one of the interesting phases of the situation. Gilbert A. McElroy, who is associated with Kuster in law practice and in handling this case for the automobile club, said yesterday that he is not prepared to express a definite opinion on the question of a possible refund but that entering a formal protest with the application is a wise precaution.

According to a telegram to The Times from Secretary of State Jordan yesterday, the total automobile registration in the State is 122,567 and the registration for 1913 was 31,535. Allowing for cars that have been destroyed or taken out of California, it is estimated that the total number now in commission and that will be affected by the law is in excess of 100,000. The license fee varies from $5 to $30, according to horse power. The declaration in the petition to the Supreme Court says that the average license fee is $11, but this is regarded as less than the actual amount. At that figure the amount to be collected is $1,100,000. In addition automobile owners will have to pay delivery charges on 100,000 sets of tags, an item of $40,000 to $50,000. The tags cost the State 21½ cents each.

Until the new law was enacted a charge of $2 was made for each automobile license, with no yearly tax. The new law says the license fee shall be paid every year. Because this imposes a double tax it is regarded as one of the most vulnerable features of the bill. A similar law was upheld in New York, but in that State it is provided that the license fee shall exempt automobiles from property tax.

SIMILAR LAW BEATEN.

In Ohio where a law similar to the California measure was enacted the Court of Common Pleas has declared it unconstitutional. This decision was rendered several weeks ago. Petition for a retrial was granted and the decision reaffirmed. Information concerning the second and sustaining decision was received by the automobile club's attorneys yesterday.

The petition filed by Attorney Kuster in the Mitchell case specifies one section of the Constitution of the United States and nine sections of the California constitution which are declared to be violated by the act. It further recites eighteen additional reasons why the act is illegal. Among them are the following:

That it is a revenue measure and not one of regulation. That it is oppressive and tends to unduly restrain the untrammeled exercise of the liberty of the individual. That it attempts to license a right common to all, but not a mere privilege. That it imposes special and peculiar disabilities and burdensome conditions upon a class arbitrarily selected from the general body of those who stand in precisely the same relation. That it unjustly and arbitrarily classifies persons and property.

That it attempts to license the use of property and does not purport to license an occupation, business or profession. That it imposes a double tax on automobiles in that they are subject to assessment and taxation as personal property.

In the petition for injunction in the Superior Court here the club undertakes to show that the license fee is exorbitant and unnecessary. At $3, the total would be $300,000, which, the petition avers, would be more than adequate and sufficient for carrying out the purposes and objects of the act.

JIM MORLEY GOES UNDER.

Poolroom Owner Files Petition in Bankruptcy with Debts and Assets Nearly Balancing.

James F. Morley, poolroom owner, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday afternoon in the United States District Court. He schedules his debts at $16,776.62, of which $15,276.62 are unsecured. The only secured liability is a note of $1500 due Baron Long of the Vernon Country Club for which Long holds as surety the petitioner's five-passenger Stearns automobile.

The assets amount to $16,168, consisting for the most part of life insurance policies for $10,000, claimed to be exempt under the law, as also his personal belongings valued at $150. His real estate is valued at $5000, consisting of the equity in an undivided one-half of nine and a half acres of land on Magnolia avenue, Corona, with water rights, that is already burdened with a mortgage of $3100. He returns carriages and two autos among his assets, the latter worth $500 each.

Among his debts is a note for $6500 due to the Merchants' National Bank, on which Dr. H. Bert Ellis is joint maker, and $3500 alleged to be due Timothy Shafer, on account of prize money offered at a bowling tournament held here February 16-25, 1912. He has 398 shares of the James F. Morley Syndicate Company that he appraises as worthless. His creditors number several score. Morley schedules the books of the Redondo Hotel Company among his possessions but sets no value on them.

New Line Across Arizona

though the most important gain will be in lowered grades. Another gain of considerable importance will be duplicated lines across a mountainous country.

In connection with this rumored improvement, the words of President Sproule while here some weeks ago are of interest. "We have many improvements contemplated by which service would be materially bettered. But a lax market for railroad securities prevents the doing of the work," he stated.

Sproule was speaking particularly of the plan to build a new line from Mojave to Bakersfield. The surveys for this road have been completed, but, as Sproule stated, "nothing can be done until we can secure money at a lower interest than at present."

Nevertheless, as Sproule made plain, the Southern Pacific is making plans for the future that will blossom into reality when the money is available. As the Southern Pacific's business between the East and West is constantly increasing, the Arizona cut-off, in the opinion of many railroad men, should have the "call" on all other improvements when money in any quantity is available.

JUDGE CRAIG TO TEACH.

Fills Special Chair in U.S.C. College of Law—Elementary Features to Be Specialized.

Judge Craig of the Superior Court will be the instructor of a special class in elementary law at the college of law, U.S.C., Dean Porter having made the announcement yesterday. The special class has just been organized and will begin work Monday and run through to February 3 with five recitations a week.

Judge Craig long has been identified with the college of law in an administrative capacity and as an instructor and consented to take the special elementary law class at the earnest solicitation of Dean Porter, who was anxious to have a man engaged in judicial work for the place. This will in nowise interfere with the judge's bench duties.

Students, who take up the study of elementary law with the special class will be able to enter on the second semester's work February 3, practically on a par with those students who began their studies with the first semester, it is stated.

HOW TRAVEL AFFECTS THE HO

Traveling people appreciate beautiful styles of interior decoration which are attributed to antiquity.

Experience and study alone can show a satisfactory result in home decorating and furnishing.

Barker Bros.' experts qualified and most competent advisers in dealing with any required period or style of design.

The great spirit of travel, characteristic of American people, is ever increasing, and has brought the nation into close touch with all the artistic principles and inspirations of the Old World. This thirsting for knowledge, apparently inherent, thoroughly justifies that "round-the-world" idea from which is derived all the benefits that stamp the interesting, cultured and broad-minded individual. It is the spirit of travel that has advanced this country in arts and sciences to rival every other country; it is the result of traveling that has raised the magnificent buildings and homes, and given the choice of the best styles and designs, moderating and adapting them to suit climate and modern requirements. It was ever the same. Our English ancestors at the time of the Renaissance, because they were divided from the rest of Europe by the English Channel, were nearly a century behind other countries of that continent in architecture, art, science and all domestic arrangements. They had not traveled. Only the ecclesiastics who made periodical pilgrimages to Rome, were permitted to participate in all the wonders of those beautiful countries beyond the sea." Thus inception in architecture, and its dependent offspring, furniture, was in the middle ages wholly due to ecclesiastical influence, and as the more gifted members of religious fraternities were moved from country to country to gain knowledge, as well as to impart it, it is impossible to determine how far design in art of this early period was really indigenous to England. As long as the monastic architect and his pupils were the originators of furniture, it was natural that such objects should be ecclesiastical and somewhat severe in character, for the manners and customs of all periods have had the strongest imprint on design. There was also a practical necessity for its solidity, as a man armed cap-a-pie must have required a very heavily constructed seat. It was therefore reserved for the artist, or a craftsman with strong artistic perception (and it must be remembered that a so-called company of cabinetmakers existed as early as 1480,) to evolve from the solid forms the lighter and more elegant creations that we are accustomed today to associate with the word furniture. For a long period the craftsman was entirely influenced by the architecture rounded him, and, being tive, he borrowed all required for his decoration from either ture, metal work or textiles.

It is to days of long ago illustration carries us. dining-room suite in the Gothic with a distinctive and simplicity embodying the dignity strength of character, will power of this remote and not too highly carved, most dust-proof and with a calm significance, it is a spiration for a cultured home in California.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Through a mix-up in handling steel bids for the big shed on Municipal Dock No. 1, the Board of Public Works has effected a saving of thousands of dollars to the city. New bids were opened yesterday.

Councilman Conwell yesterday devised a plan to use the city property at Fifth and Olive streets as a parking space for autos so the city may enjoy a revenue from the now unused space.

The Mayor yesterday reappointed Chief of Police Sebastian for another year at a special meeting of the commission.

The Board of Public Works yesterday ordered the Standard Oil Company to keep its wreckage away from the city outfall sewer wharf at Hyperion and to repair damage already done.

The quarter-million-dollar estate of Thomas P. Phillips is left in trust for the benefit of the widow and children, the minor sons being provided with incomes increasing in periods. Servants were remembered.

A liveryman, offender in the Juvenile Court, will be permitted probably to obtain a final decree of divorce and marry an attractive girl who became infatuated with him.

CITY WINS IN MIXUP ON BIDS.

LOWER FIGURES OBTAINED AFTER SECOND OPENING.

Saving of Thousands May Result from Complicated Orders of Board of Public Works for Steel Construction Work on Municipal Shed at the Harbor.

By a curious mix-up of bids on the new 1800-foot steel shed on Municipal Dock No. 1, the Board of Public Works has unwittingly saved the city thousands of dollars. This is the way it happened:

The board advertised for bids to be opened November 17, last. Then Sweetser and Baldwin, local agents for a patented steel door, complained to the Harbor Commission that the plans and specifications for the steel work were so drawn as to exclude competition and admit of only one type of steel door. The Harbor Commission raised a rumpus about it and the Board of Public Works announced that the bids then entered would be returned to bidders unopened. This caused the Union Iron Works, which had a bid prepared, to withhold it. Then the Board of Public Works changed its mind and when the date for opening the bids came around, decided to open the bids any how.

The bids showed that W. P. Kyle was the lowest with a bid of $88,978 and the Llewellyn Iron Works second with $94,991. With the bids made public the Union Iron Works complained, that because of the board's first decision to return the bids unopened and then the decision to open the bids, the company was barred from the competition and asked that a readvertisement be ordered. As this seemed eminently fair, the Board of Public Works readvertised for bids.

The new bids were opened yesterday and the Llewellyn Iron Works was lowest with a bid of $83,000, which is $11,991 lower than its original bid and $5978 lower that the original Kyle bid.

The U. S. Metal Products Company was the only bidder for the steel door frames upon which the City Engineer expects to hang the Ogden doors, a specially made door, approved in harbor construction by experts in many harbors. To this Sweetser and Baldwin take exception. The concern filed a letter with the Board of Public Works yesterday charging that the board has not felt inclined to have the specifications drawn as to allow free and equal competition. The Metal Products Company bid is $60,291 for the door frames.

TO PARK AUTOS.
CITY TO ENTER BUSINESS.

Councilman Conwell has a scheme which he will offer in the form of a resolution in the Council tomorrow morning that he expects will create a revenue of $40 a day for the city, besides extending a convenience to owners of autos who keep their machines downtown during the day. He proposes to have the city utilize the city property now vacant at the southwest corner of Fifth and Olive street to relieve congestion of autos in that quarter of the city.

The property is under the supervision of the Water Board, which once started to erect a building, but the work was never completed. Conwell's plan is to lay a floor on a level with the street and to build a runway from the street down into the basement, so that autos may be temporarily parked on the two levels. By stationing a city employee at the place, says Conwell, the city can collect a rental of auto space every day and will keep the place filled with cars. He estimates that at least $40 a day can be obtained on property that is now lying idle and producing nothing.

STILL CHIEF.
SEBASTIAN REAPPOINTED.

Chief of Police C. E. Sebastian yesterday was reappointed for another year by Mayor Rose. The announcement was made formally at a special meeting of the Police Commission.

In order to permit Sebastian to continue as Chief of Police the commission granted him another year's leave of absence as lieutenant, and the commission then approved the Mayor's action. The appointment sets at rest any wild-eyed rumors that there was a likelihood that Mayor Rose would not reappoint Sebastian.

"It was one of my campaign pledges," said Mayor Rose yesterday. "Chief Sebastian has made good and is making good in the office he holds, and I could do nothing else but reappoint him."

The Mayor would not say whether he will reappoint Fire Chief Eley, but it is believed that next week the head of the fire department will find himself continued by the Mayor's order. It is known that Mayor Rose is satisfied with Chief Eley's administration of the fire department.

ORDERS TO JOHN D.
BOARD SENDS OUT DEFI.

A clatter of tut-tuts and a parcel of pooh-poohs, with an added snap of the finger to make all of them impressive, accompanied an order from the Board of Public Works to John D. Rockefeller yesterday. The board discovered through the City Engineer that Rockefeller's property, known as the Standard Oil Company, is being scattered over the coast line, to the vast damage of the city's outfall sewer pier at Hyperion.

The recent heavy seas along the coast have menaced the city property by slamming against it the floating wreckage from the Standard Oil pier at El Segundo. This alarming condition, coupled with the fear that a continuation will mean damage to the outfall sewer, caused the board to send a hot warning to the Standard Oil to repair the damage at once and see to it that in future the Standard Oil property be kept from hazardous contact with municipal property.

CITY TO PAY.
GARBAGE PLANT EXPENSE.

The Board of Public Works has learned from the City Engineer that it will cost the city $15,075 to make preparations for the proposed garbage plant to be erected at Lenard street and the river by C. D. Crouch, who recently obtained a contract from the city. Some of the Crouch buildings have been located in Lenard street and Crouch asserts that under his contract the city will have to dedicate to him a part of the street. Inasmuch as plans have been made to run a storm sewer outlet along this street, the city's plans and Crouch's desires are likely to run counter.

That the whole contract between the Board of Public Works and Crouch for the erection of the new city garbage plant will stir the Council Monday there is not the slightest doubt. The City Engineer, in estimating what the city will have to do for the new Crouch plant, says two subway structures under double tracks will cost $7000; paving a twenty-one-foot strip 1475 feet long will cost $4650; excavation will cost $1515 and water main and vitrified sewer pipe will cost $1910. The work covers Lenard street from Santa Fe avenue east to the Santa Fe tracks.

On Home Products.

Because the City Engineer is compiling a report on the use of home and foreign materials in street paving work, the Council yesterday "passed the buck" on the controversy started by the Chamber of Commerce, which favors the use of home materials on all public work. The Public Works Committee of the Council yesterday sent in a report putting the matter up to the engineer. Councilman Reed asserted that he believed the city should use any material, price and quality being equal, no matter what part of the United States it came from.

Two New Inspectors.

Health Commissioner Powers yesterday appointed two inspectors of animal slaughter, to serve until after the civil service examination on January 17. The positions were recently created by an ordinance passed by the Council. Lee G. Shiffler and J. N. Dunlap were named by Dr. Powers. The inspectors will get $110 a month.

PROVIDES WELL FOR HIS FAMILY.

QUARTER-MILLION ESTATE LEFT IN TRUST BY WILL.

Servants Remembered and Children to Receive Increasing Amounts Annually—Liveryman Is Held for Contributing to Delinquency of Infatuated Girl.

The $254,008.99 estate of Thomas P. Phillips of Pasadena is left in trust for the benefit of the widow, Mrs. Alice C. Phillips, and the four children, in accordance with the terms of the will filed yesterday for probate. The petition was filed by the Union Trust & Savings Bank of Pasadena, trustee, and shows the estate to consist of cash, real estate, valued at $75,000; stocks and bonds, $34,000, and bills receivable, $143,677.

The will is dated April 26, 1913, and there are two codicils, one dated June 30, 1913, and the other, October 31, 1913. The bank asks the court to ascertain the status of the last codicil. The first codicil bequeaths $2000 cash for the education of Nelson V., and Thomas P. Phillips, Jr., the minor sons. The second codicil refers to an indebtedness of $25,000, due to banks from W. E. Phillips, a son, secured by bonds of the Chicago and Illinois Railroad, to be charged to his share of the estate.

Among the bequests is one of $200 to Miss Mary Bell. The servants of the family are remembered. Phillips also recommends that his family will continue to contribute to worthy charitable objects and philanthropic work. Mrs. Phillips receives a special bequest of $1000 and the furnishings of the Pasadena home. At her death her share of the estate goes to her sons in trust.

William E. Phillips receives half of his share at the end of ten years, the remainder being in trust as long as he lives. The daughter, Sarah E. Phillips, receives her share on the same terms.

The minor sons, Nelson and Thomas, receive a monthly allowance beginning with $50 at the age of 10 years, until at the age of 30 years, when the allowance will be $150 a month. At 30 years they will receive one-third of their share, and the remaining two-thirds at 40.

The trustees are instructed to refuse loans to beneficiaries except in extreme cases. The Union Bank, Mrs. Phillips and Sarah E. Phillips, are named executors.

INFATUATED MISS.
MARRIAGE IN PROSPECT.

The sorry case of Bertha Razee, aged 17 years, whose personal adornment is calculated to make her the adored sweetheart of a deserving young man, brings into the limelight C. H. Dixon, a liveryman of No. 542 South Figueroa street, about 25 years her senior. Because of her infatuation for Dixon, a married man, but separated from his wife, Dixon was in the Juvenile Court yesterday charged with contributing to her delinquency.

An interlocutory decree has been granted in the Dixon divorce suit and the final decree is expected in a month's time. Judge Taft yesterday elected to continue the case that length of time, having in mind, it is understood, the mismarriage of autumn and spring. Deputy District Attorney McCartney was prepared to prosecute the case against Dixon with more than ordinary severity, as the evidence in his hands is alleged to show that Miss Razee is not Dixon's first victim.

Sergeant Hoover and Patrolman O'Gara, on the report of neighbors, raided Dixon's sleeping-room over his livery stable office and found Miss Razee with him. They say full and empty bottles of beer were plentiful in the room, not to speak of cigarette stubs.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Laura A. Ragan, of Redlands, is heartbroken over the shame that has come to her daughter. The latter met Dixon when the family was residing in this city. Dixon called at Bertha's home, but Mrs. Ragan objected strenuously to the calls. She says that Bertha formerly abhorred drinking, but that now she seems to like liquor.

Mrs. Ragan, it is said, will oppose Bertha's marriage to Dixon and as the former is under the legal age, the marriage cannot take place without her consent. Bertha, apparently is standing by Dixon, even to the extent of saying she is of legal age.

ATTORNEY HEARD.
DISBARMENT PROCEEDINGS.

The disbarment proceedings of S. A. D. Gray, which started before Judge York yesterday, was continued until Tuesday after Mrs. Alice Stanley testified to the main facts in the allegation against the attorney. She said that after receiving a notification from the bank where she had $400 on deposit she consulted Gray, who accompanied her to the bank.

The money was withdrawn and Gray persuaded her not to deposit it in another bank, but to go with him to his office for some bitters, as Mrs. Stanley was not well. In the office, she testified, Gray plied her with whisky, the result being that he retained the $400. She says he has refunded about $104, and frequent visits to his office have failed to produce the balance.

Gray denies he owes Mrs. Stanley the money. He drew up his own answer without his attorney, former Judge Pierce, seeing it, and admitted when a lawyer represents himself he has a fool for a client. He is represented by Pierce and Attorney Clark. The Bar Association is represented by Attorneys Woolwine, Wellborn and Dean.

WORTHY SERVICES.
COURT FAVORS NURSE.

Miss Lauretta C. Holden, who was recompensed for her services as nurse and companion for the late George M. Sharp of Santa Monica by deeds to property worth $9000, was declared victor in Judge Wilbur's court yesterday over Mrs. L. Pearl Baldwin, the daughter of Emma Jane Smith, adopted daughter of Sharp, in a suit to set aside the deeds on the ground of fraud and undue influence.

In giving judgment for Miss Holden the court held there was no proof of fraud or undue influence. It developed that Miss Holden had nursed Sharp without salary. Mrs. Baldwin alleged she was the heir to the estate and entitled to the property deeded to Miss Holden.

GOES TO TRIAL.
FORGERY ALLEGED.

The Strong family row will be aired in court. This suit involves Will A. Strong and his sisters, Hattie and Alice B. Strong, who ask for his removal as administrator of the estate of their father, A. F. M. Strong. Strong left property valued at [illegible] 662.36. Among the assets was a $1100 note secured by mortgage and signed by Pearl and Fred A. [illegible]

The sisters claim that the assignment of this note to Will A. Strong is a forgery and that the note belongs to the estate. Strong demurred to the complaint and yesterday Judge Houser overruled the demurrer, which throws the suit into court for trial.

The court held that sufficient had been stated in the petition to constitute ground for Strong's removal as administrator, if the facts are sustained.

After several small bequests the residue of the estate, consisting principally of stock in the United Wholesale Grocery Company, was given to the five children, Clara E., Mary C. and Rhone Bosbyshell, Anne E. [illegible], Elsie B. Warner and Edward C. Bosbyshell. The latter and the widow are named executors and filed the petition for the probate of the will.

BURBANK FLOAT WORK OF ART.

FIRST ENTRY FROM THAT CITY TAKES PRIZE.

Ceres, Standing in Real Grain Field, Pours Bounteous Products of Fertile District from a Cornucopia Made of Six Thousand Roses Set in Smilax.

BURBANK, Jan. 3.—One of the most artistic floats in the parade of the Rose Tournament at Pasadena New Year's Day, was that from this city, and it captured the second prize in class A, the first prize going to the local Chamber of Commerce. This is the first year in which Burbank had an entry in the Pasadena pageant.

The float represented a grain field in the midst of which stood Ceres, goddess of the harvest. The grain was real, having been lifted bodily, stalks, root and earth, from the land of Burbank, and transplanted on the platform of the float. Ceres held in one arm a basket of grapes and with the other hand held up the tip of a great cornucopia, or "horn of plenty," from the mouth of which seemed pouring the products of the fertile section, including an enormous pumpkin, rosy apples, watermelons and vegetables. The cornucopia alone required 6000 roses in the making. Its background was of smilax.

The sides of the float were covered with burr-oak leaves, [illegible] so as to make a smooth surface, [illegible] the name "Burbank" shining [illegible] harmonizing color, the letters being made of leaves of dusty miller glued onto cardboard. An enormous dragon's head, originally from Japan, which has been in many pageants in this country, swayed in lifelike manner from the front of the float.

Ceres, in the person of Miss [illegible] Hanscom, stood with hair reaching to her knees, and dressed in a Grecian costume of white silk, with pale green drapes, and around a low neck a trimming of asparagus fern. A wreath of ferns and stalks of grain was on her head. Miss Hanscom was one of the committee which designed and decorated the float, the other members being Miss Mattie Morrison, Miss Pearl Palmer and Mr. [illegible]

BRYAN'S LATEST BEVERAGE.

The palate of Mr. Bryan has been lured from grape juice. The machinations of Bacchus have not enmeshed him in the lure of alcohol, but it has drawn his affection to a new concoction that came from the culinary department of the Peruvian Ambassador, and for want of a better name it may be called "mock champagne." Bubbles it has, and also a trace of the delicate golden color, but the ingredients are given out as selzer water and pineapple juice. Perhaps the proper manner in which to mix and drink it will serve as the subject for another Chautauqua lecture.

WON'T DO IT.

President Wilson has, it is said, directed Gen. Carranza to punish Jesus Madrigal for slaying W. O. Robertson, an American mining man from San Antonio.

That is commendable and patriotic on the part of our President. But suppose Gen. Carranza should follow the example of President Huerta of Mexico, and President Gomez of Venezuela, in disobeying the directions of President Wilson, and should reply in such diplomatic phrase as the big bull moose might use: "I am continually astonished at the goodness of God in permitting me to live in the same world with Your Excellency. But with renewed assurances of my distinguished consideration I humbly inform Your Excellency that before I will permit Your Excellency to dictate to this government what it shall do or leave undone, I will see Your Excellency and your noble Secretary of State in hell beating tanbark."

ASSUMPTIONS.

Have you ever tried to separate what we call the senses from what we call the soul, and has your reason admitted the futility of the attempt? When the waves from a violin string strike the ear you say you hear, but why is it that those vibrant strings do not also hear when your voice strikes them? When an object comes within the radius of your eye its image is reflected on some fine, conscious canvas of your brain and you say you see, but why is it that a mirror, which also reflects objects, does not also see? May it not be because it is you who are conscious of the senses rather than because the senses make you conscious of yourself? And is it not logically fair to assume that the you which is conscious of the senses is not dependent for sensations upon any part of your body or upon any objective point? What we are we do not know. Science, Philosophy and Religion, those three wise men, attempt to explain, but fall back in staggering defeat. It seems that all we can do is to question the reality of things and to wonder at the immensity of the dream.

IMPROVED RELATIONS.

All right-minded people will view with satisfaction the improved relations between the German and British peoples. For in birth, traditions and aims they are close relations. Close relations sometimes, however, are the most liable to frictions and jealousies. There has been much friction between these two branches of the old Teutonic stock; there is still considerable rivalry. But common sense and common interests are smoothing out imaginary grievances and devising ways to settle real disagreements.

Any supposition of an actual alliance is of course far-fetched. Any report of concerted action directed against America is absurd and ridiculous. Both nations desire before anything else the friendship of the western hemisphere. A rupture with the United States will cut off the most advantageous trade routes from a European nation. But we believe that both Germany and Great Britain are animated by higher motives in their evident efforts to promote and preserve international amity. The desire for universal peace belongs to all nations. Healthy rivalry along pacific lines is the best antidote for war. America and Germany and Great Britain without any alliance can better learn how to understand one another.

TWO WILSONS.

President Woodrow Wilson of the United States and President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor are at "outs." The latter calls the former an "ingrate" for not preventing the indictment of labor-union miners who engaged in a "labor dispute" in West Virginia by beating non-union workers to a pulp and setting fire to their cabins. The excuses and apologies of President Wilson to President Gompers have not yet been made public.

There is also a ruction in the department of Secretary of Labor Wilson. The president of the miners' union at Globe, Ariz., accuses Secretary Wilson of "five months' subserviency to the copper barons of Calumet, Mich.," and of being "inactive and academic" in dealing with the Calumet strike and the treatment accorded Moyer and Tanner.

Secretary of Labor Wilson does not deny the right of Bright, president of the Globe (Ariz.) Miners Union, to dictate how the Department of Labor should be run. The Secretary drops promptly upon his marrow bones, kisses the mud on the shoes of Bright, denies inactivity and says to Bright, in substance: "If you know of anything that my department can do that has not already been done, wire me and I will be pleased to obey your orders."

The Democratic voters of the United States were led by their noses to the polls to vote for Wilson. They did not really know that they were voting for Gompers.

A NEW STATE CONSTITUTION?

The question whether California should have a new State Constitution is forcefully and luminously discussed in this issue of The Times (Part VI, Page 6,) by Hon. Frank H. Short of Fresno. He calls attention to the palpable fact that any attempt to rewrite the Constitution would create vast dissatisfaction from many sources; that all concerned could not be contented; that the formulation would probably pass into the control of impractical men who would be more bent on legislating theories than fundamental principles; and that the whole would probably develop into more of a hodge-podge than the present Constitution, which is called a patchwork of amendments.

The last Legislature passed a provision enabling the citizens of California to vote on whether a constitutional convention should be called for the purpose of rewriting the Constitution. If it were possible to write a constitution that dealt simply and plainly with essentials (similar to the Constitution of the United States) we might more actively sympathize with the movement. But there is no question that proposed constitutional convention would resolve itself into a bitter factional fight, which would ultimately terminate in trades and alliances between various cliques to secure pet provisions. The result would be a sorry mess.

MACGRATH'S NEW SERIAL.

Harold MacGrath writes the zippy, rollicking, clean fiction with a punch in every paragraph and his latest and greatest novel is being published serially in The Times, beginning with this issue (Part III, Page 28.) It is one of the cleverest stories ever written—so remarkable that the Selig Polyscope Company has dramatized "The Adventures of Kathlyn," taking twenty-six full-length reels to produce it, and they are being shown two reels at a time, two weeks apart, in leading moving pictures of Los Angeles and other parts of the United States.

Millions of people are talking about it, millions of people are seeing it, but few ever had the opportunity of reading it. That is why The Times is publishing it at this time.

MacGrath has a style that is all his own: he blends humor and adventure into a gripping story and never for a moment slackens the excitement that is always created in the first chapter. The story of Kathlyn deals with the adventures of a beautiful and daring California girl who finds herself amid the savage tribes of Hindustan, where she is imperiled by jungle beasts and brigands.

The serial will appear in every Sunday issue of The Times, keeping pace with the dramatized version as presented in the moving-picture theaters.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH SUFFRAGETTES.

Methods of promoting votes for women differ in this country from those followed in England. No American suffragettes would strip Secretary Bryan's breeches from him when he ascended the steps of the State Department. In the height of the contest in California unoccupied dwellings were safe from the torch of any female incendiary, and no man's tomato patch was ever denuded of ripe fruit to be thrown at official varlets who declined to acquiesce in votes for women.

American methods in non-suffrage States will probably prove as efficient, even if not as drastic, as British methods. The telegraph advises us that Gen. Rosalie Jones with her banded sisterhood of reformers started from the Van Cortland Park terminal of the subway in New York City on their second annual suffrage pilgrimage to Albany, singing as they go:

"Tramp, tramp, tramp, the girls are marching,
Marching like a grand majestic sea;
They march with skirts that need no starching,
To show up freedom's priceless leg I see."

Exactly how the ladies demonstrate woman's fitness for the ballot by taking eight days to walk to Albany, at a cost of not less than $8 "per" for meals and lodgings, instead of riding there in less than eight hours on Pullman cars at one-third the cost, is not clear.

There is more method in the madness of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. She combines personal economy with patriotic devotion to a cause. She has declared that she will not pay an income tax; that a government conducted by men for men, shall obtain no tribute or recognition from her; that her great, great, very great grandmothers fought seven years against the tyranny of a government which taxed them without giving them any power in the body which imposed the taxes. The watchword of the present struggle must be like that of 1776. "Taxation without representation is tyranny." Women, and minors, and corporations which own skyscrapers cannot vote and therefore should pay no taxes.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw defied the deputy internal revenue assessor—the myrmidon of a tyrannical government—who asked her to fill out and sign an income-tax blank. With jeers—and a broom—she drove him from her front-door steps.

The value of the lady's resistance to tyranny was somewhat depreciated later by the discovery that she had no income of any kind whatever from any source whatever.

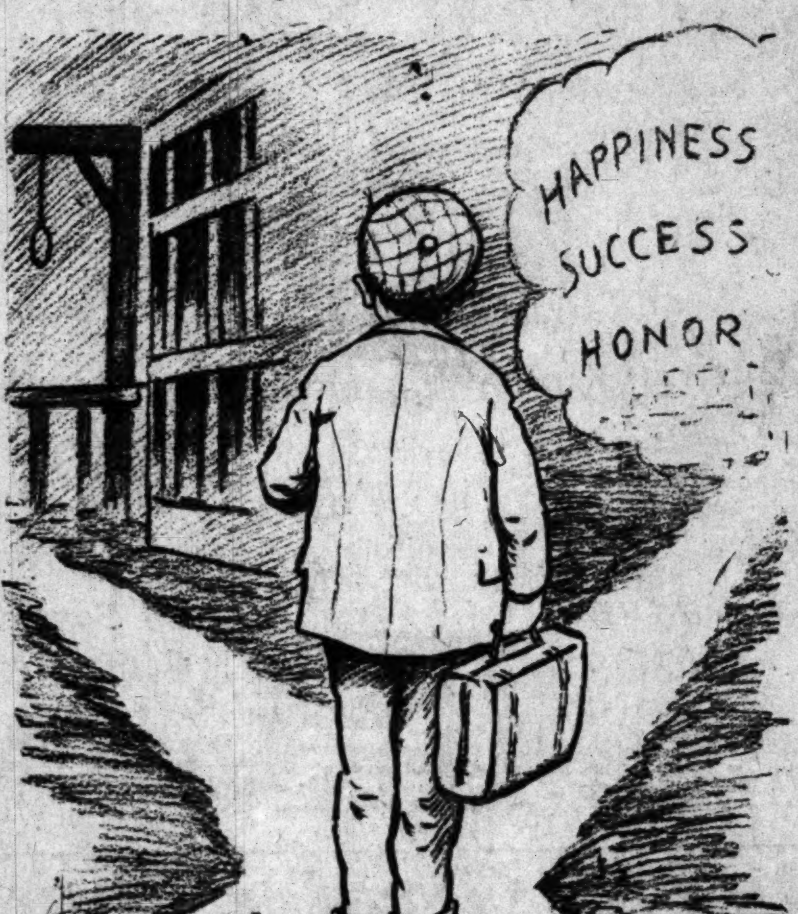
FLORAL YEAR.

If it is never too late to mend, it is also never too early to begin. The great exposition year will soon be upon us when California will act as hostess to our own people and all the nations of the world.

For though the British and German governments may refuse to participate officially in the San Francisco celebration, the peoples of these two countries mean to enjoy the good things offered them by the citizens of California. All doubt on this point is dispelled by the loud protest of Germans and Britishers against the narrow attitude adopted by their respective governments.

The splendid fifty-four-page supplement of the London Times (a worthy addition to our own Midwinter Number) pointing out the resources and advantages of the Pacific Coast, expresses the views of business men in England, while a well-pitched editorial from the same influential journal contains a serious protest against the blundering policy of the British government in regard to the exposition.

Keep to the Right.



Make no mistake; the world is coming to the Pacific Coast.

San Francisco will not monopolize these vast crowds. Not one individual but will also wish to witness the beauties of Los Angeles and the surrounding country. While other features will not be subordinated, we have decided to make our wealth of flowers a leading attraction in the Southland. The time is short. We need to get busy right away.

The resolution adopted by the 1915 entertainment committee, urging the Board of Supervisors to appropriate a quarter-million of dollars for this and similar purposes, should be immediately acted upon. To start the ball rolling there is no time except the present. Well started is half-finished. Such an earnest of good intention on the part of our people as a whole will cause private citizens to open their purses in response and add to the general success of the movement.

Southern California is already known in all quarters of the globe as the land of sunshine and flowers. The sunshine is provided by nature. It needs no appropriation. But the flowers are also the work of man's hand assisted by nature. The only limit to which their growth can be extended around Los Angeles is man's appreciation and man's industry. Our citizens appreciate the beautiful and rejoice in industry. So the limit is a long way off.

Such a display as could and should be made here of the fairest and sweetest and most gorgeous floral effects in nature, such a demonstration of the variety and fecundity of flower life as is only possible in Southern California, will attract as permanent settlers thousands of the best, most intelligent and refined of our exposition visitors. The flower lover is always a desirable citizen.

Opportunity is knocking loudly at our doors. The opportunity to have and to hold the best in humanity by displaying what is best in nature. Flowers and sunshine and the song of birds; what other land has such a heritage? A little work, a little hustle, a little foresight, now while the time is ripe, will make the handiwork of man worthy of the beneficence of nature. In Southern California, after 1915, every year will be a floral year more abundant and complete. Our flowers will not be removed with the exposition buildings in San Francisco.

POOR FINANCIAL SCHEME.

Perennially new financial schemes are concocted to collect money. Some of them are legitimate; a very few are trustworthy; many are crooked; and the majority are put forward honestly but with nothing substantial to recommend them.

For the past two or three years there has appeared weekly a magazine called "The California Outlook." From the beginning it has been the personal organ of Hiram Johnson, Chester Rowell and such other politicians as stood in their favor. No one knew who actually owned it—and no one actually did. It was a weekly campaign document.

Now comes the Outlook saying: "This paper has no actual ownership," and so therefore it has "been decided to incorporate for $25,000 with 25,000 shares of stock at par value of $1." The subscribers will be permitted to vote for the directors.

The paper is purely a political organ—one that has always been the flattering mirror of Johnson and his followers, and has apparently existed by subsidies from those who found it pleasing to their vanity.

Now the people are asked to invest their money in it as a business proposition. People are urged to send money to the Outlook for stock although the Outlook has no "actual ownership," therefore who is to be responsible for the money and the use to which it is put?

For politicians it may be a good investment, since they only want kind things said of them. But for the investor, who wants interest on his money, the Outlook does not offer anything more substantial than a promise to try and be a "financial success." The total amount of money desired is only $25,000. Are Hiram Johnson, Chester Rowell and other professional politicians allied with the magazine so poor that they cannot afford to invest $25,000 if they were confident that the magazine would be a financial success? The Times believes that it would be nearer the truth to say that its future does not look prosperous and whoever is back of the California Outlook would give the poor investors a chance to lose money.

AN ABSURD ATTEMPT AT PIRACY.

Section 5370 of the Federal Statutes provides that "Every person who, upon the high seas, or in any haven, basin or bay; or in any river where the sea ebbs and flows, commits the crime of robbery, in or upon any vessel, or upon any ship's company of any vessel, or the lading thereof, is a pirate, and shall suffer death."

Section 5323 provides that "Every person who knowingly aids, abets, causes, procures, commands or counsels another to commit any murder, robbery, or other piracy upon the seas, is an accessory before the fact to such piracies, and every such person being thereof connected shall suffer death."

Under this law the two fools—for they were fools—who attempted to rob the passengers and crew of the steamer Willamette off Point Vincente on her voyage from Los Angeles to Seattle, and their coadjutors on board the launch which steamed alongside the Willamette, all incurred the death penalty. That the two pirates were overpowered and ironed followed as a matter of course, for how could two men hope to conquer the officers, crew and passengers of an ocean steamer? That the men in the launch will be captured is almost equally certain, for there is not a harbor, bayou, inlet, or place where a skiff could land between Nome and San Diego within reach of a telegraph station where tidings of the deed, with a full description of the launch, were not conveyed by wireless, within an hour or two of the transaction. There is not a vessel on the Pacific Ocean between Asia and America that carries a wireless plant that is not on the lookout for the pirates. "All space is a universal eye" for their apprehension, and that they will speedily be brought to justice is almost inevitable.

Piracy as a crime has ceased to exist for the greater part of a century. There are no more Morgans, or Kidds, or Lafittes. It requires capital to procure and equip a pirate ship, and capitalists are not likely to venture their dollars in so dangerous an enterprise. Even before the construction of the overland railroad, when the gold of California was carried east by steamer, the only attempt at piracy was made by men who carried Confederate commissions which enabled them to avoid the death penalty, and their effort at piracy was baffled by the vigilance of the commander of the steamer.

Death seems a severe punishment for such a fool proceeding as that of the men who failed in the attempt to rob the passengers and crew of the Willamette. But the safety of those who travel by sea is a paramount consideration, and they should be protected by laws that might be considered unnecessarily drastic on shore.

JAPAN ASKS A FAVOR.

A singularly fortunate chance to wipe from the minds of certain Japanese the impression that this country has an animus against them was offered when the Japanese Ambassador at Washington called upon the State Department asking that subjects of the Mikado be protected from the rebel troops in Mexico. Mr. Bryan being absent—as usual—Acting Secretary Moore promised to notify American Consuls to extend the same care to the Japanese as to citizens of the United States.

The Japanese feel an apprehension because the Federal troops are being supplied with arms, ammunition and supplies from Japan, but, as the Ambassador pointed out, the contracts were made last April.

Carranza and Villa, in resorting to every possible method to crush the government of Huerta, have been greatly exasperated by the manner in which the Federals continue to obtain the munitions of war from Japan, and, it is reported, have threatened to retaliate on all Japanese who come within their reach.

Our government seems to have much influence with the rebel leaders—at least Carranza has protested in lengthy epistles to President Wilson abundant admiration and friendship for the American people—and that influence could be put to a proper use by insuring the protection of the Japanese who are guilty of no more of an offense than being natives of a country whose merchants are fulfilling army contracts on schedule.

MEXICAN CRUELTIES.

BY S. P. POLAND.

The recent murderous order of Gen. Villa, the self-appointed commander of one division of the rebel forces in Mexico, to drive the Federals out of Northern Mexico and take no prisoners (reported on December 24, 1913,) is but another application of the ferocious cruelty practiced among the early races in Mexico. This order differs from the customs of the Aztecs under Montezuma, who ruled the country at the time of the Spanish Conquest by Cortez in 1519, in that the Aztecs endeavored to capture, rather than to kill their enemies in order to obtain a large number of victims to be sacrificed at their altars. Human life seemed to be of little value as against the superstitions and fanaticisms of the race.

In their mythology, the Aztecs appealed to a plurality of deities, of which there were thirteen principals and over 200 inferiors. Huitzilopochtli, the god of war, was chief among the deities, as the patron deity of the nation. Prisoners were reserved for several years for the celebration of important events, which usually included human sacrifices. It is stated on reliable authority, that in 1486, over 70,000 victims were sacrificed at the dedication of the great temple to their god of war. Various writers estimate the yearly sacrifices, as practiced by the Aztecs, in excess of 20,000 persons. In time of drought, sacrifices of infants and young children were offered to Tlaloc, the god of rain. At their gladiatorial sacrifices, the victim was forced to fight, alternately, a number of Mexicans. Should he defeat all of them, his life was spared, but more often he was defeated and sacrificed in the usual way. At the coronation of Montezuma, there was a sacrifice of captives taken in an expedition against a rebellious province.

The Toltecs preceded the Aztecs as the rulers of Mexico. They were of a peaceful nature, observing many festival days with song, dances and processions of women and children bearing offerings of fruit, maize and odoriferous gums. Sacrifices of animals, and particularly of a great number of quail which were consumed at their feasts, were offered at their altars, but never of human beings. The benign influence of the Toltecs appears to have disappeared about the twelfth century.

The more warlike customs of the succeeding rulers offer ample proof to fix the origin of human sacrifices about 200 years previous to the conquest, although the exact date is somewhat uncertain.

The brutalities of the time were not confined to the Aztecs alone. The Spaniards resorted to treachery and massacre almost as barbarous as that of the Mexicans. The Aztecs were accustomed to hold an annual festival in May, in honor of their war god, consisting of religious songs, dances and sacrifices. Alvarado, one of Cortez's commanders, granted the request for the festival on conditions that they omit the sacrifices and come unarmed, as directed by Cortez. While the Aztecs were engaged in their religious ceremonies and dances, unaware of the trap into which they had fallen, Alvarado ordered his men to attack them. The one-sided struggle was short and brutal, all of the Aztecs were killed, the number being placed by conservative writers at from 600 to 800 persons.

The massacre of the Cholulans, who by intrigue had assembled in a large square in the city, offers an awful example of the atrocities of the time. Learning of a conspiracy against the Spaniards, Cortez, in self-defense, feigned a desire to leave the city, and asked for 2000 men to assist in transporting his supplies. The Cholulans readily responded, but in a greatly increased number, believing it would assist them in their conspiracy. Admitting the accusation of conspiracy, the leaders realizing their helpless condition were powerless to resist the prearranged attack of the Spanish soldiers. Cortez reported 3000 slain, but other accounts place the number at 6000 and over.

With headquarters at Texcoco, and an alliance with the Tlaxcalans, a tribe of Indians the most bitter enemies of the Aztecs, Cortez planned an attack on Iztapalapan, a prosperous city but a few miles from the City of Mexico. The ruthless massacre of more than 6000 persons of all ages and conditions is a matter of history. Cortez should, however, be given full credit for attempting to check the fierce onslaught of the Tlaxcalans, whose sole desire was to exterminate the Aztecs. The number of persons who perished during the final siege and occupation of the City of Mexico by the Spaniards was estimated by Cortez to be 117,000. The loss of the Spaniards was small, but the reported loss of their allies was about 30,000.

Other hostilities of the Spaniards and their allies are recounted, and in all cases an element of treachery prevails. The same treachery and cruelty exists with the Mexicans of today in their guerrilla warfare, modified but little by modern civilization.

Effect of Little Things.

[Atlantic Monthly:] We love little things; we hate little things; we fear little things; our lives are knit up with little things from the time we are born to the day we die.

Big things draw us up to heaven or crush us down to hell. Little things live beside us on the earth, eat and sleep with us, laugh and grumble with us, catch the early train with us, or make us miss it; irritate and appease us—never leave us alone for a minute.

That is why they are so much more important than the big things—the things that only come once in a way, at long intervals, and even then are nearly always the result of a hundred and one little things combined.

To be crushed by a large misadventure is natural, but to fall a victim to a series of petty misfortunes is humiliating. There are many who would prefer to break their necks once and for all by falling off a mountain than to bruise their whole bodies and dislocate their tempers by the daily stumbling over a molehill. It is the little things that count—the satisfaction of climbing Mt. Olympus is a poor sort of attainment if the scores and scores of pleasant details which wait upon success be absent.

The Open Door.

[Washington Star:] "There seems to be a contest for your position!"

"Yes," answered the Mexican jail warden. "It is very much prized because of its social opportunities. Sooner or later you get a chance to meet all the country's best people."

INDIAN ATTACK VIVID IN MIND.

SURVIVOR OF MASSACRE TELLS HOW SHE ESCAPED.

Early Days Recalled by Septuagenarian, All of Whose Relatives Were Killed in Colorado Uprising. Fled Under Cover of Smoke from Burning Emigant Wagons.

After many thrilling experiences as a pioneer in Colorado, Mrs. Sarah C. Bowman, aged 76 years, is quietly passing the sunset of life in California. For nine years she has been a member of a colony of artist and literary workers at Carmel-by-the-Sea, near Monterey. She is in this city for the winter, making her temporary home at the Westminster.

Mrs. Bowman, her baby and a negro nurse were the only survivors of an Indian massacre at Plum Creek, Colo., in 1864. The child died while the survivors were hidden in a canyon and the mother carried the body for three days until she reached a ranch-house.

After Mrs. Bowman had seen thirty-five of her friends and relatives slain by fiendish Apache Indians she escaped under shelter of the smoke from the burning wagons.

Siting in a chair in the lobby of the hotel where she could watch the passing crowd yesterday the little woman with silver hair told of the tragedy which is still vivid in her memory and will be until death, she says.

"My baby and I and the nurse were covered with bedclothes in the bottom of the wagon," she began. "The Indians killed everyone else and didn't find us. The fiends took all of the provisions that they could load on their ponies and then began setting fire to the wagons.

"There was bacon and other provisions in many of the wagons and a dense smoke rose from the fire. While our wagon was enveloped in the dark cloud we urged on the horses and got away. We managed to keep the smoke between us and the Indians.

"We had several terrible days of suspense while concealed in a canyon. The death of my baby was a climax to this horror. We finally reached a ranch-house and were taken in charge by a rescue party."

SIXTY YEARS WEDDED.

Los Angeles Couple, Married in Quebec, Spent Third of the Three-Score Here.

Sixty years of wedded life, nearly twenty of which have been spent in Southern California, is the somewhat unusual experience celebrated last evening by Benjamin Wilson and his wife of No. 721 Carondelet street, this city. The anniversary was marked by a dinner at 6 o'clock at the home of Henry W. Wilson, one of the four sons born to the couple, who lives at No. 1325 Woolsey avenue, at which four generations were present. The dinner was followed by a reception attended by a large number of relatives.

The Wilsons were born in the Province of Quebec, the husband eighty-three years and the wife seventy-nine years ago. They were married in the same Province. Their married life, for the most part, was spent in the Province of Ontario, near London, until they removed to Southern California nearly twenty years ago.

Four children were born to them—all sons—three of whom live in this city and all follow the same line of business, that of building. The eldest son, William Wilberforce Wilson, still resides in Canada. The three sons living in this city are Arthur E., Henry W., at whose home the sixtieth anniversary of the wedding was celebrated, and Charles W. J. W. Wilson, living on Oxford avenue, is a younger brother of the "groom."

The third generation is represented by nineteen grandchildren, sixteen of whom live in this city and were part of the family reunion last evening. of the four great-grandchildren, only one lives here. He is little Howard Wilson Bryant, son of Mrs. Lindley M. Bryant, of No. 342 West Forty-sixth street, a daughter of Charles W. Wilson.

FOR WRIT OF REVIEW.

A petition for a writ of review was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by L. Ghriest, proprietor of the Newport Beach Electric Light and Power Company, directing the Railroad Commission to certify to the court the record of a certain hearing held on the application of the Pacific Electric Light and Power Company for permission to operate in Newport Beach. The Railroad Commission granted the order complained of October 16, 1913, and subsequently denied Ghriest his application for a rehearing.

If you will examine the records of the seven influential and successful business men, who now constitute our board of directors, you will have no hesitancy in sending your proxy and in working for their election.

If you were seriously ill you would go to a physician of unquestioned experience and reputation—you would take no chances. The same should be true in the affairs of our great corporation. Why should we experiment with inexperienced men as directors? One hour's time of these seven men is worth more to us than ten hours of men inexperienced in large business affairs.

For this reason we urge that you send your signed proxy card at once to Mrs. Virginia M. Clopton, No. 648 St. Paul avenue, Los Angeles.

Let us make the majority for the present board so large that there never can be a doubt in the mind of the public as to the intention and unity of the stockholders to place our affairs on a successful basis.

An Important Omission.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In reading the descriptions this morning of the Cross-Anderson misunderstanding yesteryay in the Vernon arena, so vividly and ably portrayed by your two writers—Harry Williams and De Witt Van Court—I noticed an ommission that is of vast importance to the public, and which I think is very unfair to Mr. Anderson. I see the public, who are so keenly interested in these scientific exhibitions of physical culture by the punch route, have been thoroughly informed as to the religious belief of Mr. Cross. Mr. De Witt tells us that he is a "cunning New York Jew"—Mr. Williams informs us that he is a "crafty Jew," thus leaving us no room for hesttation or worry whatsoever, exceedingly wise and clever, as you will plainly perceive, as well as being extremely necessary in an imbroglio of this kind. Now let us drift back to what they say of Mr. Anderson. Gave a punch—took three himself—gave Mr. Cross a real hard nasty slap—then seated himself on the floor for a rest, then he took a bundle of punches—and got mad and tried to do Mr. Cross violent injury—etc. But in regard to Mr. Anderson's religious belief, what do we anxious ones get? Nothing whathoeve—leaving us in entire ignorance as to that important point. I consider that rank injustice to Mr. Anderson. Bud may not be a champion, but everyone who knows him—knows him as a good fellow and a gentleman, and I cannot see where it is fair to him to be treated so very discourteous by the press of our city. Please publish this, and as you always try to be fair, see that justice is done Mr. Anderson in this matter.

Yours most respectfully,
MANNIE LOWENSTEIN.

POLITICAL TIPS.

The Progressive party of Illinois (what there is left of it) recently held a meeting at which it was announced a plain and emphatic stand was to be taken on the leading questions of the day. The action taken on the tariff question was as follows: "We were promised a tariff bill that would reduce the cost of living. We have the tariff bill, but the cost of living rises, while the demand for labor lessens throughout the land." That's all. It will take a Progressive to tell where the party stands on the tariff question.

The first Presidential New Year's reception was held by President Madison in 1810, and the custom then inaugurated has been unbroken till President Wilson's time. Even the burning of the executive mansion by the British did not interfere with President Madison's reception in 1814, but the event occurred at the house of a friend. After this unbroken record, a custom of over a century, President Wilson "skipped the town," and proceeded to take his rest at Pass Christian.

Prof. J. Lawrence Laughlin, professor of political economy at the University of Chicago, says the currency bill is the political miracle of the age, "because not ten of the men in Congress who voted for the bill understand its fundamental principles." The wander of it is, the professor says, that they incorporated the correct economical principle, the organization of credit, without knowing it.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois announces his intention to resign as Senate whip at the next Democratic caucus, January 15. "I might almost as well be a messenger boy," he says. "I don't get time to sleep—I do not have time for anything except to see that the Democratic Senators stay on the reservation. Let some other man do this work for a while." Certainly no one can blame the Senator for his determination to resign.

Postmaster-General Burleson is pointing with pride to the fact that the postal service is really self-supporting for the first time since 1883. To Postmaster-General Hitchcock belongs that honorable claim, however, as the parcel post system was established and organized under his administration, and the cash balance brought to the right side of the ledger before he resigned the department to his Democratic successor.

The rumor comes from Washington that the widespread criticism which has greeted the policy of the administration in removing all heads of diplomatic missions who served under the old administration, some of whom are men of a great many years of service, is to bring on a change of policy. The education that comes from service has been slow of recognition by the noted educator who is seeking to create a political order of things.

South Orange township, New Jersey, has one resident to whom it should erect a monument in its public square, if it has a public square. For seventeen years William H. Kemp, a retired New York City banker, has served as president of the Township Committee (the governing body,) and president of the Board of Education, during which time he attended an average of three meetings a week. At $10 a meeting, to which he was entitled, but which he always refused to accept, it is figured that he has turned back into the township treasury $26,520. He has now announced his intention to resign and let some one else have a chance to hold the office.

Vice-President Marshall says there is no need for any anti-trust legislation at present in view of the enactment of the tariff and currency laws. "My personal opinion is that this is all the Democratic party will attempt now. These two laws are enough. Let's wait and see how they work out."

Vice-President Marshall's opinion of the Democratic majority of the Senate is evidently not of the best. He has become so thoroughly dissatisfied with attempts to preserve order in the Senate chamber that recently when Senator Robinson asked for order while making a report, the Vice-President responded:

"The Vice-President has ceased to attempt to keep order in the United States Senate."

That was all he said, but his keen-edged remark was sufficient to send talkative Senators to the cloakrooms.

EXASPERATING GIRL.

Mother Says She Won't Practice on Piano Or Wear Clothes, So She's Arrested.

Because she would not practice lessons on the piano, and would not wear the clothes that were prepared for her, Edith Ingraham, 16 years old, is under arrest at the Juvenile Detention Home.

Her mother, Mrs. James B. Ingraham, No. 2451 East First street, became so exasperated with her yesterday that she declared the girl was incorrigible. The mother had ordered Edith to practice her lessons on the piano. Edith refused.

Further, Edith was only partly dressed. If anything, she was less than partly dressed. Her approach to nudity was due to her dislike for the clothes her mother bought for her. Edith demanded new clothes, her mother reported, and would not wear the garments that the mother could afford.

When she appealed to the police the mother was weeping and the juvenile officers took the girl from the home to the detention home.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER

Holy Hi's gang of party-name-and-column larcenists, who stole eleven electoral votes of California last year and disfranchised 200,000 sound Republicans, are in for a fight to the death, thanks to an outraged and aroused public sentiment that has forced the political pirates of Armageddon to drop their plunder and face at the polls the determined and revivified army of men and women Republicans who will never quit the battle until the last renegade is buried.

All over the State the Republicans, the grand old stalwarts, are polishing their swords and organizing, preparing for battle, that, as sure as God made apples, will end in the utter rout and destruction of the brazen band of psalm-singing hypocrites masquerading as reformers. The slogan, "kick out the 'Hi' taxes, hypocrisy and high-handed gang of pap suckers and incompetent officials raised to the ninth fat salary power by the unscrupulous Johnson-Lissner-Finn-Earl machine" is sweeping the State like wildfire. And unless all zodiac signs fail it's good night and Il Trovatore for the hosanna fakers.

Yesterday, twenty-five members of the Republican County Central Committee (not the Avery-Wallace sine die bunch) assembled in Chairman Blackstock's office in the Title Insurance building and formulated plans for the coming fight, usually called campaign. A dozen enthusiastic speeches were made upon the general plan of a united strength as a nucleus for reorganization. An optimism prevailed that breathes rout and git out for the Hi outfit.

Fifty Republicans, including such stalwarts as United States Senator Flint, Motley Flint, ex-Judge William R. Hervey, E. P. Johnson and Col. W. H. Holabird met earlier in the week and started the preliminary organization. They sounded a general call to the party of Lincoln leaders and workers in all parts of Los Angeles county to get busy so as to be in at the killing. An organization will be perfected in every precinct and real work done. The Republicans are chock full of confidence in their ability and power to shatter with their sixteen-inch shells the fast dwindling ranks of the charlatan party.

They have but one object in view—to rid the great State of California of the sanctimonious pests who have made this State the laughing stock of the nation as far as its freak laws are concerned. The Republican party in 1912 determined not to join the procession of unreason, opportunism and cowardice. Amen. To have done so would have been a denial of its whole history, both in resistance of error and achievement in real progress, not the brand of great "I am" progress of "Hi" or the brave dik-dik hunter. True Republicans who have not lost their rudders, believe that the Republican party is the greatest agency for good government and for the welfare of the country that has ever existed, Rebater Earl notwithstanding. It's going to be some fight, ladies and Japanese, and when the smoke has rolled away you will see the Stars and Stripes floating proudly over the mutilated freaks and their red bandannas crunched under the hob-nailed boots of a victorious Republican host. Just bear this in mind!

Meyer Lissner is out for John Eshelman for Governor and "Hi" for Senator. That's his slate subject to no change. And to date no opposition has loomed to this cute little quilting party from Eshelman, professional job chaser, and Holy Hi, vice-president of the United Society of Charlatans. Heney, the professional border ruffian, once called by an Oyster Bay tax dodger, "My Wild Ass of the Desert," is too much of a red neck to suit the Asiatic tastes of the saintly bosses like "Roughneck" McDonald, Tom Flinn and "Mush" Stimson, so he's already kissed his toga goodby, singing mournfully, that new refrain, "I Did Want It, I Did Want It; Won't You Makea Me Do It?"

And "Chattering Chet" Rowell. Listen, Etheldreida. You know Chet wrote several letters that out-Pindell Ham Lewis's infamous missive on "Darkest Russia," and Rebater Earl got all "het up" about them for some reason and now these two great reformers don't even whisper to each other. Isn't it a regular "I should bibble?" Yelp, Chet and E. T. E. have separated, divorced as it were; and no longer will Pro Bono Publico (if the Bull Moose twilight or sunrise organlets have such a thing) be regarded with full-face, side-front and terra-firma Rembrandts of "Chattering Chet" squatted above column articles telling of his "saintly Armageddon attributes." Sorrows upon weeps. It looks as if Eshelman will be the defeated Bull Moose Gubernatorial candidate and Hi the hard-sat-up Senatorial sacrifice. Eshelman happens to be at the head of the Railroad Commission via grace of one Meyer Lissner. Johnson never heard of Eshelman, who was a country lawyer in Imperial Valley, until Lissner took him up and made him shake hands with the Guv. The so-called Progressive papers are boosting Eshelman, in fact they are printing reams about the wonderful ability he has displayed on the Choo-Choo Comish. Giddap!

The official and would-like-to-be-official atmosphere at the City Hall is at 106 deg. Fahrenheit over the New Year pie to be distributed shortly by Hizzoner Rose, who has just returned from vacating in the Badger province. The Mayor declared upon his arrival that "I'm goin' to make the chips fly." He didn't diagram the chips, but deep down dope has it that Prof. Handley, "Citizen Fixit" and rabid Earl partisan, is going to hit the slippery elm slide. He is tempermentally unfitted for the man's job on the Board of Public Works and even made a failure as City Clerk, a paper-weight office compared with his present berth. Here's hoping! And Clarence M. Taggart, Tax Collector, who spends time trying to balance his books to the satisfaction of the City Auditor and Mayor, is on the cards to get out; Chief Sebastian's job is safe for another year. Chief Eley of the Fire Department may hear the bell ring down his job any moment. He is not strong with the present administration and certain powerful influences are after his scalp. P. P. O'Brien (next to Honest John Luckenbach, the closest adviser to His Honor) is certain to be reappointed a member of the Board of Public Works. Enemies of F. T. Woodman, Harbor Commissioner, are "building a fire under him," but he will probably remain. The 50,000 men and women who elected Rose for a "change of administration" sincerely hope the Mayor will rid the City Hall of the pests before many 1914 days have rolled by. Eureka!

Here's a regular six and seven-eighths. Cluster! The Express scooped the universe yesterday when it published a remarkably thrilling and heart-stirring storylet accompanied by some picture-telling of the distinguished "Progressives," who, by "strange coincidence," had assembled at the county registration bureau the opening day and John Hancocked that they are simon-pure advocates of Holy Hiram's specie of progress. Honest, it dilated to some two-column extent on the "remarkable impromptu rally bringing together such sterling Progressives as Lieut.-Gov. Wallace, Russ Avery, H. W. Brundige, Marshall Stimson, etc." What a strange phenomena! Think of it in this enlightened day and age that sixty-one Progressives could meet at the registration bureau on the opening day for registration and all at the same time so that by a "coincidence" they could be mugged for Brundige's lifeless sheetlet. And Wallace (oh! you statute of limitations) had the honor of signing his name first. Avaunt, ye ungodly coincidences, we shall have none of thee!

Buckets of good cheer and salve! The various Democratic parties are going to hold a lovefest on Jackson Day at Hamburger's (500 of 'em) and inter until after the coming campaign (if possible) the bloody hatchet that has kept the party of Jefferson and "Hungry John" Elliott alive, lo these locust years. Bourbons of high and low pedigree from all parts of this fair State are coming to the hatchet-burying jubilee. Every angle, clan, faction, clique, club, party, ism of the great Democratic aggregation will be represented. All in the name of harmony to keep the parties from going to the dem bow-wows.

Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Democracy, on the appointment of Hon. Isidore Dockweiler of Los Angeles as a Commissioner of Indian Affairs. He is a strong man, worthy of the place and by far the best appointee seen in these parts since T. R. and "Hi" elected Woodrow Wilson.

THE WATCHMAN.

HUNGRY MEN AND LOAF.

Former Takes Latter, is Arrested, and Police Judge Settles Matter With Five Cents.

While a motion-picture concern was striving, even paying money to give away loaves of bread, Juan Quinos, put to theft by stress of hunger, stole a loaf of bread from a wagon at the Pacific Electric Station New Year's Day. Because he was unlearned in English and six blocks away he never heard about the free bread, so took what first came his way.

He was arrested yesterday, was taken into the police courts to answer the charge of theft, prosecuted on complaint of the baking company which lost the loaf. The driver of the wagon, E. Ericken, really had to pay for the loaf and was the loser, because when Quinos stole it he wasted not a second in sinking his teeth into its heart. One mouthful despoiled the loaf, two stole its heart, and three disrupted its shape. It was at the fourth mouthful that the driver beheld him.

When he went into court, well filled with beans and soup and meat of jail fare, he told of his past hunger. Police Judge Chambers listened to the explanation. Quinos, even sighing with the plentitude of solid foodstuffs within him, still caught the dramatic fervor of his plight. He said he had been searching for employment for fifteen days and had not eaten for five days. The driver of the wagon corroborated his testimony.

And when the wagon driver told how rapidly the loaf had disappeared, Police Judge Chambers administered justice. He discharged Quinos. He gave the driver of the wagon five cents to replace his loss by theft of the bread.

NOW HE'S GAINING.

Nature Liver Starves Himself in Jail, But Fills Up in County Hospital.

After starving himself into a condition of absolute collapse, at the East side Police Station, Fred Livingston, a nature liver, convicted of vagrancy, is in the County Hospital eating ravenously and gaining weight at the rate of six pounds a day.

When taken to East Side Station to serve a thirty-day sentence, Livingston announced that he would not befoul himself by eating the food of his captors. Never, he said, would he give the man in charge, the satisfaction of seeing him eat the food of the jail.

He stuck to his word. For one week, then two, he ate nothing. Every morning he was routed from his cot at 5 o'clock, and by the time the day was stirring, Livingston was in motion to do the labor of the East Side station. The jailers worked him harder so his appetite would be more keen, and his resolve would melt.

In spite of all attempts to make him eat, he refused. Gradually he thinned. His teeth were set, his cheeks sunken and his eyes glazed.

For three weeks his starving continued, until he broke down in the jail. In the County Hospital he was given liquid sustenance.

As soon as capable of attending to himself, he announced that he would discontinue his hunger-strike, and his meals number seven daily. Livingston is a believer in few garments, long hair, and no shoes.

MYSTERY UNEXPLAINED.

Young Man Under Suspicion of Having Injured Keeper of Government Nursery Fully Exonerated.

An added element of mystery is given the cause of the terrible injuries to Frank Latshaw, in charge of the Converse Flat government nursery in San Bernardino county, by the discovery that the young man named Cowan, who came West with Latshaw, and was under suspicion as his assailant, is in San Bernardino, and has been there all along. It is known that he visited Latshaw, but it is also certain that by reason of the investigation just concluded by officers of the forest service, that he had nothing to do with the attack upon the boy. He was only under suspicion for the reason that he is the last man known to have visited Latshaw at the flat a day or two before he dragged himself into a resort several miles away from his home at the nursery. But he is completely exonerated of all knowledge of or complicity in the affair.

Supervisor Charlton said yesterday there was but one other way for Latshaw to have received his injuries, and that was to be struck by a falling tree, which is no uncommon thing in that neighborhood. Meanwhile, while Latshaw is in a semi-conscious state, his memory is entirely gone and he cannot tell what happened to him. He is still being cared for at the Redlands Hospital.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The old year did not go out in a blaze of glory, but there was some storm connected with its passing. The farmers are more than satisfied with the deluge and city folk were certainly over-deluged. It is not a nice thing to be a knocking, but the most don't care if 1913 never comes back.

It was too good a thing for the unemployed and it could not last. Free meals, free lodging and easy work for big pay attracted attention everywhere and the world's unfortunates were headed this way. The authorities called a halt, and the brotherhood of man is once more in the discard. Just before the final parting of the ways, the unemployed, with fine sarcasm, said that the free food was rotten and not up to the free lunch standard.

On the strength of a rumor that the women of Easter Island wished husbands, hundreds of able-bodied citizens are planning to go there. All they need is food and, incidentally, a ship. It is to be hoped that some will survive the welcome extended by the men islanders and be able to get back to the good old mainland.

Clubman McIntrye has sued Actress Jane O'Rourke for $2500 for using his vaudeville skit entitled "Up the River." The lady says that it is worth $2.50, and the plaintiff has alrady been paid in Scotch highballs. A sympathetic jury is apt to believe the fair one, so it might be just as well for the playwright to compose a new playlet called "Down the River" before he finds himself up salt creek, burdened with legal costs.

It is unfair to the police to say that nothing is being done to suppress the highwaymen. A valiant patrolman the other night was shot by a thug, and as a reward for his bravery the commissioners voted him $100. He has deposited it in his bank, for he is not going to take any chances of having it taken away from him while he is out on his beat.

Mayor Rolph read in the paper that his friend, George F. Kelly, had died suddenly. He called at the house the next day to offer condolences to the bereaved family. Kelly met him at the door and had no trouble in explaining, as a noted humorist once explained, that the reports of his death were grossly exaggerated. Mr. Kelly hoped that his visitor was not disappointed, and he left him to thank some friends who were bringing in floral wreaths.

Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, is making us all dizzy. He laughs at the law of gravitation and has made many of us uncertain whether we are standing on our heads or not. In one flight he turned over six times. At another time he flew half a mile upside down. Without hitting a single obstacle he made a complete circle on the inside of one of the fair buildings. The best we can do for Mr. Beachey is to wish him a long life and a happy one.

Some club women censured Judge Dunne for inaction in the matter of the forgeries committed on the red-light abatement recall petitions. He is quoted as replying: "If you women want to do some good why don't you stop tango dancing and sew up slit skirts." It is a neat little controversy, all right, but the jurist need not think that he is going to have the last word.

There is a growing hostility against careless joy-riders who run over unsuspecting pedestrians. Even the police judges are beginning to realize that speeding up on the public streets must be stopped. In response to the public clamor one judge jailed a driver of a milk wagon and the next day his fellow-judge, not to be outdone, reprimanded a man who was too gay with an ice wagon.

Arthur Reginald French, arrested in New Orleans for forging a postal money order here, fought here some months ago as a prize fighter. It was under an assumed name, for Arthur, you know, is a Scotch nobleman. It is too bad the management was not aware of this, or they might have advertised him freely and raised the price of admission. Sad to relate, Reggie was knocked out.

PLUTO.

ATTORNEY AND CLIENT.

Rosenthal, Whose Picture Was Inadvertently Printed as the Other's, Hopes to Clear Kantrowitz.

Samuel Rosenthal, with offices at 516 International Bank building, who is one of the leading counsel for Abraham Kantrowitz, confidently hopes to be able to clear his client when the case, involving a statutory charge, comes up in the Superior Court. He believes that the law points alone will serve to free his client.

When The Times gave an account of the preliminary examination, the picture of Attorney Rosenthal, who was walking beside his client when photographed, was by inadvertence inserted in place of that of Kantrowitz. No one who knows the lawyer was deceived, but Attorney Rosenthal, while exerting every effort on behalf of his client, does not view with favor the possibility that strangers who might the picture might conclude that he is the defendant.

Attorney Rosenthal, who has not a few cases in the courts, has been good-naturedly joked by court attaches about having his picture in the paper, but has taken it good-naturedly, while at the same time desiring to be "put right" in the eyes of the world.

DOESN'T PASS MRS. NORTON.

Friends Say She's a Martyr to Factional Fight.

Clubwomen Active in Support of Legal Aid Head.

Civil Service Issues Edict that Stirs Things.

Mrs. Leland Norton, who has been the head of the Legal Aid Society for five years and who has befriended hundreds of men and women in trouble, was informed by Chief Examiner Doty of the County Civil Service Commission yesterday that she failed to pass the recent examination for the position of assistant public defender.

This apparently abrupt dismissal of Mrs. Norton may lead to a greater scandal than the recent controversy between David Evans and the District Attorney, many county employees think, for Mrs. Norton has been indorsed by virtually all the women's clubs in the county.

In addition the Supervisors declared in open meeting when the paragraph regarding the creation of a public defender was discussed, that Mrs. Norton should be the assistant.

Prof. Doty, of course, knows little about Mrs. Norton or her backers. It is openly stated by her friends that the only reason why she was marked "ineligible" was because she declared in her work she believed in being in harmony with the District Attorney.

As Capt. Fredericks's name is anathema in the County Civil Service Commission offices, Mrs. Norton now comes under the same heavy displeasure, it is alleged, by her friends.

To say that the matter will cause a stir in women's clubs is putting it mildly. The Legal Aid Society is virtually put out of business by the dicta of Evans and Doty and the women who have come to the society for counsel and assistance will now have to wait for the Supervisors to indorse the new public defender to be taken from the eligible list.

His salary will be $2500 a year, so Evans has decided. For this amount he must defend all civil and criminal actions where persons are too poor to hire a lawyer and must give advice free to any one who can show that he is without means.

And now that Mrs. Norton has been thrown out of the work that she created years ago in a humble way, it is believed that political bees will be buzzing about Evans and Doty for some time to come. Evans has a law office in the Douglas building, Third and Spring streets, where the club women can go to plead or argue. He is seldom in the civil service rooms in the Hall of Records. Doty is the smiling presiding genius there.

A suit is to be brought within a comparatively short time to test the legality of the county-charter provisions in some points and many of the best lawyers in the city say that the civil service paragraphs (which were drawn by Evans) are in conflict with the State Constitution. If they are, it will be necessary to construct an entirely new system.

BOTH IN NOW.

Men Mixed Up with Fake Book Arrested. One on Charge of Having Issued Fictitious Checks.

C. J. Drummond, wanted for endeavoring to secure contributions in Santa Monica for a fake book purported to be for the benefit of the policemen's widows and orphans of that city, was arrested yesterday on the charge of issuing fictitious checks.

His partner, F. J. Menzies, is now in the County Jail facing prosecutions for accepting contributions for advertising in the false year-book they pretended to be representing.

Detectives allege that Drummond passed a spurious check on J. J. Ramsey, No. 623½ South Spring street, having signed to it the name of A. F. McKelvey.

SEEKING LOST BROTHER.

Sister Removed Here from Denver Hoping to Get Trace of Relative Missing Four Years.

A sister, who has not seen her brother for over four years, has come to California in the hopes of getting some trace of him. She is Mrs. Cordelia Owen of No. 857 South Flower street, who, up to the present winter, has lived in Denver. The brother's name is George B. Austin, an oil man, who has operated in most of the oil fields of the country, beginning in Pennsylvania. When that field began to wane, he went to the West Virginia field and has followed the "sand" westward. Six years ago, he went to Denver on account of ill health, and on the Fourth of July, 1909, he left Mrs. Owen's home, where he had been staying, and she has heard nothing from him since. Believing that her brother would be found in oil territory, she came to Los Angeles a few weeks ago and has been searching for him ever since, hoping that, if he needs her, she can be of assistance to him. Austin is 65 years old and a bachelor. A brother, Richard Austin, lives in Farina, Ill.

THE MEN AND THE JOBS.

Municipal Employment Bureau Getting These Two Elements Together. Two Branches Operated.

That there is a material change taking place in the number of unemployed, through the opening of various channels for work, was shown yesterday when not more than 500 applications were received at the Municipal Employment Bureau, of which about 40 per cent. were Mexicans.

Tomorrow the bureau will send 250 men out to work on the county roads in Topango Canyon. Since the last copious rain, the opening of ranch work has been active, and there has arisen a demand for this class of labor that has placed many of the men who really want to work. The bureau has had orders for ranch hands from as far north as Santa Barbara, and has promptly supplied these calls.

So far about 250 women and girls have been placed in domestic positions through the activities of the bureau.

Those desiring to reach the Municipal Employment Bureau for the purpose of ordering help can get the men's department at No. 208 Franklin street on telephone A2865, and the women's department, at 422 California building, Second and Broadway, on telephones A2815 and Broadway 7407.

And the reversible front provides two fronts for the dress, cutting the laundry bill in half. The illustration shows how attractively it is designed—and it will fit without alterations except, perhaps, for the moving of a few buttons. These dresses are made of ginghams, galateas and chambrays in various patterns and colors. The price—$1.50.

—An introductory sale of the Nemo "Duplex" self-reducing corset. A new corset that should prove a great satisfaction to the stout woman or the woman of medium or full figure who desires extreme reduction below the waist. The edge of the corset and the ends of the bones can't show through and the corset can't "ride up."

THE STAGE AND THE DRAMA.

XXXIII^RD YEAR.

The Week.

TWIN STARS AT MAJESTIC.

Sothern and Marlowe Bring Shakespearean Repertoire.

May Irwin at Mason with Big Laugh Piece.

Orpheum Road Show and Other Current Bills.

Tomorrow night, at the Majestic Theater, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will begin a fortnight's engagement in the following arrangement of plays for the opening week: Monday, "Taming of the Shrew;" Tuesday, "Much Ado About Nothing;" Wednesday matinee, "If I Were King;" Wednesday night, "Twelfth Night;" Thursday, "The Merchant of Venice;" Friday, "Romeo and Juliet;" Saturday matinee, "As You Like It," and Saturday night, "Hamlet."

From the foregoing repertoire theatergoers will observe with pleasure that Mr. Sothern has this season revived one of his finest triumphs, "If I Were King," Justin Huntley McCarthy's romantic play. In this drama's appealing central figure, Villon, the poet, Mr. Sothern found one of his best opportunities for strong characterization, and he has now revived the play in handsome fashion. It will be given at the Wednesday matinee without Miss Marlowe, who adheres to her rule of appearing only in the Shakespearean repertoire.

Advance laudatory comment for Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe is scarcely necessary. Through their ambitious and intelligent efforts from the day of their artistic coalition they have established a record and achieved an exalted position in the theater honorable to them and well-known to the playgoing public. At the present time they are exploiting their artisanship in the most extensive Shakespearean repertoire ever made known by any organization in the American theater, having in constant use no less than eight of the great poet's masterpieces. They represent the most distinguished dramatic combination of recent stage history.

As a matter of fact there has never been a parallel in this country for their joint achievements. Single stars of remarkable gifts have devoted their efforts to the glorification of Shakespeare, but there has never been a partnership of a man and a woman that has reached the pinnacle of popular acclaim that now belongs to E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe.

The customary excellent supporting company will be seen with Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe. It includes, among others, Frederick Lewis, George W. Wilson, Walter Connolly, J. Sayre Crawley, Sidney Mather, William Harris, John S. O'Brien, Elizabeth Valentine, Helen Singer, Millicent McLaughlin and Ina Goldsmith.

Special attention is called to the fact that the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock evenings, and at 2 o'clock at the matinees.

Mason.

May Irwin's engagement at the Mason Operahouse, opening tomorrow night and continuing throughout the week, records the first visit in several years of this popular comedienne whose beaming personality and buoyant humor have been large factors in providing the sane and wholesome fun entertainments of the stage for many years.

In a career that had its first impetus with Tony Pastor and led directly from that to the patrician portals of Augustin Daly's classic playhouse on Broadway, where she was the welcome associate of Mrs. Gilbert, George Clark, John Drew and all the famous Daly players, and then to the goal of being an independent star, May Irwin has always carried a message of good cheer. Her beaming personality is but the reflection of her real self, and it has been the genuineness of her humor and the naturalness of her comedy gifts that have endeared her to the theater-going public.

For her current season, the Liebler Company has given Miss Irwin Catherine Chisholm Cushing's comedy, "Widow by Proxy," accepted by her public as the most entertaining and mirthful vehicle she has had in many years. It has no faintest suggestion of moral or preachment of any character. It devotes itself entirely to the provision of laughter, and its oneness of purpose has resulted in the successful accomplishment of that single, praiseworthy undertaking.

The supporting company bears numerous names that suggest the fullest measure of competency. Clara Blandick, who has been seen here but recently in the role of "Madame Butterfly" in the tabloid version of that opera, and who was Kyrle Bellew's leading support in "Raffles," has a prominent place. Helen Weathersby, long associated with the role of Mrs. Wiggs, has a congenial part. Marie Pavey, last seen here in "Pomander Walk;" Orlando Daly, one of the best of the young actors who have come from the English stage, Helen Orr, Joseph Woodburn, Arthur Bowyer and Joseph R. Garry are others who will take part.

May Irwin has some new songs of the typical May Irwin kind which are sure to be popular. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday during Miss Irwin's engagement at the Mason.

Auditorium.

"The Mission Play" is now on for a short run at the Auditorium. The members of the company have returned from a successful tour. The general public does not seem to appreciate the fact that the twenty performances scheduled for the Auditorium engagement will be the only ones in Southern California this season, for on January 19 the company starts for a prolonged tour of the playhouses.

"The Mission Play" could not be more thoroughly informed with the spirit of Catholicism if it were the work of a priest, for John McGroarty knows the history of the church and the history of California to its minutest detail. An

The general public does not seem to realize the fact that the twenty performances scheduled for the Auditorium engagement will be the last given in Southern California for some time, for on January 19 the company starts for a prolonged tour of Eastern playhouses.

"The Mission Play" could not be more thoroughly informed with the spirit of Catholicism if it were the work of a priest, for John McGroarty knows the history of the church and the history of California in minutest detail. An innate reverence for holy things, a knowledge of churchly ceremonial, for the language of piety is a part of McGroarty's everyday life, and he has reproduced it all in the life of the missions.

"The Mission Play" bears every sign of being the spontaneous flowering of McGroarty's every day thoughts. There is an immense sincerity in the author. The world is just now exalting one such in Francis Thompson. McGroarty scores similarly. "The Mission Play" is a pageant of religious faith, appealing strongly to men and women, for its beautiful pageantry gives it a wide popularity. Its pictures are highly colored; its action stirring, its people interesting, and it is a play with a purpose, a story beautifully and wonderfully told.

There is pathos and tragedy as well as joy and happiness; there is early history and intimation of modern results. There are work day and play day scenes. The big fiesta scene in the second act, with its myriad of dancers, Indians and soldiery, to say nothing of the wonderful Junipero Serra and his priests, are all appealing. It is our early history set before us, and we are cold indeed if we do not warm to its presentation.

This pageant is written around the whole history of the missionary era and not just a single incident. Theatrically it is a wonderful, dramatic story, and the company a most excellent one. Such will never come to us again, for it is truly the "Oberammergau of the missions."

To those who have not seen "The Mission Play" we could advise an immediate arrangement for seats, because it is only a question of a day or two until the rush will be so strong that not half who want to see it can do so.

Orpheum.

The Orpheum Road Show comes to the Orpheum here Monday, opening at the matinee. This year, as always before, it has been formed under the personal supervision of Martin Beck. Its object is to show a well balanced, "all around" variety bill—not one supreme star with a collection of inconsequential satellities, but a bill that is, alal through, made up of acts that dovetail perfectly into one programme of delight. The main divisions into which vaudeville is divided are each shown by one especially chosen act, and the whole is thus varied according to the many tastes to which vaudeville appeals. The schedule for this year's Road Show,

Twin stars in Shakespearean roles.

Sothern and Marlowe begin their two weeks' engagement tomorrow night at the Majestic. The pictures show Mr. Sothern in the role which marks his crowning ambition—Hamlet, while Miss Marlowe is shown as Viola in "Twelfth Night."

Success at Last.

VICTORY FOR TWIN STARS.

Long Path to Fame Is No Primrose Lane.

Early Struggles of Sothern and Marlowe.

Shakespeare Pot of Gold on Rainbow's End.

Sothern and Marlowe—probably the strongest names to conjure with today on the American stage—two players who, when they first joined artistic forces, only a few years ago, were almost laughed at by managers, who regarded their plan of devoting their abilities wholly to the Shakespearean plays as little more than a dream which was bound to end in a tremendously expensive awakening.

So many other actors had given their best efforts to the bard merely, so it seemed, to prove the old adage that "Shakespeare spelled ruin." The wiseacres of the theater could see ahead only disaster. But they had not reckoned with the exalted ambition, the flame-like zeal and the aggressive determination of these two players—and there is so little of great ambition, of burning zeal, and of fighting determination in the American theater of today, so far as the very best, the very highest, in art is concerned.

And so, Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe, with no encouragement whatever from managers, and undaunted by many not inconsiderable obstacles, forged ahead, until today the bare announcement of their coming is sufficient to insure crowded houses in every city which they visit.

ALWAYS AIMED HIGH.

Miss Marlowe has played Shakespeare from practically the beginning of her stage career, and a disheartening uphill fight it was for many years. Occasionally she put aside her great ambition and undertook plays which were sure of an immediate popular appeal.

But this was done merely to obtain the sinews of war wherewith to resume anew the Shakespearean campaign later on. Her determined fight had in it much of the pathetic, much of which the playgoing public, seeing her today in the full glory of her hardwon success, does not know.

Julia Marlowe, it may be said, is a strange mingling of marvelous determination and almost child-like gentleness—and, while she fought her way by sheer purpose of will, she nevertheless felt every discouragement as only an extremely sensitive nature can, and suffered accordingly. But she would do the thing she had set out to do—she would accomplish that one thing, and that only, or she would die in the attempt.

MARLOWE'S START.

When she first ventured into New York as a star, presenting a repertoire which included "The Lady of Lyons," "The Hunchback," "Romeo and Juliet" and other plays, a young girl of wonderful beauty, and rarely gifted, as the critics admitted, she appeared with shabby scenery of the cheapest description, in costumes made by her own hands, and surrounded by a company of actors that would today be relegated to the popular-price theaters.

It was all very pitiful—but the girl could afford nothing better; and she was fighting desperately for recognition. Managers with whom she had bookings insisted that conditions be improved. The young actress improved them. She engaged a leading man at $250 a week; but to give him that salary she must retrench elsewhere—so she discharged her maid, lived in hotels where her board and lodging cost her only $7 weekly, and in those wretched hotel rooms she spent such time as was not given to rehearsals, in the making and mending of her costumes. But she never flinched for an instant, for the reason that she was determined to accomplish her ambition.

SOTHERN'S FIGHT.

While Miss Marlowe was making her fight in America there was a young actor making an equally aggressive fight in London. He was playing utility parts at a weekly salary representing $5 in American money, and sharing a dingy underground dressing-room with another beginner, named Richard Mansfield, who was receiving a salary similar to his own.

The young man was E. H. Sothern. He had made his first stage appearance in a play of which his father was the star, in a very small part, on the order of "there's a party outside who wishes to see you, sir." The little he had to do he had done very badly and he knew it. His father knew it also, and when the curtain came down he told his son that he was never meant for an actor and that he would never make an actor.

And yet, the young man was firmly determined, even in the face of his father's discouraging verdict, that he would one day play "Hamlet." He had settled the matter in his own mind, and there the determination remained fixed.

Then began the struggle—and he went through drudgery and heartache untold before he was rewarded with even the first glimmer of success. But once the fickle goddess smiled on him she remained firm in her allegiance.

WINS WITH COMEDY.

At the beginning it was charming light comedies in which he won his public. After these, which covered a period of years, came romantic dramas, including "If I Were King," "The Proud Prince" and others. These were leading up to "Hamlet."

When he first made known his intention to attempt the great Shakespearean role he encountered a storm of dissuasion. It came from all sides, from managers and from friends. He was told that he would be guilty of a great folly. He was assured that the critics and the public did not want him in tragedy, and would not accept him in it. He was also assured that there was a fortune for him in the field he already occupied, light com-

MUSICAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

BRAHMS QUINTETTE CONCERTS TO BEGIN THIS MONTH.

Wilhelm Bachaus, Distinguished English Pianist, Charles W. Clark, American Baritone, in Early Philharmonic Recitals—Kathleen Parlow, Violinist, to Play Here.

BY HECTOR ALLIOT.

For the unassimilated alien, who still is guided by Old-World ideas, the production of grand opera is looked upon as necessary.

Without the knowledge of that phase of musical art, one's education has been considered as incomplete, abroad.

The grand opera must also be given in Italian, French or German to be considered worth while.

For many years vast sums of money have been expended throughout the United States for the adequate presentation of grand opera. Except in very few cases the season has always closed with a very substantial deficit, and we are accused of being hopelessly provincial and uncultured.

The fact is, however, that wherever grand opera is produced today, it is a financial loss to its promoters.

In Milan, Naples, Rome, Paris, Berlin and Vienna, grand opera continues to be given year after year, because the government foots the bill at the end of the season. Instead of coming out of the promoters' pockets, the money is furnished by the taxpayer. In any case, the production of grand opera, even in its country of origin, does not pay.

If Italian opera does not secure adequate support in Italy, it would be absurd to expect that it would be better appreciated in a country where Italian is not understood.

English opera, if it existed, would probably have a poorer reception in Italy than works in Latin languages here.

The Aborn brothers, managers of the Century company in New York City, have long realized that fact, and this year are able to demonstrate that their point of view was eminently correct.

By comparing the receipts of the Century company for opera productions in English and in Italian, it was discovered that the former paid so much better that the management decided to eliminate operas in foreign tongues. The consequence is that the theater is going to be very much enlarged this summer to accommodate the increasing number of patrons, who now have to wait from one to two weeks to obtain seats to hear opera sung in English.

Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Cincinnati are now in communication with the Century Theater management to form a chain of popular-priced productions of grand and light opera in our own tongue next year through the Eastern and Central States.

Andreas Dippel, the very wise former manager of the Chicago Opera Company, officially announced this week that he was preparing to enter the operatic field next year (not the grand opera one, however, as his contract prevents him from doing it for four years) and give in New York and elsewhere light and comic opera.

He, also, has discovered that if he desires to be financially successful, he must limit himself to productions in English exclusively.

When it is taken in consideration that in every grand opera season the best-paying performances are those of light opera, that comic opera has always been a popular form of entertainment everywhere, it is not to be wondered at that managers have at last discovered that fact, clearly established for several years and self-evident to anyone interested in theatrical matters.

This does not imply that grand opera given in a foreign tongue is going to disappear. This form of entertainment will become rarer, more expensive and "recherche," an exotic affair for gala occasions: its logical position in an English-speaking country.

The great importance of the evolution of the opera, in production and in the exclusive use of the English language, will prove of incalculable good to us. Foreign singers of talent will be obliged to learn English, so as to play on our boards, and the preference will be given to native singers whenever possible.

Instead of passing many years in often vainly attempting to be heard in Italian opera in Italy, our own singers will develop their talents under natural environment. A conservatory of music and of the dramatic arts, national in scope and character, may also be the direct result of popular demand for operatic performances in English.

The "Century" Experiment has demonstrated that the 25-cent to $2 opera, when adequately presented, pays well, even under the conditions of an experimental first season. Another year will see the definite immigration of opera, which will begin its new era of useful musical education in English to the greater advantage of both public singers and musicians.

Recitals for January.

Manager Behymer will open the year with a whirlwind musical campaign. In two weeks, three artists of great European standing will be heard here for the first time. First will come Wilhelm Bachaus, the talented English pianist, to be followed by Charles W. Clark, American baritone and Kathleen Parlow, Canadian violinist, will be heard in concert with the Woman's Orchestra on the afternoon of January 16.

The particular attention of Philharmonic subscribers to the first course is directed to this change of date in the Parlow engagement. All Philharmonic ticket holders will have their tickets dated the 17th honored on the 16th, and will hear in addition to a recital programme by Miss Parlow, the Beethoven concerto or another equally important concerto interpreted by this excellent violin virtuoso with orchestral accompaniment. All season ticket holders for the Woman's Orchestra series, of which this is the second event, will no doubt be delighted to hear of this special windfall in the series.

Parlow's career savors of the romantic. Born in Calgary, she was brought to San Francisco by her widowed mother as a tiny girl of four years. Her uncle, a violin teacher, hearing the youngster picking up simple airs with such ease, started to teach her and two years later we find the small Kathleen making her first public appearance. Attracting the attention of several well-known society people, her tutelage was arranged for under the famous Henry Holmes, a musician of fine attainments, he continuing directing her studies until she was sent to Europe, where she had the good fortune to become a pupil of Auer. During her eighteen months with this distinguished teacher, she was heard several times in recital and concert, each appearance proving her a more gratifying student than the one before. This will be her third season in America, but her first on the Coast as all her available time for America is taken for the most part with appearances with orchestras and in recital in the East. In Europe, especially in England, she is one of the favorites who is always sure of a hearty welcome in recital. Her playing is spontaneous and has remained so even though in later years she has subdued much of her youthfulness by extraordinary technical training.

Leaving Chicago a number of seasons ago, Charles W. Clark, established himself in Paris to "finish" his training. Before the end of his second season he had become the center of the musical world in Paris for the American students and many French people. Here in his beautiful home-studio he yearly produces a select number of finished pupils. His classes are as large as his time will permit, for he is tremendously popular in England and in Spain, where he appears in recitals during about one-half of each year. His voice is a very fine baritone, thoroughly schooled, and capable of the finest nuances. His programme for this city is a rare combination of the finest German, French and English compositions, with a special group of English, in appreciative recognition of the "Songs in English" movement.

In Wilhelm Bachaus Los Angeles will find an artist whom they will be glad to greet every season. A pianist of great technical equipment; his touch is acknowledged as being absolutely flawless; his pianissimos are as delicate and precise as De Pachmann's, while his forte passages remind one of the great Rosenthal. Bachaus will be heard but once in this city, and although this will be his first visit here, he will no doubt be greeted by an audience of enthusiasts, who are familiar with his splendid work.

Brahms Quintette Concerts.

The first of a series of three chamber music concerts by the Brahms Quintette will be given at Blanchard Hall, on Saturday evening, January 10, preceded by the usual public rehearsal on the Friday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Miss Blanche Ruby will be the assisting soloist for this event.

The quintette, now in its fourth season, has attracted increasing interest and broader popularity by its excellent rendition of the more intimate form of concert it has long chosen for the vehicle of its talented members.

Herr Adolf Tandler, owing to the demands on his time made by his directorship of the Symphony Orchestra, will not be heard with his former associates this year. In his stead Louis Rovinsky, a young violinist of ability, has been invited to take Herr Tandler's position as second violin of the organization.

Oskar Seiling, first violin; Louis Rovinsky, second violin; Rudolph Kopp, viola; Axel Simonsen, violoncello, and Homer Grunn at the piano, will compose the strong team of the quintette.

The programmes of the three concerts are being rehearsed now and will be given as follows:

First concert, January 10: String quartette, Op. 96 (Dvorak;) piano quintette, E-flat (Schumann;) soloist, Miss Blanche Ruby, soprano. Second concert, February 28: String quartette "Death of the Maiden" (Schubert;) piano quintette, Op. 47, new (Metsdorf;) soloist, Mrs. L. J. Selby, contralto. Third concert, April 11: String quartette (Godard;) piano quintette (Caesar Franck;) soloist, Harry Clifford Lott, baritone; under the personal management of F. W. Blanchard.

Anita Vennum.

Miss Anita Vennum, who is well remembered as the conductor of the Los Angeles High School orchestra, when she was a student, has recently returned home from an extended eastern tour, during which she devoted much time to the study of her preferred instrument, the violin, and to appearances in concert.

"The Messiah" to be Repeated Today.

There have been so many requests for the repetition of "The Messiah," givn last Sunday at the Auditorium, that the management has decided to accede to the public demand for its repetition this afternoon. The same fine soloists, Mrs. E. S. Shank, soprano; Mrs. Minnie Hance, contralto; Roland Paul, tenor, and Gage Christopher, bass, will be heard, and the same popular prices will prevail. "The Messiah," old as it is, has a beautiful freshness that makes it more beautiful with repeated hearings.

Hans S. Linne, conductor of the People's Orchestra and Chorus, is planning to feature the work of the chorus once a month.

On January 25 that wonderfully dramatic cantata of Max Bruch's, "Fair Ellen," will be given. February 22, which is Washington's Birthday, an entire programme of American patriotic compositions; March 29 the melodicus oratorio, "The Holy City," by Gaul; and as a fitting climax the oratorio-opera, "Samson and Delilah," by Camille Saint-Saens.

Singers who wish to identify themselves with the People's Chorus should be at the rehearsal Friday night at the Normal School auditorium, at 7:30 promptly, in order that they may have their names enrolled before the rehearsal begins at 8 o'clock.

Symphony Orchestra Soloist.

Franz Egenieff, a young German baritone, who has deserted his following at the Berlin Royal Opera to give United States and Canadian music devotees a chance to hear him, will be the soloist at the next public rehearsal and concert of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra on January 23 and 24 at the Auditorium.

SKATING OVER SOME THIN ICE.

One of the Reasons Why Plays Like "The High Road" And "The Anatol Dialogues" Leave a Bad Taste and a Question Mark.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

AT THE outset let us have the conclusion, such as it is.

The world will always have two things. It will never cease to contain a few women who will be great in spite of all circumstances and a multitude of persons who will feel compelled to gossip, wonder and analyze.

The play, which implies to the young that it is the common experience for woman to suffer much in order that she may amount to anything is not to be generally recommended.

"The High Road," in which Mrs. Fiske appeared last week in this city, was too loosely constructed to invite a criticism of its motive, but I find a good many persons objecting to it on the grounds that young people might be made to feel by it that the heroine married the Governor and helped him to be elected President because she was a woman with a past.

The play is bad, but not so bad as that. This particular indictment against it is not well founded. It is true that the heroine left her father's farm in the night with a rich young adventurer with whom she lived out of wedlock for three years before finding herself, but it is also true that she goes a hard and bitter way alone for eighteen years before happiness and power come to her. Her past has not made her great. She is a wonderful woman in spite of her mistake.

That is the only hope of any of us.

No man is large and useful simply because he has gone to prison. Thousands of men go to jail and do not emerge to attract the world's attention with their worth.

When a man of inherent qualities leaves prison and faces life with new resolves and fine endeavor he is a great man in spite of his penal servitude. It was his way of getting a lesson, but we do not advise other men to go to the penitentiary in order that they may arrive. We rejoice in a life that triumphs over the hard way of learning, but there is a more positive and a sweeter, quicker way by living the simple right.

It is the same with women. Many of them have sad experiences, many live and suffer much through a free and informal expression of womanhood's charms and treasures, but this does not mean that every woman must have questionable sex experiences in order that her fine soul, large sympathies and true heart may come into understanding and beautify the world.

A play is written because it deals with something exceptional and it is always to be remembered in dealing with this sort of drama that the woman who finds the extraordinary and the unconventional as a stepping stone to the goal she reaches is the unusual woman choosing the unusual path.

She is not to be condemned, but no more is she to be praised.

When she comes to any man with love she is what she is by the grace of life and her glorious womanhood is to be accepted purely, unquestioningly and with profound gratitude. No man dares hesitate in the choice of such a woman when she brings him the best of all gifts in her love and inspiration. No man dares quarrel with any step which has brought her to the splendid realization of the minute that has made her large enough for the partnership of his life.

Such a woman requires no absolution. Her way has been what it has been.

The one supreme fact of any life is the point at which it arrives and not the process.

The joy of a full welcome to a man or a woman by the one who is to be all in all is this complete acceptance of the good moment of their union.

Small is the nature and all unworthy which can question or cavil.

Unwise as well as inadequate are those who hurt themselves with backward glances.

No one can so belong to you that his or her past is any of your concern. It belongs to them, and the very fact that they look life in the face with gladness and purpose is proof enough that they have lifted themselves above regret. Nine-tenths of our blunders and griefs come over crying about spilt milk, which is not spilt at all, but which has been a blessed process of transmutation. This gathering up of the broken fragments of all that has come to us and of what we have sometimes seemed to be, is not at all a question of charity, but a method of construction.

"The High Road," then, is not a bad play because a woman makes a silly mistake when she is a girl and has so much good in her that she uses that, and all else which comes into her life, as a step to the truth and the light. Neither is it a good play because the governor is enough of a man to accept a magnificent woman in spite of the way she had traversed.

We do not choose the past experiences of those we love; we only accept them, and the present and the future become our happiness and concern.

There is no occasion for hysteria or protest when such cases are emphasized by the stage. They are not to be advised and not greatly to be feared. The world contains much that we would not invite nor emulate, but the good that comes out of it to others is a subject for rejoicing and not condemnation.

In one of the "Dialogues of Anatol" called "Keepsakes," such a situation is presented and its treatment is paradoxical. One feels that its artistry is complete. The author is credited with understanding, the reader is left to debate the problem and to make his own answer, while the man in the case seems to have been brutal and insufficient.

He was a man of reckless indulgence, who had plucked his flowers wherever he had found them, but he could not forgive the women he thought he loved, and who really did love him, for keeping some trivial token of an earlier, and, to her, unimportant incident which alone had made her coming to her real lover possible.

All of these "Anatol Dialogues" conceal a bitter wisdom in their amusement. They throw a strong light upon the character of a man who plays with life. They show how often his wine contains the drop of poison which makes its dissatisfaction. They are a sort of verbal guarantee of unrest, distrust and blunted appetite. They bring us an apple with the dry rot at the core and a rose with a worm at the heart. They set the stage with idols of clay and the idols always shatter.

Granville Barker has performed an interesting service in paraphrasing these quaint discussions by Arthur Schnitzler, which are both questioning and questionable, according to the sounding plummet of the reader.

As for staging them, that is another question. Three or four of them, by as many clever people, might make a capital evening's entertainment, especially the one of "The Wedding Morn," wherein Anatol is pursued by his folly to the marriage altar and the last episode in his highly-colored and romantic career breaks in a pretty and inconsequential storm in his bachelor quarters in such fashion as to strew the premises with wreckage and to augur no bright prospects for the lady who joins him in his matrimonial venture. It will be time enough to judge how they seem on the stage after we have been invited to see them there.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Maj. William Chamberlaine, of the Coast Artillery Corps, now on duty at the War Department, in the office of the chief of that corps, and lately director of the department of artillery and mine defense at the Coast Artillery School at Ft. Monroe, Va., has developed a war game for that corps that will be put to practical test. This game enables officers of the Coast Artillery to become familiar with the various conditions that may arise during an attack on a fortified harbor; it trains them to estimate the various situations quickly, and to give promptly the necessary commands or instructions.

Rear-Admiral William B. Caperton, the new commander of the Atlantic reserve fleet, entered the navy forty-two years ago, and his flagship was the frigate Constellation. He is a native of Tennessee, one of the oldest officers in the navy, and has been commandant of the Newport naval station.

After thirty-eight years of service Maj.-Gen. William P. Biddle, commandant of the Marine Corps, has applied for voluntary retirement under the thirty-years' service law. Maj.-Gen. Biddle has been commandant of the corps since February 3, 1911.

Vice-President Marshall will make Chautauqua speeches next year. He has made tentative arrangements to deliver thirty-five speeches in Illinois, Kansas, Iowa and Missouri in August, provided the Congress is not in session at that time, and to deliver twenty Chautauqua speeches on the Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania circuit in November.

Prof. Carl Lorentzen, whom New York University sent to Iceland to found a university on American principles, has returned to this country as the educational adviser of the University of Iceland, and will map out a constructive scheme for the upbuilding of higher education and the public school system in the country which has honored him.

Lathrop Brown, new Democratic member of the House of Representatives, whose home is at St. James, L. I., is the "baby" of Congress and a millionaire. He is 30 years old, holds a Harvard degree and is a member of Squadron A, New York National Guard.

J. O. Davidson, who will execute the bust of Ambassador Page, is an American sculptor whose work has attracted marked attention in the last few years. Among the busts Davidson has done are those of Harry Payne Whitney and Emily Grigsby.

STATESMEN.

Sanford Kirkpatrick, the new Congressman from Iowa's Sixth District, says Congress is too tame for a young man of action like him. He's only 72. At one time in his life he was a revenue officer in the South—in fact he served twenty-seven years in the internal revenue service—and he liked that work very much. Every now and then he exchanged shots with a moonshiner, and to this day carries several pieces of lead in his anatomy as mementoes of those occasions.

Congressman Cardell Hull, who is responsible for the income tax which is giving the country so much concern, comes from the country region of Tennessee, where his father was engaged in the timber business. He took a law course at the Cumberland University and returned to the town of Celina to practice, though he was not 20 years old. A proud constituency sent him to the legislature, and a few years later he was appointed judge of the Fifth District. From the bench he went to Congress, where he is now serving his fourth term.

"Being a Senator in Alaska is a serious proposition," said Senator Conrad Freeding of Nome. "I traveled 2600 miles by dog team with the barometer at times 62 degrees below zero in order to attend the last session of the Legislature at Juneau," he continued.

"It required two months to make the journey. When we started the session the first thing we did was pass a woman's suffrage law. I handled the bill in the Senate. Up in Alaska we try to keep politics out of our legislative discussions."

right upon the heels of Road Show comes another Sulli- Considine bill to the Empress promises in more than to outrank the Road Show new bill of new acts opens usual matinee performance and it is safe to predict prove one of the most at- and popular that has ever the popular-priced stage.

of the season's most notable attractions and is presented company numbering twenty, four elaborate scenes and effects, with a story that at to every human being, depicts in character form of men and women, the of the play representing Everywife, Everyhusband, Reason, Jealousy, Drink, Money, Vanity, Amusement, Kind- and many others. Mr. chosen a splendid com- portrayal and it is easily biggest and most expensive that has ever been sent popular-priced circuit.

the new bill will be Harry Jack Allman, the former Empire City Quartette and foremost young American form a perfect vocal alliance, offering duets and solos of rare worth.

Third among the newcomers is Bruce, Duffet and company in their screamingly funny farce, "Over the Transom." Miss Duffet was for many years a great favorite of the Burbank stock company. She has not been here in a number of years and she will no doubt receive a warm reception when she makes her appearance on the Empress stage.

The clever team of Bert Harris and Montie Brooke will add much music and gaiety to the new bill with their clever singing and dancing skit, "The One and the Other," while the celebrated Livingston trio of comedians and horizontal bar experts will also add much to the funmaking portion of the new bill.

Exclusive of these fine new acts will be the new Keystone comedies.

Pantages.

"Harlem" Tommy Murphy will attract to Pantages next week the fight clientele. Murphy's approaching meeting with Willie Ritchie has made him the prominent feature of San Francisco pugilistic circles, and almost as much so here in Los Angeles. For the past two weeks he has been featured on the Pantages stage at San Francisco and Oakland, giving a sparring exhibition, shadow dancing, rope skipping, etc., with his training partner. This is the first time that Pantages has presented a fighter here, and it will be something of a novelty to see a pugilist featured on a Broadway stage, though the past-masters of the ring have been regularly seen there.

Walter S. Howe, Edna Northlane and a company of competent vaudevillians will be seen in Porter Emerson Browne's ludicrously funny sketch, "In and Out." The playlet tells of the adventures of a clubman who has dined so well that he cannot distinguish his own house from his neighbor's. Entering the wrong house, he meets his destiny in the person of the owner's sister, who takes him as he is, for better or for worse. The supporting company includes Ira Willard, Herman Noble and Walter Yeatts.

Capt. Pickard's seals show just a couple of degrees more intellect than other similar acts seen in the past. There are five of them, four full grown and a baby seal that is the pride of the show. Capt. Pickard appears to be a trainer with original ideas.

Sol Berns returns, this time accompanied by Mrs. Solly, whose stage name is Leslie. They have a new act, called "Auto-ology," with joyous interludes of Hebrew comedy. Blanche Gordon, coon shouter and monologist, has had the approval of Pantages patrons all along the line. The White Duo, man and woman, have a pleasing gymnastic novelty.

Hippodrome.

A big ten-feature bill, made up entirely of nine headline acts, is announced by Manager Fountain for the Hippodrome for the coming week, beginning with the matinee Monday.

Herbert Clifton, who made such a hit last week, will hold over, and present an entirely new repertoire, which is certain to surpass his offerings of last week, and Foram and Johns will present a brand new sketch, which will be even better than usual.

One of the big features of the new bill will be the famed Schepp Dog, Pony and Monkey Circus, reputed to be one of the greatest animal acts in vaudeville, sure to please the children, and clever enough to interest the grownups as well.

Blachin and Hehr, comedy singers and dancers, will bring snap and spice to the new bill, with new songs and dance step, in which they have injected not a little comedy, while the Three Tantalizing Maids are a harmony trio of headline caliber. The girls are pretty, too, and that helps a lot.

A real event will be the return of Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons in a new skit. This time she brings with her Carl Hayden, who made such a hit in "The Merry Countess." Their new vehicle is credited with being a real sparkler and au fait.

Duke, the muscular marvel, a boy wonder if ever there was one, will make the seventh big act, and in addition there will be three New Year's photoplays, and a new fashion series, which are a whole show in themselves.

Woodley Theater.

Today will be the last on which one may see the famous Irish drama, "True Irish Hearts," produced by the Domino company, which has been the big sensation at Woodley's Theater, on Broadway, opposite the Majestic Theater, since New Year's Day. Also the last on which there will be displayed on the big glass screen that screaming comedy, "A Misplaced Foot," which features Ford Sterling and is credited with being the best Keystone farce ever made.

For, beginning tomorrow an entire change of programme will go into effect, embracing the best of the new mutual features. Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and all the rest of the Keystone stars are busy with the first of the 1914 productions, and of these Woodley's Theater has first selection, and offers to its patrons the cream of the output.

The new programme also boasts some splendid dramas, which are sure to arouse thrills, even in the most blase picture lover, while in addition C. Percival Garratt has arranged a new music programme for the mammoth multiple organ, which, according to his own statement, will surpass anything he has yet given since the opening of Woodley's Theater.

Tally's Broadway.

A film that cost $250,000 is to be shown at Tally's Broadway Theater next week. The original Pasquali production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," an eight-reel version of Bulwer Lytton's masterpiece, has never been shown here before. Pasquali, using 10,000 people, building settings of tremendous size, providing thrills and sensations almost beyond belief, has incorporated in 260 great scenes, a marvelous, awe-inspiring and spectacular recital of Italy's greatest tragedy.

The scenes in the arena alone would constitute a picture which would class with the greatest in the history of motography. The chariot race affords an unprecedented spectacle, five horses being killed in the mad dash. The fighting of the gladiators, the lions, and finally the destruction of Pompeii—the mad scurrying of demented thousands amid a hail of smoking cinders and blasts of flame—the falling of great pillars, the collapse of temples, compels the spectator to admit that he is seeing the acme of realism in the motion picture.

This remarkable feature will be shown for one week only, the first shown starting at 11 o'clock in the morning and each two hours thereafter. The last performance will start at 9 o'clock in the evening.

Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall was the first man in the United States to pay his income tax under the new income tax law. He did not wait to have his income tax deducted from his salary, but made inquiry as to the amount and gave his personal check for it, thus achieving the distinction of being the first man to pay an income tax. His salary is $12,000 a year. He is entitled to tax exemption of $4000, and his tax, being 1 per cent. on the balance, was $80. He has always been an ardent advocate of an income tax.

edy and romantic drama, but he replied that his ambition meant far more than mere money getting, and that he was not to be moved from his purpose. He might have to wait for the critics and the public, but he had made up his mind to wait.

He realized perfectly that they would want him to continue pleasing them after the manner in which he had pleased them for years, but his ambition was fixed on the greater thing, and he was determined to achieve it. He had a hard fight, it is well known, to make them accept the change.

REMAKING HIMSELF.

On this point he said recently: "It was not half so hard, though, as it was for me to adapt myself to the new condition—to fit myself for it—to rid myself completely of the methods for all phases of light comedy which had taken years of study, work and patience to acquire, to replace them with an equipment the direct opposite for my new field, and never by any possibility to let my old self intrude. It was almost like annihilating one man and creating another in his stead. That, believe me, was the difficult thing."

And then, after years of struggle for recognition in the field of Shakespearean drama, the Sothern-Marlowe combination was formed; and a peculiar thing about the matter is that up to that time, while Mr. Sothern had met Miss Marlowe on several occasions, he had never witnessed one of her stage performances. So each was a bit nervous about the other. How the combination has prospered, how it has season after season given the playgoing public rich intellectual treats, how it has probably made Shakespeare more popular than ever before in the American theater, is now stage history.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

J. J. Clark, newly-elected Mayor of the village of Minerva, O., probably will be longer in office than any other Ohio Mayor—six feet four inches from head to hose, to be explicit. When Mayor Clark enters his chamber in the town hall on January 1 and sits down in his office chair on one side of the little room, he will be able to prop his feet up on the other side, if he feels inclined to stretch.

Nathan Straus, long a leading figure in the mercantile world, will devote the greater part of his time henceforth, it is said, to benevolent enterprises. He is deeply interested in extending the work of the Relief Bureau and other charitable undertakings which he has inaugurated in Palestine. He was born in Bavaria in 1848, and was brought to this country by his parents in 1854. After graduating from a business college he joined his father in importing pottery and glassware, in which business he is still interested.

Col. John N. Merrill, on whom the Shah of Persia has conferred the decoration of the Order of the Lion, the highest ranking order given by the Persian government, is an American, a native of Maine. He went to Persia several years ago, and finally became a commander of the gendarmes. Recently he left that arm of the service, having signed a contract for three years, and is given an independent command of infantry and cavalry, the object being to make Southern Persia uninhabitable for the outlaws who now infest it.

Long feathers on hats are unsanitary and carry germs, says Representative Robert Washburn of Worcester, Mass., who is going to champion the bill in the next General Court forbidding feathers protruding more than two inches from the crown of a hat.

H. M. Waite, City Engineer of Cincinnati, has been called to the position of "manager" of the city of Dayton under its new commission form of government. He will draw a salary of $12,000.

Lieut.-Gov. W. A. Greenlund of Cleveland has been offered the work of appraising the real estate owned by all railroads in the United States, under the direction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The position has been created by the commission under a recent act of Congress and will take from five to seven years.

ODD POSSESSIONS.

Arsene Therien of Woonsocket, R. I., possesses the oldest vehicle in the State, a barouche which was first put into use 225 years ago. The body is without springs, but is mounted on thoroughbraces, supported by two wheels, and is still a solid and safe carriage for light use.

In the home of Andrew Jackson of Fairfield, Me., there is a clock more than 180 years old, which tells the phases of the moon as well as the days of the month. In the same house there is a wall paper twenty-five years old.

John Beck of Middletown, Pa., has an old musket that dates from the Revolution, and what makes it all the more interesting is that his great-grandfather carried it through the war of independence. The musket is well preserved, notwithstanding the fact that it began its war service at Bunker Hill and was used for years after in hunting.

Manville A. Martin of North Newport, Me., has a sword cane that was owned in 1515 by Father Dupe, who translated the Greek Bible into French. The blade of the sword is covered with quaint and curious engravings. The sheath is made of red cedar, but which some time has been stained a darker color.

Mrs. A. E. Faught of Augusta, Me., has an interesting relic in the form of a bill entitling the bearer to "two Spanish milled dollars or their value in gold or silver." The bill was issued February 17, 1776.

J. C. Ringo of Mexico, Mo., has a tax receipt given to his father in 1834, according to which the latter paid $2.31 in taxes on the following property: Fourteen horses, a large herd of cattle, a flock of sheep a slave and 160 acres of land.

John K. Tener, six-footer, president of the National League, one of six brothers, all of whom have exceeded that height, as a boy lived in the old Sixth Ward of Pittsburgh and has had so many of his fortunes associated with that number that he must deem it lucky. Besides being president of the National League and Governor of Pennsylvania, he is said to be in line for the Senate, to succeed Penrose.

Near Naples.

The sun is warm, the day is clear,
The waves are dancing fast and bright,
Blue isles and snowy mountains wear
The purple noon's transparent night:
The breath of the moist earth is light
Around its unexpanded buds:
Like many a voice of one delight—
The winds, the birds, the ocean-floods—
The city's voice itself is soft like solitude's.

I see the deep's untrampled floor
With green and purple seaweeds strown;
I see the waves upon the shore
Like light dissolved in star-showers thrown:
I sit upon the sands alone;
The lightning of the noontide ocean
Is flashing round me, and a tone
Arises from its measured motion—
How sweet! did any heart now share in my emotion.

tures sent to the Fine Arts Gallery, Exposition Park, by the American Federation of Arts, and now on exhibition there, a score of recent canvases from the brushes of our own home painters are shown. On the whole, they compare very favorably with those from outside, though there are great names on the imported list—William M. Chase, Edward W. Redfield, Childe Hassam, Charles Warren Eaton, Leonard Ochtman, Bruce Crane, John W. Alexander, Emil Carlsen, Ben Foster, Robert Vonnoh, Frank W. Benson, Gardner Symons and others.

Comparisons, though always illuminating, are sometimes found to be odious. I am glad to be able to record that our painters can stand the test without flinching. Indeed, a few of the best pictures on the walls come from Los Angeles painters.

Detlef Samman shows two that are vigorous in feeling and execution, both painted in the neighborhood of his studio at Monterey—"Hazy Morning, Cypress Point," and "In the Depths of the Forest." From Edgar Keller comes two notable New York pictures, subtle in effect, powerfully and simply done; these are "Under the Bridge" and "Winter Evening, High Bridge."

Sunlight and air are found in Helena Dunlap's pictures, and she applies the paint with a sure hand. Joseph Greenbaum exhibits his interesting "Portrait of Father Tonello," Anna A. Hills, a mellow study of "Primrose Valley, Cornwall;" Frans Bischoff, two brilliant studies of roses seen in sunlight; Maurice Braun, a large canvas, "Mission Hills," in tones of pinkish gray.

Excellent examples of the work of Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel are shown, several characteristic Granville Redmonds, one being a vigorous seascape, and good examples of the later paintings of Jean Mannheim, Hanson Puthuff, Jules Pages and Benjamin Chambers Brown.

Many of these pictures have already been spoken of in Art and Artists. My readers know my estimate of the painters of them. Each canvas in the present collection at the Fine Arts Gallery has been carefully and earnestly painted, is the expression of a poetic mood, a sincere thought, and is well worthy of your consideration.

The exhibition of works by American painters will be followed, in February, by several large exhibitions of American etchings. The Art Committee have great plans up their sleeves.

What Is Synchromism?

The "isms" in painting follow one another in such rapid succession, fads and fancies chase one another in such bewildering haste that the layman, and even more the "lover of art," is often at a loss to know what all the fuss is about.

Willard Huntington Wright, in his interesting "Impressionism to Synchromism," published in the current number of the Forum, thinks he can enlighten us—and, as a matter of fact, he does enlighten us, though he dismisses great names in his usual summary fashion. He finds Monet's "Water Lilies" "essentially insignificant and petty," Manet "immensely overestimated," Corot, Rousseau and Millet "overestimated painters." Renoir, however, "is as great as Rubens, and has a greater plastic pictorial vision," while Cezanne's "figure compositions are to be ranked with the greatest in existence."

All of which, and much more to the same tune, leads up to Wright's reason for delving so recklessly into waters long ago become cosily tranquil. He's hunting for the biggest pearl-clam, one that has just reached maturity. Behold, he has found it—"he fished the murex up!" Its dazzling name is synchromism, and, to quote the author's ever-forceful English, it was "sired by S. MacDonald-Wright and Morgan Russell." However, it is only fair to say th lard Huntington Wright do call synchromism a clam, "phase." S. MacDonald-Wr W. H. WOMEN'S WORK, W

BY SYDNEY

AFTER a holiday month, during which clubs have enjoyed a vacation from strenuous work, the year 1914 opens with a rush, and programmes show busy days ahead of us. The Ebell Club suspended all department meetings during the month of December and now, as if to make up for lost time, the dates crowd thick and fast upon us with no prospect of cessation till the end of June, when the year's work closes.

The department of parliamentary law holds its first 1914 session tomorrow in charge of Mrs. Matthew S. Robertson, and the department of expression, of which Mrs. W. R. Mall is curator, will meet Tuesday morning to continue the study of Emerson's "Works and Days." On Wednesday morning the drama department will meet for a general discussion of local plays, led by Mrs. Swaine. A free discussion is also invited on the value of modern tragedy and Mrs. Eliza Tupper Wilkes will give us Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion."

On Thursday morning the art and travel section will meet and continue its trips about Paris. We are to visit Sevres also on that day, and Mrs. Rosa Charles will tell us about its wonderful porcelain. We will also pay a visit to the Gobelin tapestry manufactory under the chaperonage of Mrs. A. Walls, and Miss Helen Brooks, director of the department, will speak of French art in the eighteenth century.

On Friday morning the class in French expression will present a one-act comedy, "La Cigale Chez les Fourmis." The cast will include Miss Juliette Rockwell, Mmes. Walter H. Fisher, Joel B. Gwynne, Viola Lowry and Miss Helen Switzer. On Saturday the members of the bird study and forestry department will have a field day excursion to Laughlin Park. So you see, altogether, we shall have a very busy week. The regular meeting of the club tomorrow will be of a purely business nature, followed by a reception.

Friday Morning Class Meeting.

The first meeting of the New Year of the Friday Morning Club was transformed into a regular Methodist class meeting, with the president, Mrs. Russell J. Waters, in the role of class leader last Friday, preliminary to the regular programme. One of the members became so thoroughly enthused over a certain suggestion made that she shouted "Amen," in truly Methodist fashion, which rather startled some of the dignified members, but was responded to by the majority with vigorous handclaps.

As the speaker of the day was not due till 11 o'clock, Mrs. Waters suggested that the quarter-hour remaining after the reading of the minutes be devoted to the expression of New Year sentiments by club members. She remarked that the world had taken down the 1913 calendar and had struck a balance between the follies and wisdom of earthly things and made new resolutions. Hence it was the psychological moment to take out the club ideals and dust them up and polish them off a little. She invited the members, therefore, to express their New Year greetings in the form of suggestions and criticisms, cautioning them, however, that they must be optimistic—no pessimists would be tolerated.

The first member on her feet was Mrs. Mary Porter Haines, a member of eighteen years' standing, who said she thought the club was offering too much in the way of mere entertainment in its programmes and not enough of the solids—she would prefer a little more of the substantials and less of the dessert, so to speak. She said that the Friday Morning Club has always stood for the brains of this community and it seemed to her that the programmes were in too light a vein. The serious work of the club seemed to be relegated to committees which resolved themselves into clubs within a club and in her opinion the book reviews and civic questions should be brought before the club as a whole. These sentiments were greeted with applause which indicated affirmation.

Mrs. Duane expressed the wish that some of the members in turn could serve as doorkeepers and she cleverly and humorously touched up the latecomers and suggested that if restless members could only content themselves with one exit during a club session it would make things easier for the doorkeepers and quieter for the speakers.

Mrs. Jules Kauffman spoke in most complimentary terms of the courtesy of the Friday Morning Club as compared with other clubs toward their speakers, and the respectful attention given, but another member—Mrs. Schutze—took issue with this statement and, in support of her position, referred the attention of members to a certain specific occasion when marked discourtesy was shown by the restlessness and inattention and untimed exits of members during the presentation of the programme.

Mrs. George H. Wadleigh reminded the members that they must give as well as take, pressing home the sense of responsibility and steady, persistent loyalty.

Mrs. William Baurhyte brought down the house in her clever sarcasm concerning the tremendous advantage held by the officers of the club and the Programme Committee, who seemed to have little to do and got altogether too much out of the club work. She thought the members should do something to the board to make them up for this, and the result was a formal resolution put by Mrs. Osgood in regular parliamentary form pledging the co-operation of the club to its officers.

Mrs. Cordelia Kirkland told of the satirical and dogmatic criticism of a man in our midst who has summed us up this way: "The loveliest people in the world, but the most unpunctual I ever saw." This carping critic says, it seems, that she had noticed at the theaters, churches and lecture halls an invariable crowd of late comers who gather about the entrance and chatter in the most disconcerting fashion. In fact, she said, in a certain church here this habit of the congregation has become so annoying that notice has been taken of the habitual practices of the flock. In commenting on the remarks of an outsider, Miss volunteered the opinion that the Friday Morning Club averages well with the community in this respect, but there is a large chance for improvement.

Our Nation's Capital.

The speaker at the Friday Morning Club last week was Mary Mendenhall Perkins, who gave us a finely illustrated and deeply interesting lecture on our nation's capital. Going back to the legend of Indian wigwams on the Potomac, she incidentally mentioned that a maternal ancestor of her own was wedded to a relative of Pocahontas, which makes her a real American. The picture of the public buildings of Washington, its streets and squares and circles, were thrown on the screen one after the other, and descriptions were given in a graphic and comprehensive way.

Next Friday we are to have an address on currency legislation by J. F.

Entertain Pacific Branch.

The women of the new Hobart Boulevard Methodist Church are making great preparations for the entertainment of the quarterly meeting of the Pacific branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, which will come off on Wednesday, January 14, in the handsome new edifice where this congregation now worships.

African Missionary to Speak.

Mrs. Nellie Arnott Darling, late of the West Central African Mission, will speak at the morning session of the all-day meeting of the women of the First Congregational Church on Thursday, January 15. Interesting letters will also be read from missionaries in Turkey and India. Mrs. Morris Turk, wife of the pastor, will lead the devotions.

D.A.R. Meetings.

Next Wednesday the Los Angeles chapter of the D.A.R. will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Fowler apartments, Washington street and Union avenue. Mmes. J. V. Peacock and Henry J. Martin and Miss Sallie Rose Smith will act as hostesses, and the programme will be given by Mmes. William Duffield, Charles F. Quillian and Helen Henderson Steckel.

On February 20, at the residence of Mrs. Charles F. McKevett, No. 4025 West Adams street, this chapter will entertain at an afternoon reception in honor of the State officers and delegates to the State convention which comes off here, opening on that date.

Last Tuesday evening Mrs. A. A. Adams entertained the senior branch of the children of the American Revolution at a dancing party at her home, No. 1257 Burlington avenue, in honor of her son.

Splendid Christmas Gifts.

Half a hundred little folks at the King's Daughter's Day Nursery on Clarence street, were made supremely happy by a visit from Santa Claus last Tuesday evening. Although a little late good old Saint Nick made up for the delay in the abundance of gifts he brought as the almoner of two philanthropic women whose hearts are in the right place.

Mrs. Henry Carleton Lee of West Adams street had made a private arrangement with Santa Claus whereby each child in the institution received exactly the kind of gift most desired. In the confidential plans it had been discovered that dolls with carriages would be most acceptable to the little girls, while the boys preferred red wagons, roller skates, bats and balls. Not a child was disappointed, and the fine quality of the toys indicated that a substantial check was required to meet the expense.

Mrs. E. L. Doheny of Chester place was another generous donor, and in most practical fashion. She paid up a $90 assessment against the property and also sent a check for $25 additional. Both these women have always evinced a strong and substantial interest in the Day Nursery and it will be remembered that the library of the institution was built and furnished as a memorial to the late Mrs. Mary Andrews Clark by her children and grandchildren, of whom Mrs. Lee is one.

A feature of the entertainment Wednesday night was the programme of music and recitations by the little folks themselves, and by the grown-up boys and girls, who were formerly in the nursery, and are now out in the world caring for themselves. This institution is now nineteen years old and every Christmas season these young people return to help celebrate Yuletide in the hospitable nursery, where they were cared for in babyhood.

New Book Announced.

Alvin Langdon Coburn, the famous artist-photographer, who, it will be remembered, appeared before the Friday Morning Club a few months ago, has just issued his book, "Men of Mark," which contains thirty-three remarkable photogravures of well-known men in this country and Europe, together with delightful descriptions of the authors and artists portrayed. An extended article in a recent issue of the Forum, from the pen of Coburn, tells in a delightful, intimate and personal way, of his adventures in securing the posing of these celebrities before his camera. In the course of the article he refers to his visit to Los Angeles and speaks in most complimentary terms of our C. C. Parker, whom he calls "that prince of booksellers."

In the exhibit of Coburn's pictures at the Friday Morning Clubhouse on the occasion of his visit here, several of the originals included in his book were among the collection which adorned the walls of the clubhouse.

A Traveler Returns.

I have recently received a letter from Mrs. G. Adams-Fisher, that indefatigible traveler, who has a perfect passion for mousing about in queer corners of the earth. She had just reached New York after spending fifteen months in South America, and says that her wanderings there have meant more than any other of her long and varied travels, because it revealed so much that was absolutely new.

"We go to Europe and the Orient," she says, "comparatively well posted on all lines, but we start for the vast continent to our south in blissful ignorance of its marvelous resources, and are appalled and overwhelmed with what our great southern neighbor has to offer."

Mrs. Fisher has penetrated the jungles, scaled the stark heights of the Andes, mingled in the gay rush and bustle of Buenos Aires, that Paris of South America; inspected the Inca ruins, sugar and coffee plantations, the green vales of Chili, and the beauties of the Rio. Altogether, she returns to Los Angeles thoroughly enthusiastic over the results of this jaunt.

Uncle Sam's Bakery.

Did you know that we have a government bakery in Washington, presided over by a woman—Miss H. L. Wessling? Yes, Uncle Sam has gone into the bread-making business on a genuinely scientific basis. One of the chief objects is to find some cheaper substitute for cereal flour in order to combat the high cost of living and the relatively small wheat crop, which is insufficient to provide material for bread enough to feed us all. Miss Wessling is an expert chemist and was selected to take charge of this new, scientific, governmental bakery. She is experimenting with all sorts of flour—banana flour, potato flour and meals made from dasheens, soy beans, chestnuts and other products.

College Women's Jinks.

The January jinks of the College Women's Club came off yesterday at the Wednesday Morning Clubhouse, on Sichel street, and the music, mirth and munching thereof certainly woke up the neighborhood of the peaceful East Side. The distractions were led off by Misses Maud Howell and Gertrude Workman, masquerading as two stellar artists, who coruscated an act that ran two years from Paris to Milpitas—so the advance notices stated. A quartette of dusky Hawaiian maids strummed soulful strains from native ukeleles and the Russian ballet with Spanish toe dances and French esthetic tangoists was a gem. A romantic drama under the classic name of "The Yellow Sweater," was perpetrated by a cast of hand-painted china women drawn from the ranks of the club, and so thoroughly disguised that their own mothers would never have known them. Stanford women furnished the refreshments, which were dainty home-made goodies—the kind mother used to send in a box when you were in college. In fact, it was a Stanford day, and Miss Ruth Hutchinson had charge of the meeting. "Josh" presents were brought by members, which created any amount of merriment.

Lord Cowdray, owner of vast oil land holdings in Mexico which have been affected by the revolution, has been operating in the southern republic since 1889. In private life he is Sir Weetman Pearson, whose grandfather founded the Pearson firm in 1840. Lord Cowdray is noted for his taciturnity, and in an interview said: "I never talk about my business. Talking is a sign of weakness." Since the Pearsons first secured a foothold in Mexico they have built railways and electric lines, harbors and waterworks; they have acquired interests in mining properties, investments in jute, and finally secured 800,000 acres of land containing probably the greatest oil fields in the world. Pearson's title comes from Cowdray Park, a large and ancient English estate.

This is Guaranteed to Stop Your Cough

Make this Family Supply of Cough Syrup at Home and Save $2.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NATURE STORIES.

The Skunk Finds Himself.

[Our Dumb Animals:] "There is a pretty good story," said Ben, "about how the skunk got his scent. I presume people have often wondered.

"One day, years and years ago, a skunk sat down under a juniper bush to think, and he quite naturally got to thinking about himself.

"'What a poor stupid old thing I am,' he said. 'I am the most defenseless of all the forest folks. I cannot run away from my enemies like the rabbit, because my legs are short. I cannot bite like the woodchuck because my teeth are not so sharp. I cannot go into my shell, like the turtle when I am threatened because I have no shell. I have no nimble wits like the fox. If something is not done my kind will be exterminated.'

"When the kind wood nymph saw the skunk's sorrowful face, she was troubled, for it saddens her to see any of her creatures grieve.

"She pondered long and deeply upon the subject, and then a bright smile overspread her face. When the skunk saw the smile, he was glad because he knew that the good wood nymph had thought of something fine for him.

"'Mr. Skunk,' said the wood nymph in her sweetest tones, 'I am most sorry that you were left so defenseless, and I have thought of a plan. I will give you this wonderful smelling bottle, and whenever any of your enemies trouble you, just take out the cork.'

"Mr. Skunk took the magic bottle, and hurried away eager to try it upon some one of his enemies.

"He did not have to wait long, for soon Mr. Red Fox came creeping by.

"'Ah, here is a snap,' he said, 'My breakfast already cooked. I do believe that the skunk is the stupidest animal in—'

"But Mr. Fox did not finish his remarks for just at that point, when the fox was about to jump, Mr. Skunk took out the stopper from his magic bottle.

"Mr. Red Fox turned a double summersault in his haste to leave that part of the woods, and he ran away yelping, and pawing at his eyes and nose.

"To this very day Mr. Red Fox always takes off his hat when he meets a skunk, as do all the other animals in the woods."

Fish Climb Ladders.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] There are four little fishes in a tank down at the Aquarium which have traveled all the way from the upper Amazon along with their ponderous names, pterophyllium scalare. The first part of their names may be pronounced "petroleum" if you are in a hurry, but the scalare, which everybody knows means ladder in Latin, must be stuck to. Persons who are not well up in fishology sometimes call these fishes butterfly fishes. This is because they have a very slight resemblance to a butterfly and because when they get tired of water they skip gracefully into the air and, spreading their fins, fly around until they get a new desire for the water. They get the scalare part of their name from an inordinate desire to spend their lives climbing ladders. In their tank is a small ladder, and you may see them any day frolicking up and down the rungs.

Why the Dog Is Loved.

[Our Dumb Animals:] In our household the dog always had a welcome, says Rev. Abbot Charles, D.D. We were all—particularly myself and father—fond of the St. Bernard. One day I asked father why most people cared so much for the dog. Whereupon, he replied:

"Because the dog is man's oldest friend. When Adam was driven from paradise all creation rebelled against him. Standing outside the gates of that beautiful garden he raised his eyes and hands to heaven and cried, 'Oh, God, let me have at least one of my old pets.' Then he dropped his hands to his side. All at once he felt the warm breath of some beast against his arm, and looking down saw it was a dog. Since that time the dog has followed man all over the earth. He did not desert man after his fall and he never does desert his master no matter how poor or wretched.

"Now, my boy, that's why I love my dog."

Dog Has Movie Habit.

[Indianapolis News:] Mr. and Mrs. Lee Thomas of Rushville, Ind., have a dog named Noisey that displays as much interest in movies as most persons. He had the habit of following Mr. and Mrs. Thomas downtown each evening and into a moving picture show. He became a nuisance and they drove him back several evenings, only to find him in the show later on.

Finally they thwarted him by locking him up each evening. But this scheme was soon fathomed by Noisey and Mrs. Thomas searched vainly for the dog. When Mr. and Mrs. Thomas arrived at the moving picture show they were told that their pet had preceded them and he was found sitting on a chair in the front row.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have given up the idea of keeping Noisey at home and he is now to be found well down in the front at the "movies" every night.

The doorman charges him nothing.

Mule Feeds a Teammate.

[Indianapolis News:] George Rassi, a Milford drayman, owns a mule that recently slipped its halter and ate its fill of corn from the feed barrel. After it was returned to its stall it slipped the halter a second time and again went to the barrel, this time to get corn for a teammate, which was in an adjoining stall. The mule made fourteen trips to the barrel and carried fourteen ears of corn to its companion and then returned to its own stall.

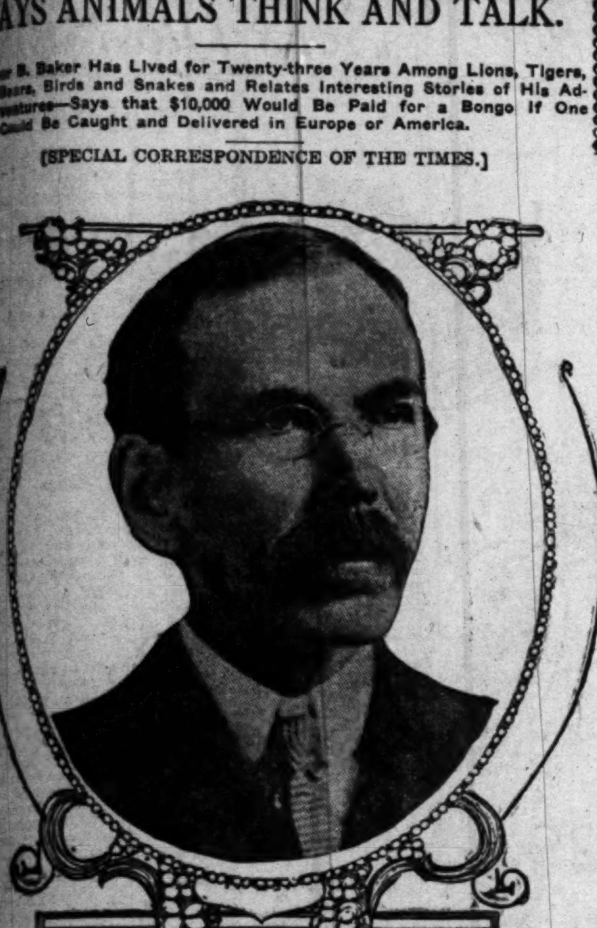
SAYS ANIMALS THINK AND TALK.

Arthur B. Baker Has Lived for Twenty-three Years Among Lions, Tigers, Bears, Birds and Snakes and Relates Interesting Stories of His Adventures—Says that $10,000 Would Be Paid for a Bongo If One Could Be Caught and Delivered in Europe or America.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]



Arthur B. Baker,
The distinguished zoologist.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Having lived with animals, wild ones and tame ones, from his boyhood up, Arthur B. Baker thinks that they can talk among themselves and communicate with one another, and that men and apes are distantly related by blood.

Mr. Baker is one of the most experienced zoologists in the world and has studied birds, reptiles and mammals in Africa, Canada and the United States. He has dug them out of the earth hundreds of years after their death and has scrutinized them as they crept or crashed through the forests and as they paced back and forth in their cages and dens.

"Man and the ape," he said, "sprang from the same parent stem. There is no doubt of it. Anthropologists, generally, so believe. Man and apes were brothers at one stage of the earth's evolution. They came, one might say, to a fork in the road. The ape went one way; man went the other way.

"It is often difficult to tell when ancient skulls and bones are found in excavations whether they belonged to a high order of apes or a low order of man. There are apes and apes nowadays, as there are men and men. Pygmies are men. Cannibals are men. An ape in New York eats at a table with a knife and fork and wipes his mouth with a napkin. Men and monkeys perform in about the same way when they are angry. Nor has man lost his ancient and ape-like propensity to 'show off.' Other analogies might be mentioned."

Though he goes home at night, of course, Mr. Baker for the past twenty-three years has mainly dwelt among animals. Back in his youth he caught butterflies and stuffed squirrels, rabbits and owls. In manhood he became connected with the Smithsonian Institution. The National Zoological Park, which contains one of the largest collections of animals in existence, is, in a measure, his own creation. He, Dunk and Golddust were its earliest inhabitants.

STARTED WITH TWO ELEPHANTS.

Dunk and Golddust were elephants. They became personally acquainted after the fashion of elephants with practically every tourist who came to Washington. Children in all parts of the United States remember them more vividly, perhaps, than they do the White House or the pillared Treasury. They were owned in their circus days by Cooper, the showman. Dunk, who is still living, is a very large elephant. He and another elephant, their interests or ambitions clashing, fought at every opportunity, smashing up considerable of Cooper's property and giving the circus parade each morning a tang of danger and uncertainty.

Mr. Cooper wrote that he would give Dunk to the nation. Millions of persons had seen him and still loved him, and he was, Cooper might say, something of a national institution. A shed was quickly constructed in Rock Creek Park. A few weeks later Dunk arrived with the circus and became a permanent resident of Washington.

Mr. Cooper also presented Golddust to the American people, saying he feared that Dunk would be lonely without a sympathetic companion. Golddust, now happily no more, was mangy, mean, and disreputable. Mr. Baker and Dunk showed no special grief when attending his funeral, though they were supposed to be the chief mourners.

Thus began the National Zoological Park. Mr. Baker helped to build the first shed. He and Dunk have been comrades ever since. Now, after twenty-three years in Washington, he is going to Boston, where, as director of the Franklin Park Zoo, although he is the most modest of men, he hopes to gain new distinction in his profession. He followed Col. Roosevelt into Africa and brought to Washington five lions, a leopard, a zebra, and a number of [illegible]. The animals had been captured by William N. McMillan of St. Louis, who owns a farm of 20,000 acres in the big game country, near Nairobi, and who raises cattle, horses and ostriches and traps wild animals for his private menagerie.

ANIMALS WORTH $10,000.

"How much money," I asked Mr. Baker, "is needed to stock a modern zoological garden?"

"Exclusive of land and buildings," he answered, "for which almost any sum may be spent, about $100,000 would be required for the purchase of a really fine and complete collection of birds, snakes and animals. Of course, there are animals which cannot be obtained for either love or money. The bongo, for instance, which is found in the forests of Eastern and Central Africa, and which has never been caught alive, so far as I know.

"The bongo is a beautiful antelope having brown hair, white stripes running down its sides, and long spiral horns tipped with white. Two specimens of this animal are on exhibition at the National Museum, trophies of Col. Roosevelt's celebrated hunt. No price has ever been put on a bongo, because none has ever been offered for sale, but I suppose New York, Berlin or London would readily give $10,000 or more if one could be obtained.

"Another almost priceless animal is the okapi, also found in Africa. It is striped like a zebra and built like a giraffe. Sir Harry Johnston discovered the animal in 1902 and it was named the okapia johnstoni in his honor. Its mixture of colors include purplish-brown, red, white, buff and black. Like the bongo it has defeated all efforts of man for its capture. I should say that an okapi would also be worth $10,000. If a dozen or more, however, should suddenly appear in the market the price would drop to a much lower level.

"The pygmy hippopotamus, whose habitat is in Liberia, on the west coast of Africa, and which is about the size of a fat barnyard hog, is selling for $6000. The so-called white rhinoceros, though its color is really a dirty gray, is quoted at $10,000. This beast weighs about four tons.

WHY GIRAFFES HIGH PRIVED.

"So far," Baker went on to say, "I have been talking about the value of rare animals, of the aristocrats of the forests. Giraffes, too, are valuable. Their transportation, because of the length of their necks, is expensive and difficult. They are worth in the neighborhood of $3000 delivered in New York. One was bought recently, so I have been told, for $500 less. They are a funny looking animal when they run, seeming to trot with their front legs and to gallop behind. Eight of them followed an African railroad train in which I was riding, and I thought every minute they would tie themselves into bowknots and fall down.

"African elephants range in price from $800, to $3500. Indian elephants are nearly as cheap as horses. They are commonly used as draft animals. One lumber company works 2000 of them every day. Small zebras are selling for $650. The large Grevy zebra of Abyssinia, which gets its name from the former President of France, brings $1200. This is the zebra with which our Agricultural Department is experimenting in an attempt to produce a hybrid work animal.

"Lions can be bought for $200. Large lions of good body and having long, full manes, sell for as much as $1200. Tigers vary in price from $600 to $1200. The Malay Peninsula tiger brings the former price. It is small, but beautifully colored. An Indian tiger, which is large and short-haired, and the Siberian tiger, which has long hair as a protection against the cold, are worth from $1000 to $1200 apiece.

"A large, healthy polar bear can be had for $300. Brown Alaskan bears are quoted at from $300 to $400. We paid $250 for a cub and freightage besides. It now weighs 1160 pounds. Black bears, of course, are cheap. The spectacled bear of the Andes would bring a very large price—either in Europe or the United States. It is black and has white circles around its eyes. There is one in New York, but I know of no other in this country.

VALUABLE SNAKES AND BIRDS.

"There are many kinds of antelopes. A big show can be made of them on a very little money. After the purchase of the high-priced animals, a zoological park can be filled with monkeys, foxes, wolves and so on. A long python, for example, will cost $300, but rattlesnakes as thick as one's wrist can be obtained in Florida for $6 apiece. Copperheads are even cheaper. King cobras are dear because they have to be brought from India and for the additional reason that their bite is fatal. The risks of handling increase their price.

"In the matter of birds," Mr. Baker continued, "the public will be surprised, no doubt, to learn that cranes are worth anywhere from $75 to $250 each. A white, or whooping crane, would bring almost any price the owner might ask. This crane, once abundant, is now practically extinct. I don't know where one could be bought even for $5000.

"A man in Kansas wrote me a few years ago that a white crane was living on the river bank some distance from his house. He wanted to know if I would like to add it to the bird colony at the National Zoological Park. I wrote by the next mail that if he caught the bird alive to let me know. I never expected to hear from him again.

"But he got the crane. He told me that he crawled down to the river bank and hid among some willows. When the crane appeared he ran out and caught it around the body. It is a wonder it didn't dig his eyes out. After a good deal of tussling, he got the crane to the house. I wrote him full shipping directions and the crane arrived in Washington in good condition.

"He was a strange bird. When we let him out of the crate, he surveyed us with a solemn and knowing countenance. He was not frightened in the least. 'This,' he seemed to say, 'is the place for me.' He had a history, I am sure, and we used to speculate a good deal over his possible experiences.

THE CRANE KNEW HIS RIGHTS.

"One autumn we left him until the last while transferring the large birds from their summer inclosure to their winter quarters. Going back two keepers met him on the way in. He didn't mean to be left behind and had climbed the high wire netting. With a keeper holding the tip of each outstretched wing, he gravely came across the lawn, conscious, so it appeared, that he understood his rights and meant to uphold them. He died, however, and was truly mourned by all his human associates."

"Are animals controlled by instinct alone?" I asked Mr. Baker.

"You are trying to drag me onto fighting ground," he answered. "There are always two groups of debaters when that question comes up. I cannot believe that animals are governed entirely by instinct. Yet it is hard to tell where instinct leaves off and reasoning begins; as perplexing as it would be the attempt to draw a definite line between gambling and the investment of money. The village cow, I think, has convinced many a boy that she does some things with a purpose worked out in advance of the acts.

"Once, when visiting in the country, I was impressed by the mental operations of the family dog. My host wanted to go to town without him. But the dog vanished while we were hitching the horse to the buggy. When we were a mile from the house the dog came into the road from the woods. He made his excuses by loud barks and an energetic wagging of his tail. It may have been an old trick, but it had its origin in some original thinking.

"My friend, Dr. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Park, often speaks of Donhung, an orang-outang, who, he says, was an engineer, an investigator and a philosopher. He was a jungle beast, and what he learned he picked up himself. That he had a rudimentary knowledge of at least one of the laws of physics was shown when he used the crossbar of the trapese in his cage to pry a number of horizontal bars from their fastenings. He had first tried and failed to remove the bars with his hands.

HOW HE SAW HIS NEIGHBOR.

"Having found a lever, he employed it to separate the bars of his cage, so that he could put his head through the opening and see his unknown neighbor in the next enclosure. Meanwhile, Donhung refused to learn the common tricks by which the generality of apes and monkeys show off to their human visitors. He was a thoughtful beast and wasted no time on trivialities.

"And there is the elephant, who recognizing the superiority of man, puts away his independent habits of the forest and obeys the laws of his captors. He accepts the inevitable with no outward signs of rebellion. Indeed, he is so adaptable that it is cheaper to catch wild elephants and train them than it is to breed elephants that have been broken to harness and taught to work. The elephant has grown physically from the stature of a wild ram to his present height and bulk. Doubtless he has developed mentally.

"In my opinion, beavers think out their own problems. I would call them specialists. Enos A. Mills, the naturalist, who lived for many years in the Rocky Mountains, tells of a colony of beavers, who, foreseeing that their supply of aspen would be consumed in two years, undertook the opening of new territory. They dug a canal from the stream on which they lived, constructed another dam, flooded the land nearby, and thus developed a means of transporting an additional stock of aspen growing a considerable distance from their habitation. They looked into the future, and that is the point of Mr. Mills's story, and safeguarded themselves against starvation."

"Do animals communicate with one another?"

"Surely. Every boy in the country knows that a hen has a vocal method of warning her chicks to hide in the grass and leaves or find refuge under her wings. When a rooster comes upon a rare tid-bit he notifies his harem. If he sees danger, he sounds an alarm. In the first instance the hens run to him to share in his discovery. In the second, they seek a means of escaping from a hawk or some other enemy.

A JACK THAT TURNED REBEL.

"Nearly all birds and many animals make love with their voices. The calling moose and bugling elk thereby get into difficulties. Hunters hear them, and their courting is often stopped by a bullet. Twenty quail will arise from the stubble of a wheat field simultaneously. A sign, with the velocity of electricity, has gone through the covey.

"Wild stallions guard over and command their wives. The most sagacious leader of a herd of wild horses I ever knew about was a jack, which, escaping from his owner and civilization, became a rebel against man and a great equine general, though an ass. He had learned much

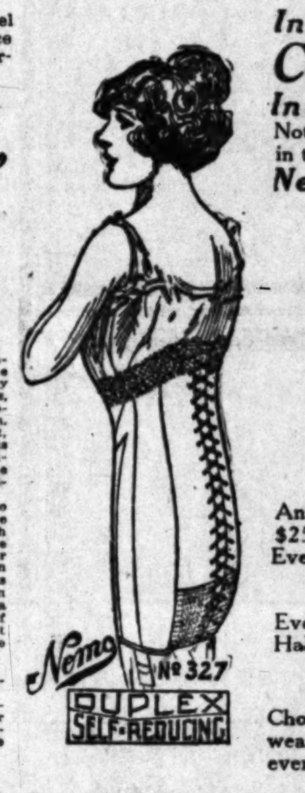
The Nemo "Duplex" Self-Reducing Corset



This excellent model has the improved self reducing front, the front steels of which are slightly curved inward at the lower ends, thereby giving unusually firm abdominal support from underneath.
This model has very long skirt, which reduces upper limbs. It is made easy and flexible by its construction in front, and by the broad bands of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing at the back.
On lacing this corset, the two upper eyelets in the elastic bands are to be laced through with the two lower eyelets in the corset steels. The three lower eyelets in the elastic bands can therefore be closely laced, so as to turn the elastic extension in under the figure, thus giving a complete rounded effect; edge of corset and ends of bones can't show through; corset can't "ride up.")
SIZES—22 to 36.
MATERIAL—Fine white coutil.
SUITABLE — For all stout figures, or for women of medium or full figure who desire extreme reduction all around, below the waist.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2, 1914.

Agnes Darling: Such a whirling, joyous, frivolous week of it! Parties galore, gallant attentions, two new dresses and one new man. The parties were sumptuous, the gallant attentions very acceptable, the dresses adorable and the man forbidden. What more of life could an artless debutante ask?

But the most remarkable thing was the fact that I was actually allowed to spend New Year's Eve at the Alexandria. Of course, that isn't a debutanty affair at all, darling, and I made the very most of it, as I shall certainly never be allowed to go again, unless it is as an elderly spinster or a flighty matron.

As it was, we had to coax and coax the pater and assure him positively that even the very school girls stayed up all night on such occasions these days. He relented with reluctance and would certainly have taken us home at 12:05 a.m. had he been able to collect the party. But somehow or other he never could catch more than one of us at a time and keep us in one place while he caught the others.

And there really were ever and ever so many young girls there, less than my age. But not of our set it must be confessed. But, oh, it was gorgeous—and I shall never be satisfied with a misses' party again. Bread and milk affairs. Every last nook and cranny of that great building was fixed up with supper tables and we danced all over the place—in the ballroom, on the balconies, along the corridors, down the stairs. We danced before the oysters and between the oysters and the soup; between the soup and the crab salad and before the squabs. We actually danced with the ice cream and through the cheese and coffee, and we were all delightfully dressed, delightfully merry, delightfully informal, delightfully utterly frivolous, and we did not get home until 3 in the morning.

Of course, the piece de resistance of the evening was a tableau wherein we saw the old year sink and die and the new year prance upon the scene. Just as the clock struck 12, a young and charming mother tripped in with a darling little real naked baby, the dearest thing you ever saw. A pair of white wings had been attached to his little shoulders, but for the rest he was untrammeled with draperies. He can't have been much more than a year old, but he laughed and seemed to enjoy himself hugely—never a whimper, which, they say, augurs well for 1914. His only embarrassment was when ladies in gorgeously-spangled robes elected to hug him to their bosoms, which, naturally, pricked his unprotected cuticle. A few serious people thought it a shame that such a dear mite should be brought into such a gay scene, but, as Bobby said sarcastically, "Good heavens, that is the only possible chance some of those poor women have of seeing a real baby."

There were quite a lot of people we knew there, many golfers from the country clubs, and a large Pasadena contingent, too. It seemed so funny to see numberless elderly gentlemen and sedate matrons prancing round in naughty, rakish paper caps (the men had a penchant for Mephistophelian or Mandarin headgear,) and the friskiest parasols, which were given to every lady. One naturally twirled them to the music, and what with the streamers which we all threw at anybody, they unwind as they fly, you know, and establish communications of a sentimental nature in all sorts of directions, and the confetti, it was a carnival scene, par excellence.

The day before that there was the McGowan luncheon at the California Club for Daphne Drake, who really grows prettier all the time, and the party for Margaret Drake, the bride-elect, given by Katherine, also at that club. Both affairs were thoroughly smart, thoroughly good form, thoroughly charming. At Margaret's affair the white roses were the most wonderful you ever saw—thousands of them, and the favors were the duckiest little bags of rice, mounted with a white dove. They had one table exclusively for us debutantes—and, needless to say, that table was by far the most interesting.

One afternoon we all went to tea at the Jonathan Club—they have been keeping open house this week for the ladies, you know. Oh, my dear, the most gorgeous flunkeys in gold lace and calves were sprinkled profusely round the place on every available spot! We have never seen anything like them outside of the Lord Mayor's Show, in London. I could not believe that they were real at first, rather suspected that we had accidentally come on a fancy dress ball day of some kind. But, bless you, those dear Jonathan members keep those glittering flunkies on the premises all the year round, which, in conjunction with the Jonathan art collection, which is decidedly stylish, must envelop the club in an atmosphere of —er—refinement, that is most interesting and elevating.

Of course, we could not go to the Midwick Country Club on New Year's Eve as well, but we heard that the Yama-Yama dance (which would, of course, have been so much more suitable for us,) was a brilliant success. Since the J. B. Millers and the Calhoun Drakes were chiefly responsible, it must have been. The Miners, the McGowans, the Huntingtons, the Robert Marshes, the Garlands, the Perry Storys and the Armstrongs were all there, and every one turned up in costume. What pity we could not go to both affairs!

And now I had better tell you about the forbidden man. Such a good-looking, attractive creature, who was sensible enough to observe my charms right away. He is a friend of the M. W.'s, but, alas, it turned out that he was a recent divorcee, and the mater and pater frowned him down. They will persist in thinking that youths of 18 and 20 are more suitable for my amusement. And, really, darling, there are few things more tiresome than a youth of 18 in a general way. It takes a matron of 40 to discover their niceties. So Kitty and I are going out for a round of golf on Monday morning. I hear on the best and most exclusive authority that the divorcee drowns his sorrows in golf every Monday morning. They gave him a dreadful character in the paper—so I simply must discover if nature can really combine such outward charm with such inward sinfulness.

A happy New Year, darling.
Your loving BETTY.

Special guests of the evening were Miss Leneska, Miss Ambrose and William Rock of the "Candy Shop." Holly and mistletoe adorned the ballroom, and Christopher served a midnight dinner. Professional dancers and entertainers assisted in the merriment between dances, and before the last "Home, Sweet Home" was played, breakfast was served.

Hollywood Club Receives.

Potted plants, pepper wreaths festooned with red streamers and Turkish rugs transformed Wilcox Hall into a fashionable drawing-room Wednesday afternoon, when the members of the Woman's Club of Hollywood tendered a reception, honoring the new members of the club. The stage was banked with potted plants and poinsettias, while baskets of long stemmed poinsettias were placed in different parts of the room.

Mrs. Cassius S. Smith, president, and the board of directors, assisted committees, received. Dainty refreshments were in charge of members of the committee. The lunch tables were attractive with silver and coffee services, loaned by members of the club, and holiday appointments.

Musicale at Hollywood.

One of the important musical events given at Hollywood during last week was the informal musicale given by Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Schloesser at their home, Glengary Castle, on Argyle avenue. The Louis XV drawing-room, the German renaissance reception hall and music-room and the Flemish Gothic music-room were brilliantly lighted and handsomely decorated with Cecile Brunner roses.

An excellant programme of instrumental and vocal music was rendered by Miss Emmeline Smith, recently from Vienna; Mrs. Smith, her mother, Mrs. Goodfellow, Fred McPherson, Prof. Carl Bronson, who has just returned from Leipsic, and Hans Linne, conductor of the Los Angeles Orchestra. Others present were Mrs. Hans Linne, Mr. and Mrs. Cylde J. Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lippincott, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Frankel, Judge McKeeby, Mr. and Mrs. George McKeeby, Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomsen of New York, Henry Devers of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Curt Silberschmidt from Berlin, Dr. and Mrs. Atchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman Edison, Mrs. H. F. Stone and Misses Ruth and Marion Bronson.

Affairs for Miss Anderson.

Miss Ruth Anderson, daughter of Mrs. M. J. Anderson of the Beverly Hills Hotel, who will wed M. Clarence Mattison next Tuesday, was the honoree at many handsome affairs last week. Friday Miss Florence Clark entertained with a luncheon at her home, No. 3425 West Adams street, honoring Miss Anderson and the members of her bridal party. American Beauty roses, nodding from long stems in a gold basket, centered the table, and the name cards were hand-lined with the same flower, marking covers for Miss Anderson, the hostess; Miss Elizabeth Wood, Miss Florence Clarke, Miss Dorothy Mill, Miss Blanche Kellie and Miss Katherine Walsh.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Wallor Chanslor entertained with a matinee party at the Morosco for Miss Anderson, followed by tea at the Alexandria. A unique centerpiece for the table had been planned by the hostess, who was assisted by her sister, Mrs. J. R. Johnson, and Miss Anderson. Fashioned of lilies of the valley and baby Cecile Brunner roses was a miniature ocean liner, representing the Korea, on which the honoree will sail from San Francisco on her wedding trip around the world. The favors were white satin slippers, to each of which was attached an old-fashioned nosegay of the blossoms. Those present besides Miss Anderson were: Mrs. M. J. Anderson, mother of the bride-elect; Mrs. Mattison, mother of the latter's fiance; Mrs. Grace Parker, Mrs. Burton Green, Mrs. Willis Hunt, Mrs. Ezra Stimson, Mrs. Fred Griffith, Mrs. Louis Dreyfus, Mrs. Philip H. Lyons, Mrs. J. R. Johnson, Mrs. Arthur McFarland, Mrs. Joy Clark, Mrs. E. H. Seaver, Mrs. E. L. Peck, Mrs. Bernal Dyas, Miss Elizabeth Wood, Miss Florence Clark, Miss Blanche Kellie, Miss Dorothy Mills, Miss Katherine Walsh, Miss Irene Grosse, Miss Florence Grosse, Miss Leila Jolly and Miss Katherine Johnson.

The same evening Miss Anderson shared honors with her betrothed at a dinner-dance given at the Los Angeles Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mueller of No. 627 Westlake avenue. A huge basket filled with American Beauty roses centered the table, and monogramed cards marked covers for Miss Anderson, M. Clarence Mattison, Miss Elizabeth Wood, Miss Florence Clarke, Miss Dorothy Mill, Miss Blanche Kellie, Miss Katherine Walsh, and Messrs. Bruce Carlock, Stanley Anderson, A. Clarke of New York, Howard Johnstone, Stanley Smith and Robert McKee. Later thirty guests, all members of the younger set, were included in the dancing party.

Closing the affairs for this bride-elect and her fiance will be a dinner party given by Mrs. Howard Thomas at the home of her sister, Mrs. Richard M. Bishop, of No. 1190 West Adams street, this evening. A large basket filled with the royal poinsettia, the handle tied with big bows of red tulle ribbon, will embellish the table, and harmonizing cards will mark covers for Miss Anderson, Mr. Mattison, Miss Elizabeth Wood, Miss Florence Clarke, Miss Dorothy Mills, Miss Blanche Kellie, Miss Katherine Walsh, Miss Sallie McFarland, and Messrs. Bruce Carlock, Stanley Anderson, Mr. Clarke of New York, Howard Johnstone, Stanley Smith, Robert McKee and Paul Grimm.

Watch Party.

A delightful watch party of New Year's evening was given by Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Graham of No. 1128 Georgia street. The house was beautifully decorated with hyacinths, pink roses, lilies of the valley and ferns. At 12 o'clock fourteen guests were seated around the board, where an elaborate luncheon was served, the hostess having a rare musical treat in store for her guests at this time.

St. Cecilia Club.

Miss Kie Julie Christin will entertain members of the St. Cecilia Club tomorrow afternoon at her home, No. 724 North Thirty-second street. A talk will be given by Mrs. Jesse P. McKnight on "Shakespeare in Music," this being the topic of study for the afternoon.

Venice Country Club Dance.

One of the happy dinner dances of the current week was that given at the Venice Country Club last night by Miss Ruth Heppe and Miss Mary Heppe of No. 33 Breeze avenue, Venice, to which 125 guests responded. The spacious ballroom was a bower of Christmas blossoms and ferns, royal poinsettias and rich red roses being the predominating flowers. Great punches of mistletoe and holly berries were suspended from the lights overhead. Punch was served throughout the evening from a bower of ferns and palms.

The young hostesses were assisted by Mrs. R. A. Phillip and Mrs. George White of Venice; Mrs. Walter Pomeroy, Miss Oliva Weld, Miss Clara Wilson and Miss Elizabeth Heppe of this city and Miss Amy Davenport of South Pasadena. Miss Ruth Heppe, who has recently graduated from a girl's seminary in the East, and just come to Venice, was the real motif of the affair, as her sister wished to introduce her to her friends.

Coming Event.

Mrs. George A. Ralphs has issued invitations for a reception to take place at her home, No. 7269 Hollywood boulevard, Wednesday after-

And now we start the second big week of half-price suit-selling. An Invitation to Compare Values

TO THOSE WHO MAY NOT BE familiar with the superior values offered by the "California" at all times—we respectfully submit for value comparison the splendid living-room table illustrated in this announcement.

It is a beautiful example of masterful cabinet-making—from the celebrated shops of W. K. Cowan and Co. It is fifty-four inches in length, has one large drawer, is built of specially selected solid mahogany—beautiful in its simplicity, substantial in its construction.

The price, $42.50, is not a reduction, it is our standard everyday price for this table—and at this price we believe we can conservatively say it is the strongest living room table value offered in Los Angeles today—sale or no sale.

We should be glad to have you apply the test of value comparison not only to this table but also to any other article of home furnishings displayed on any one of our seven floors.

We do not ask you to come here to buy—but we do most sincerely urge you to come and investigate, no matter whether your need is the simplest, most inexpensive article—or the most costly.

Upon your judgment—your opinion of our values, our selections and our service—we rest our case.

Honoring Mrs. G. G. Hair.

Mrs. Gordon Grant Hair, who has just returned from her wedding trip, and will be remembered as Miss Jessie Bryant, was the honored guest at a Christmas party given Monday afternoon by Mrs. V. S. Rowley of Dartmouth Square. Music was the pleasure of the afternoon, and later refreshments were served. In the center of the table was a huge snowball containing favors for each guest. Ices were served, a miniature Santa Claus holding a lighted Christmas tree in the right arm. The balance of the house was enlivened by long-stemmed American Beauty roses, holly and Christmas greens. Thirty-five guests were included.

To Ward Off Winter Complexion Ills

(From the Queen.)

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, inevitable in this weather, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear conspicuous at this season, because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, due to changing temperatures. I advise you to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drugstore and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably young and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in one half pint witch hazel.

SOCIETY.

fire department, of which Charles H. Howell is chief, entertained the funlovers of Inglewood and the countryside at a "hard times" social and dance in Masonic auditorium. Many of the guests were costumed typical of the name of the affair and others who appeared too well dressed were fined. The dancing and merriment lasted until after the New Year had been ushered in.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hudson entertained very delightfully Tuesday evening at their home on Market street, the members of the Merry-go-Round Club. Five hundred was enjoyed and prizes awarded to Mrs. Frank Zillgitt and J. T. Leftwich. Following the game dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Hudson.

The members of Richard J. Mohrs Post, No. 198, G.A.R., J. F. Burt commander, assisted by Richard J. Mohr W.R.C., No. 119, Mrs. Hannah Hall president, entertained Saturday afternoon in Masonic lodge room in honor of Department Commander Stroemont of Pomona.

Of the many Christmas parties that at the home of James P. Hansen was the most unique and enjoyable. Three brothers, James P. and Christian T. Hansen of Inglewood, and H. P. Hansen of East Sound, Wash., spent the first Christmas of their lives together. All were born in Denmark, but the family became scattered, and not until last week have the brothers spent a Christmas together.

Mrs. Laura E. Greenfield on last Tuesday accompanied her daughter, Mrs. H. F. Du Mond, to her home at Wellton, Ariz., where she will visit for three or four weeks.

Among the many delightful New Year's Day parties was that which occurred at the home of Mrs. Hannah Hall, when she entertained a number of her children and grandchildren at an elaborate dinner and all-day reunion.

ONE of the most delightful social affairs this week was on New Year's afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Hallett Johnson, when Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ingraham received their guests from 3 to 6 o'clock. The living-room was very artistically decorated with poinsettias and greenery and in the dining-room Christmas lights of red and green pepper boughs made the whole effect most charming. On the dining table a miniature lake was arranged in a most original style, and here tea and coffee urns were presided over by Mrs. J. A. Osgood, Mrs. C. C. Nourse, Mrs. G. H. Cornell, Mrs. M. M. Olds and Mrs. Frank Wright. They were assisted in serving by Mrs. Donald Ashmore and the Misses Jean and Hazel Woodward, Hazel Hill and Olds. Those who assisted receiving in the living-room were Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Carhart, Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Krebs, Dr. and Mrs. Fairbanks, Mrs. E. W. Camp, Mrs. Mary Davis Goodfellow, and Mr. Claude Davis. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Ingraham entertained with dancing and cards and a light supper was served. About thirty-five were present. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. E. Siegmund, Mr. W. S. Knight and Mr. W. H. E. Bravinder.

On last Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Francis Conard entertained at their home with a tennis party. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Hawks, the Misses Dairy Hawks, Edith Blumer, Lottie Humphries, Alma Jones, Florence Vannier, Agnes Sperry and Mesdames Hawxhurst and Henderson Childs, Messrs. Kenneth Ham, Harold Davenes, Tom Lambert, Lawrence Nourse, Victor Hill, Gustave Janson and Webster Vannier. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hart and family and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chapman of San Marino, Miss Ella Adams and Mr. Charles Adams of South Pasadena, Messrs. Walter Robert and Robert Scott and Miss Fanny Scott of Pasadena, Mr. Walker and Miss Vega Brugman of Los Angeles, the Misses Sawyer and Cooper of Pasadena, Miss Hilda Humphries of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. William Thacher of Nordhoff.

Miss Dorothy Humphries was a guest last Saturday at a very prettily appointed luncheon and shower and box party at the Orpheum, given in honor of Miss Alice Whitaker of Santa Monica.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Lawless were host and hostess at their home on New Year's Eve, when they entertained with dinner. Afterward the guests enjoyed the dance at the Woman's Clubhouse. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. E. Siegmund and Mr. W. Bravinder of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ingraham, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hallett Johnson, Mrs. E. W. Camp and Mr. Herbert Ingraham.

On last Saturday evening Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Krebs entertained a number of out-of-town guests with dinner and a musical in the evening. The guests motored from Los Angeles and Pasadena. As so many of the guests were talented a most pleasant time was spent. Mr. Krieder, who is a composer, rendered most delightfully on the piano some of his new compositions, while Mr. Howell told some of his original stories. Vocal selections by Mrs. Ford and Mr. Carlson were fully appreciated. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Foster, Madame Murat, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Carlson, Gen. and Mrs. Ford, and the Misses Meltons, Marie Elliott, Drake and Howells, and Messrs. Frank Rust, Whalen-Smith, Jean Manhein, Charles Howells, O'Shea and Krieder.

Through the generosity of Mesdames C. H. Baker, F. J. Hart, Seeley and N. W. Tarr and the Sierra Madre Woman's Club, about 250 children were most delightfully entertained last Saturday afternoon with a Christmas party at the Woman's Clubhouse. Amusements were provided all through the forenoon and story telling was done by Mrs. J. A. Osgood, Mrs. Gilmer and the Misses Portia Ulrich and Hazel Hill, while dancing was enjoyed in the auditorium, where Mrs. Frank Wright, Mrs. Goodfellow and Mrs. Tarr and Miss Priscilla Putnam of Pasadena assisted. Each child was given a bag of popcorn and candy and ice cream and cake were later served. A cotillion led by Miss Putnam was greatly enjoyed and dainty favors were given. Decorations carrying out the Christmas idea were used throughout and a most enjoyable time was spent.

On Wednesday evening the annual New Year's dance given by the Woman's Club was held in the clubhouse, nearly 100 being present. Christmas decorations of red bells, holly and mistletoe festooned the walls and poinsettias were artistically arranged and half hid the orchestra. During the intermission a very clever poem, written and read by Mr. James R. Allen, was greatly enjoyed, and this was effectively illustrated by tableaux in which the Misses Katherine Mason, Margaret Aitch and Mr. Laurel Steinberger took part. Just as the old year went out the orchestra played "Aloha," and Mr. Cox, who was a bugler in the army, sounded taps.

N. P. BANKS Post, Woman's Relief Corps, and Sons of Veterans held a watchnight meeting at G.A.R. Hall. Music and games were enjoyed and Joseph V. Griffin, the recently-elected commander of the Sons of Veterans camp, gave a reading and sang a solo. Lunch was served shortly before the old year vanished and then, when the hour struck 12 the three patriotic organizations and their guests sang "America," and gave the flag salute, which pledged anew their allegiance to their heavenly Father, their country and their flag.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Maxwell entertained with a "stag" dinner party at their home on Park avenue Monday, complimentary to their son, Guy Floyd Maxwell, James Mason of Glendale and A. L. Rabbette of San Francisco. The three young men have but recently returned from an extended visit in Alaska.

One of the most enjoyable of the many holiday festivities was the progressive house party which has rendered the holiday vacation of 1913 one to be never forgotten by at least five young society buds of this city. The festivities were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Peck, when their daughter, Miss Amie Miller-Peck, entertained Miss Dorothy Hobbs, Miss Mary Jane Evans-Hough, Miss Esther Sinclair and Miss Pauline Hamilton. Following a day of pleasure at Miss Miller's the merry coterie of school girls journeyed to Miss Mary Evans-Hough's, where another round of festivities, extending over a period of two days, was enjoyed. Then the Hamilton home extended hospitality to the five girls, where a day was spent. Going from the Hamilton home, where Miss Pauline proved a charming hostess, the house party assembled at Miss Esther Sinclair's, where another interesting season of pleasure was enjoyed. Wednesday afternoon the girls arrived at the home of Miss Dorothy Hobbs, where they remained until Thursday afternoon, when the happy five left for Los Angeles, where they attended a matinee.

THE week has been one of unusual social activity, owing to the close of the old and the opening of the new year. The first affair of note was a reception given the male members of the United Presbyterian Church by the ladies of the congregation last Monday evening. EATING MEAT REGULAR CLOGS THE KIDNEYS, THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally With a Tablespoonful of Salts to Avoid Danger.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Agents, Sun Drug Company.—[Advertisement.

THE passing of the old year and the advent of the new was celebrated by a dance at Reward Hall, under the management of the Reward Club, one of the leading social organizations of the West Side oil fields. Eighty couples, constituting the largest number in attendance at any entertainment since the formation of the club, whiled away the hours to music, rendered by Hurlburt's Orchestra, whose programme was one of exceptional merit. Those participating in the observance of the joyous occasion represented the society element of McKittrick, Reward, Belridge and Fellows, and the event was accorded generally the distinction of being the most notable of the many entertainments under the auspices of the club. It is the purpose of the Reward Club to give a series of dances during the year, and the success attending all heretofore conducted by this popular organization, has inspired those in control to even greater exertions in future.

In the center of the table was a huge snow drift, with trees, and small dolls sliding down hill. At each place was a small snow drift with a tree. These wintry decorations were to remind the guests of their former home State, Minnestoa. After the course dinner, ribbons were pulled by each guest and pretty calendars emerged from out of the snow bank for each to have as a souvenir. Cards marked places for Mr. and Mrs. W. Each man had invited a High School boy to be his guest for the evening.

After an enjoyable meal an hour was given to short addresses and toasts, and then the party adjourned to the church, to the New Year's social and watch meeting.

Colton.

MERRILY kept "watch" parties were the leading events on New Year's Eve, the younger contingent especially entering into the fun of such affairs. At the T. M. Hatchett home a reunion of the class of '13 of the Colton High School was held, Miss Ruth Hatchett entertaining her old classmates in delightful fashion. Holly, mistletoe and joy bells comprised the festive decorations of the rooms where the guests made merry, and then at the midnight hour an elaborate course dinner was served, the favors being "winter bird's nests" filled with nuts and candies and little memory booklets, in which each one wrote in his or her neighbor's book old-year follies and New Year resolutions.

For some sixty or more members of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McDonald kept open house on Wednesday evening, and the merriment forthcoming from the jolly vigil of the young people was proof of the good time in which all indulged. Two mottoes, one twelve feet long and the other eight, fashioned of date palm leaves and autumn vines, and bearing the inscriptions, "welcome" and "a happy New Year" with red bells and greenery, added to the festive appearance of the residence. Games and music and later refreshments added to the pleasure of the guests, and then, as a fitting welcome to 1914 as the hour of 12 neared, a little sacred watch service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. G. Wenz.

A turkey dinner with all the trimmings, served precisely as the New Year was being welcomed, was the

THE ORIGINAL HEAVEN AND HELL.

BY STINSON JARVIS.

THE general reader is personally interested in hell and is curious about heaven, being always ready to guess at his chances of securing [illegible] rewards and avoiding [illegible] retribution. The pre-Christian heaven was in England, and hell was in Ireland. Homer places hell [illegible] one day's sail westward from [illegible]land, and the religious systems of [illegible] countries, including America, [illegible] that Paradise was a garden, and the same garden from which our colonies originally issued. This was not in the sky, because American princes sailed there by boat, and the Bible deity says that his messengers traveled in ships, and that the [illegible] (TAR People) were his [illegible]. It lay due northwest of [illegible], nor-norwest from Rome, [illegible] and westerly from India, and about northwest from Mexico. The Hindus give us hundreds of certainties about this. Their "going to [illegible]" means a return to the first [illegible] of Eden, named by them as the Garden of AD.AN, which names [illegible] as the "Beginning of Time." The storied king of this garden is called "The Thunderer," as [illegible] Jupiter was universally [illegible]. He is also called the Serpent or Dragon, and he resides in the "White Island"—the old name of [illegible], ALB-IN, meaning "White [illegible]." His Hindu name is British, IN-DRA, meaning "Island [illegible]"—the Welsh DRA.IG, the [illegible] DRA.Ca, the Latin DRA.Go. [illegible] pictured as a man and sun-king, he travels in a gold car drawn by eight cream-colored [illegible] as our sungod king still [illegible] on coronation-day; and in [illegible] this waggon of the Sungod has [illegible] Eight HOR.Ses, or, "Hour-[illegible]" because this picture was also astronomical.

The Hindu word for "heaven," as [illegible]," names the "Supreme Garden" and the other names of it are [illegible]-Lok" (God Water Place) "Go-Lok" (Cow Place) and [illegible]-Lok" (Upper Place,) all these [illegible] the Celtic, Latin and Hindu "Loc," meaning Place. This [illegible] repeats our PARadise and [illegible] PARias, in all of which [illegible] mean "Upper" (the Sanscrit [illegible]) naming that which is high[illegible] our globe world. The gods [illegible] down to the lower parts of the [illegible] as St. Paul says: "For that he [illegible], what is it but that he first [illegible] to the lower parts of the [illegible]"

The Egyptian teaching that the [illegible] of the dead went aboard the boat of the sun to be conveyed [illegible] judgment land in the West, [illegible] in India, and our word [illegible] is the Hindu name of the boat which was the Ferry for all. TARAN also means Salvation [illegible], and, "to be ferried," [illegible] be eternally saved." This [illegible] is the word carved on the [illegible] of our deity Oak, and is [illegible] Welsh word for Thunder, and [illegible] our thundering Jupiter, who [illegible] same as the Boatgod OK on [illegible] his name was carved. The [illegible] Welsh word TAR also means [illegible] (Hindu, TuNdur) and [illegible] the Gaelic "Thunder-Bull" as [illegible]; and as every name for a [illegible] our Jupiter, so this Gae[illegible] makes many Hindu words [illegible] same animal. In fact, the Hindu and Budhist systems [illegible] on our Jupiter Bull, whose [illegible] include the Cow, because the [illegible], the parent of many, had [illegible] herself as double-sexed: [illegible] and Venus; Bull and Cow; [illegible] Woman; Sun and Moon, etc. [illegible] Celtic BO and the Welsh BU [illegible] both Bull and Cow, and the [illegible] were called the BU.DI, or [illegible]." The Celtic word [illegible]" meaning Wise, was taken [illegible] with the same meaning, and [illegible] the Wednesday and Mer[illegible] all Wednesdays record the [illegible]cury priesthood. Thus Mr. [illegible] describes BUDha as a deified [illegible] who was identical with the [illegible] Mercury of the North people. [illegible] this storied Ideal of the [illegible] priesthood was always named [illegible] Church of the divine Cow: as [illegible] (Cow of Learning,) Go-[illegible] (Cow Parent,) Go-Tama (Cow [illegible]) In the record stories he [illegible] under the BOD.I. tree," [illegible] teach the world he forsook [illegible]'s kingdom called "kapila-[illegible]," which means "Cow-House" [illegible] England. As the Greek [illegible] origin was "Upper-Borean, [illegible] "Upper place for Cows," so [illegible] from the Cow-House" [illegible]) and Christ was born [illegible]. But the Hindu word is [illegible] ours, and better than the [illegible], being "I-Stabil," which [illegible] as the "Island Stable," be[illegible] this was the House of the [illegible] Bull and Cow from which [illegible]. And because it would [illegible], the other meaning of [illegible] Stable is Firm, as the other [illegible] of a stable is FIRMus, [illegible] the deep-rooted FIR. [illegible] of words that name [illegible] have their meaning in the [illegible] T, which say, "Sign T," be[illegible] T, or Tau (the Celtic idol [illegible] the upstanding Cross name [illegible] Church which was expected to [illegible]. Thus STO, STET, [illegible] the Hindu I.STADA [illegible] which stands erect, and [illegible] the words for "stabil.I.Te." [illegible] record of the "Cow-[illegible]" will make every reader [illegible] the great art of the priests [illegible] put all their necessary rec[illegible] the stories of Christ which [illegible] great simplicity. The [illegible] duplicity is in every [illegible] from Peru to Java, as [illegible] (who names the "Hammer" [illegible] Carpenter father) describes [illegible] Cow-Gods as Jupiter's [illegible] Cows of the Crook Sign; [illegible] was only one White Cow [illegible] the Canadian redskins (who [illegible] their "White Cow" religion) [illegible] Hindus and Buddhists. This Cow is hugely pictured in [illegible] the nations of the world [illegible] to be drinking from her [illegible] her horns are worn by the [illegible] wind around the Cone [illegible] Assyrian kings, and [illegible] in battle by wild negroes [illegible] American redskins. Brit[illegible] when Caesar landed, [illegible] supposed to be led by [illegible] goddess of Victory having [illegible] name of "BU.D.DUG," which [illegible] the "Cow God Lead-[illegible]" is the Welsh name of [illegible].

[illegible] all words name what was [illegible] our Anglian word BRI [illegible] "Field" which was the pas[illegible] divine Bull, also called [illegible] and we are BRI-TI (Field [illegible] people of the one Field [illegible] (England or INGland) [illegible] of times in the made [illegible]. Thus the Hindu name of [illegible] THUR.S-day is "BRI.S. [illegible] names him as the [illegible] Lord" and we worshipped [illegible] LEA" or "Jupiter the Field," or LEA. I explain these things because no one can understand the Bible without knowing the early pictures of the Church, which belong to the time when words were very small, and when religious teaching was illustrated by showing the peculiarities of living creatures—by the "Rabbi-T" of the Hittite and American carvings which illustrated the harmless Christ class and in letters still names the "Lord God"—also the Dove, the vibratory Serpent, the patient Ass, the faithful Dog, the clever Ape, and this peaceful Cow of continuous gift which named the priesthood of Christ on her "Melch" and England itself as the "Milk Island Throne of the Cross" (Melch.I.Sed.Ec.)

These British Cow priests devised a picture which was really a map of their empire. In India, the world was and still is represented as the body of a divine man who lies on his back with his Head to the West and his feet to the East. In this imaginary picture, India is the navel of the body while the Head is in the far West. Thus India never claimed to be the Head or brains of the divine system it pictured, and curiously enough, the picture stands for today, as the controlling brains of India are in England. Our Anglian "Naf" (nave) became the Hindu "Naf," or Navel and because India was the Navel of this world-man, many carvings of the sitting deity, BU.DH, show him to be looking down at his Navel; namely, on his beloved India. This is the taught position for good meditation, and for ages the devotees have sat like hens hatching china eggs and have given the world nothing. Each is trying to become a MAH-ATMA, which means to have the ATMA, or Mind, of Mah, the Moon:—this Moon of all story being the Anglian MONA (Moon) which named the island headquarters of the Druids. Because these DRU.I.Ds, or "Oak Island Priests," gave the Hindus everything, their prayers still begin with the sacred word OM, which is simply the Celtic name of the Oak, perpetuated as a record; and with their prayers is used our word AMEN, meaning, as with us, "so be it." This great priest who in picture lies along the world has his left hand to the North, and the brilliant Hindu dictionary of Mr. Forbes explains that because of this position the same word names both the North and the left-hand side. This word is "S.HIM.AL," and is of the same make as the HIM.ALA.YA mountains north of India, which name the "Snow High Jupiter." The Hindu word HI means High, and their word for Snow, as HI.M, and HI.MA, names the High Parent, and repeats our HY; as the Bee-house picture-name of England is the Angelian "HY.F" (hive,) which names "The High." The same HI is in HIems and HIver (winter,) Hibernia, hibernate, etc.

These record pictures and words convey the greatest announcement of modern times when they prove that India received everything sacredotal from England, and because it was the business necessity of early Christian priests to carefully conceal the history of England's colleges and the great learning of her aged god-factory, the whole of the resuscitated knowledge now comes like a dazzling blaze from the dark. Any reader can know with certainty that India was our child by simply observing that the Hindu week days and our weekdays are named on our home deities, namely, on Mars, Mercuri, Thur, Saturn, Sun and Moon. It did not escape Mr. Forbes that the Hindu Tuesday names Mars (Man-Gal,) as our Tuesday names "Tuesc," the Sacsan Mars. As aforesaid, the Celtic BUDh names the Hindu Wednesday and Mercuri; as all Wednesdays name our Mer.Curi priesthood; the French "Mercre.di" and Welsh "Mercher.dyd." The Hindu THUR'sday is "BRI.S.PATI," which names Jupiter and our THUR. Their Friday is SUKR; the French Sucre, the Welsh Sugr, all of which name Venus, the sweet one, who always names Friday. Our Saturn's day in their "Sanichar," which names both their Saturday and Saturn. All their names of Sun-day name the Sun, and their Monday is "Indu.Bar," which says "Moon Day." These facts are not open to discussion. Anyone but a congenital idiot must see that the Hindus simply repeat our system. But for most people the long habit of believing useful falsehood now makes the truth seem almost wierd.

As our words BRI and ING both name the Field of the Hindu Brispati, so their name of England is "ING.L.Istan," which names it as the "Field of Light Place;" and the Latin priests called it "Ing.l.terra" for the same reason. Consequently the Hindu name for our Jupiter LION is "S.ING" and names it as the "Sign of the ING," and the same Lion names England today. Thus the Hindu name of a Throne is "Sing-Asan," which in their words means "Seat of the Lion," because there was only one Throne to be named in words, namely, that of our Jupiter Lion. The great Sitting Lion Sphinx of Egypt is called Nar-Singh, (Woman-Lion): as all Egyptian sphinxes, whether Rams or Lions, are carved to show double sex, because the church which personated deity interpreted its general parentage by showing both genders in the one image, and the god-priests wore laces, petticoats and the palla of Pallas because the woman Venus had to be represented in the double-sexed deity:—especially in the case of the YAWA of the Bible, who names both Jupiter (YA) and Venus (WA,) and the mixtures of man and woman in various statues of Apollo are historically correct, though highly unpleasing.

That the first colonies of India came out of England is shown in the celebrated rock carving on the caravan route, called "The Footprints of Bouda," showing two huge prints of the teacher's foot; (see the "Ilios" of Schliemann.) This record of the migration also shows an Elephant coming out of a Fish, which illustrates the Elephant people coming out of our Fish god. The Elephant is the animal picture-name of India. Its Anglian name was simply "EL.P," which says, "EL,The." This heraldic animal of India always carries on his back the picture of the crescent moon, called "MAH," which is his name; as the name of the 'Elephant-Keeper' is MAHawat (vulg., Mahout.) With this name he records the ante-Flood people of India, Biblically called "MAH.ALA.LE.EL," which says, "Moon (or Great) High Light EL." Thus the Moon names him and the whole country; as its other name, INDU, names every h.INDU, and each inhabitant is an Ind or a h.IND. The river "INDU.S" means 'Moon-Sign' and "I.N.D.IA" records the "Island Heaven God Country."

The other Hindu name of the sacred elephant, as "F.I.L." was brought from Wales and again names him on the moon, as "The Island Light," and the Welsh word for ivory, as, Fil-Dant, (Elephant-Tooth,) also became Hindu. These thousands of verbal identities have had many attempted explanations, in which we were asked to believe in supposed migrations from the East into the British Isles; and because our islands contained many laws and customs which were also given to the Hebrews we were asked to believe in supposed inroads of lost Jews. But these laws were in our islands before the Jews got "lost," and facts show that every writer who took priestly story as a guide was intentionally misled when he localized the birthplace of enlightenment in the East. The true facts are told in all the Hindu priestly stories, and especially when they use our Neptune as their tracing ancestor and call him the DE WA, or Deity Water. As our Neptune always carries his Trident when used for secret history by the Latin and Greek priests, so he always carries it in India. His TRI.DENT or "Three-Tooth" Fish-spear is the Hindu TRI.SUL, which in Celtic words says, "Three:Sun," and also names the cross:—the form of the Celtic T Cross: and the rupees of Benares are called Tri-sull because they still show the Trident of the Water-god who is the storied founder of that city. But as everything is explained to us by the priests themselves, so the historical record is given in the ten incarnations of the imported god Vish-Nu, saying that his first incarnation was in the form of a FISH, which includes the Whale that was the record father of the Wales people.

Consequently the Hindu name of the Whale is "HU.T," and names the Welsh "HU God," or HU-piter, described in our "Book of IOB," or Job, as a Whale. The Anglian IOB names both Job and Jupiter, and our "Book of IOB" catalogues many of the chief form-names of Jupiter, such as the Hawk, Eagle, Ass, Horse, Elephant, Whale, Dragon, Unicorn, etc., so that we would understand that all these creatures, which are here expressly identified with deity, are his names:—the whole of these Biblical explanations to us being properly named as the Book of Jupiter, or Job. My readers will perceive that the Book of Job was not intended to be of use to any one till the distant time arrived when educated men would have a fair acquaintance with all languages, and especially with the small British words which were the first of the world, and make it certain that Job is Jupiter, and that Anglian priests named his book.

As the going-out of the Church was biblically pictured as the flowing of a River, so our Neptune is shown in India as the father of the sacred river Ganga (Anglian, "Going,") being pictured in the regular Homeric biblical and Welsh way as an Old Man; and the long Hair of his Head (always the sign of Wisdom) is this river Ganges; while the priestly god of Music, (Hindu, Musiki,) issues from his mouth. This is the DE WA, generally called the Maha-De-Wa, or "Great Deity Water," and his flowing was one of the most important pictures of the Church, causing the animal name of Africa to be "Hippo-Potam," which says "Horse-River," and names the Time deity who flowed to all as the POTAMos, or River. Our Anglian HOR.S says "Hour Sign" and names the HORA, or Hour, so the Hindu horse is "G.HORA," and the sickle Christ rides this ancient Time-sign:—a picture much carved on the Irish crosses; and, to carry the same record the Hindu stories explain that "the first mansion of Heaven is made in the shape of a Horse:"—the "G.HORA."

The picture of the flowing waters of the Church belongs to the early time when our name of Water was simply WA. Consequently when the priests made their regular explanations to us through the names of the stars, the sign for the Hindu letter and word WA was also the astronomical sign-name of our WAter Venus. This is the official information: and because our WA who is the "WA.Ve," made such a vast number of words for ourselves and for America and India, our Anglian word "S.WA." (Sign WA) means "alike," and "swa swa" means "the same," and SWAS means "Our Own," and names the "SWAS.T.ICa,' carved on rocks of remotest countries by the Fish, or Cure, priests who went everywhere:—the name of the Cross with Feet saying "Our Own God Cure." This "WA" is endless in America; also CU.WA., now written as Qua in Bancroft's lists of the tribe names, and every squaw names the universal Love mother; this red woman being the S.CU.WA, or the "Sign of the Love WA." Before statues carried their word-names, this marine deity had the Fish-Net, fish-scales, shells, E.MER.ALDs and other sea-colored stones hung on her images, because these were her names, as explained in present words. So the Latin name of a Fish-scale is SQUAMA, or "S.CU.WA.MA," (Sign of the Love Water Mother.) Letter-words always explain the early pictures which they now name.

Mr. Forbes explains that the Hindu letter and word WA, or WAW, is the same as VA: so the Hindu word for WAter and Running Water is VA.RI and WA.RI:—this RI being another letter and word meaning "Hastening," as in RILL and RIVer; this VA.RI or RI.VA always naming the hastening Venus because the Church identified itself with a haste to bring the cleansing Waters. The whole system was scientific and poetic; the Clouds called the "Water-Bringers" settling in Snows on the Head of the "Hoary" Mountain god who sends down the prattling rills to irrigate and pass on to the Ocean, which itself was called a Current—there being no stagnant waters or stagnant priests in this picturing of constant activity. Consequently the carved deities from Mexico to Java hold the Am-Phora or "Water Carrier" which we call the "VA.Se," or "WA.Se" (Water-Sign:)—as the Javan verb "WASu," to WASH, is our own word.

It is also explained that our Jupiter is named by the Hindu letter and word YA:—the form of this letter YA being also the sign-name of Jupiter in the astronomical tables. These official explanations are the keys to the whole language:—in the same way that the inverted "U" makes the Greek letter Omega and is the sign-name of the American Thunder-god, Omeya, or Omega, and is also the astronomical name of U-piter, and is also the form of the Hair Wig of Wisdom worn by American and Egyptian deities and by our British judges today. This Hindu YA continues our Welsh name of Jupiter as IAU, pronounced YAW; as the Bible says his name will always be JA, pronounced YAW; so it is certain that our Welsh Jupiter was transplanted into the Hindu system. Because the letter-names and the form-names of the stars were made to carry the connections and prove the one source of languages, our Anglian name for the stars was TUNG-AL, meaning "All Tongues," and the priests certainly intended that subsequent students should make one chain of all their links and thus prove that they made the entire world worship their YA, or IAU, or JA. Consequently the Hindu deities are not only named with British words, but also have their pedigree stories to make their connection with the Druid Church certain. For example, the imported god KRIS-NA has the storied ancestor called "YA.DU," which names "Jupiter: Two," because the Church was both sexes in one, and the American Thunder-god "OME-YA" is the same as YA.DU, because it uses the Astec "OME," meaning TWO, and says, "Two: JUpiter." The Astec OM.E means Two because it names the OAK (OM) and E-ve, and in Celtic words records the masculine England and female Erin, as the Bible god is "YA.-WA" and names Jupiter and Venus in one.

Because YA is officially named as Jupiter, the Bull of the Himalayas as the "YA.K," and the word YAK means First, and "Yak-Sham-Ba" names Sunday, and YA.KIN (Jupiter, Sun) names Truth and Certainty. Similarly, the word for 'Mind' is HI.YA, which names the "High Jupiter;" and as good mind was the proof of godhead, so the local word for 'godhead' is "ULU.HIYA.T," which names the "Owl Mind God" and the UL or ULU, which was the universal picture-name of MIN-erva, the MIN-D or "Moon-God" who is our word MIND. This name of the UL or Owl is Anglian, Latin, Hindu and ancient American: so the Homeric Ulysses, who is always called Wise, has the name of "UL-USSE.us," which, in our old English words, calls him "Our Owl," meaning our Wise one. Now, this "ULU.HIYA.T," which names the "Owl Mind God," is a fair sample of the way in which all words were built, and the Hindu name of the language called "San-

QUEEN SEEKS BURIED CITIES.

Town Built By Father-in-Law of Aeneas May Yield Important Discoveries.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

ROME, Dec. 20.—If the hopes of the promoters are only half fulfilled, many a dark page of history will be turned ere long as a result of excavations in the neighborhood of Castel Porziano.

Just now exploration is being made of the remains of the ancient Latin cities, especially Laurentum, built by King Latinus, whose daughter married Aeneas.

The Queen of Italy is personally superintending the excavations, which have already yielded important results not yet divulged. It is said that when the discoveries are made public they will throw light on the earliest Latin civilization and on the origin of primitive inhabitants now regarded as more or less mythical owing to lack of monumental evidence.

NOBODY CAN TELL IF YOU DARKEN GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA

Druggist Says When Mixed With Sulphur Prevents Dandruff and Falling Hair.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, then left to age and carefully filtered, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur;" it surely helps folks appear years younger. Agents, Sun Drug Co.—[Advertisement.

LOS ANGELES

A PROPHECY OF HISTORY.

When Phillip's flame-born son was wounded sore
By fierce Ambition's barbed spear, he rose
In jealous anger that he was not Zeus
And smote the world from zone to zone—where'er
A lofty nation stood; beneath his feet
He trampled lordly men and tumbled thrones
From out the course of his triumphant march.

When all the earth was bowed beneath his knees,
Then wept the mortal god that no more worlds
Opposed his furious warriors, trained in death
And skilled in heaping pallid corpses high
On blood-drenched fields, where Ares stalked unseen.
The world was his: Conquest was slain by that Same cruel, cowardly spear that drove the life
Of fleeing Darius across the Styx.
Then from the pinnacle of peerless power
He swept his eyes and saw the site where should Be raised a mighty, massive city's wall
Memorial of triumphs just so long
As mortals crept about the soil and checked
By tim'rous fears went crawling o'er the seas;
And by the mighty of his imperial whim
Great Alexandria was raised to view.

The tides of commerce passed her portals through,
And caravans from off the desert streamed
Resplendent with the gems of eastern troves,
And heaped on sprawling camels heavy bales
Of choicest spice and rarest cloth were borne
To crowd the limits of the teeming marts.

Where'er it is a city swells with wealth
There come the gray philosophers to teach
The wisdom plundered from the stores of time,
And follow then the student swarm, and throng
The men of letters, men of art and science:
Thus grew the Princess city of the world.

Soon came a change within the hearts of men,
And broad white sails were lifted high and prows
Of bulky ships ploughed through the seas and found
The water passages that led past capes
Far hidden in the mists of unknown lands.
The fearless sailors born on Europe's coast
Put all the monsters of the deep to flight
And claimed the oceans and the distant shores
For scepters of their royal sovereigns.

The caravans were stopped on the sand-seas,
The floods of commerce turned from that great port
Built by the fiery monarch of the sword;
The scholars took themselves away and went
To other cities new grown rich in trade
Through channels of the waves audacious men
Discovered leading to the eastern marts.
For it is written on the tablets carved
By iron-fingered Fates that where the tides
Of traffic roll their yellow floods of gold
There shall the muses make their dwelling place.

II.

Heed then the prophecy that History
Hath spoken; heed then the future fame that must Augment the glorious renown of this
The fairest city of the earth charmed land.

'Twas not a monarch's word and slaves that reared
The towering forms of stone from their deep base
And made a place for commerce here: It was
A nation's people who looked west and saw
The splendid triumphs of the future years.
They saw that all the aisles of sea and soil
Were known—that no adventurer would plow
His way into some hidden course and turn
The flow of gold prosperity aside.
They saw instead that through the solid rock
Which barred the ideal passage of the burdened ships
That gnawing fire and hungry steel, beneath
The whip of human will, would eat a path
To open wide the way for all the fleets of peace
That sail the trembling seas. They saw those Fleets would come from ev'ry port that dots the world
And spread their cargoes on the spacious wharfs
That gird the "Harbor of Our Destiny."

Then needs must come, to fill the prophecy
That History herself has spoken forth,
The wise men with their tomes, and eager men
Of art, and deep-eyed men who pry into
The secrets stored within the crucible
Of Nature's vast creative scheme; and all
Must come—enjoined by Fates themselves, yet lured
By clime so rare 'tis one perpetual Spring
Where flowers and happiness together bloom.

Los Angeles, the queen of Western Waves,
The charming bride of the Pacific shore,
Extends her welcome to the sons of earth
And holds the treasures of her broad empire
Free for the taking. The world is welcome here!

His most recent work was the statue of King Edward at Sheffield, but he is best known for many delightful creations of classical and other figures, among which his "Echo" and "Circe" of early years, and "Innocence" more recently, rise at once in memory. A Londoner by birth, he studied under Dalou in Paris.

Frank Harris, the English journalist and author, who has lectured in this country on his hobby, Shakespeare, ranks Theodore Dreiser as "one of the half-dozen masters who have written in English.

Sir Alfred Dale, vice-chancellor of Liverpool University, who recently celebrated his fifty-eighth birthday, gained high distinctions in his undergraduate days at Trinity College, Cambridge, for he won many of the chief prizes open to the whole of the university, and finally was eighth classic. He was promptly elected a Fellow of Trinity Hall, of which latter college he was a tutor and bursar for many years. He went to Liverpool fourteen years ago, and was accordingly a chief actor in the establishment of Liverpool as a separate university.

LUCKY YEAR FOR IRELAND.

The One About to Dawn Is Calculated to Bring Prosperity to the Emerald Isle.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 20.—The year 1914 will dawn on visions of a bright and prosperous New Ireland. St. John G. Ervine, the brilliant Irish journalist, has just returned from a careful tour of the whole country, and he gives the rosiest account of the conditions that are likely to prevail in the old land within the near future under the blessings of home rule. He points out:

"There has been, during the past twenty or thirty years a definite shifting of position in Ireland. The old Ireland that Gladstone knew was largely a poor place. It was true then that Belfast was the only city in the country where there was general prosperity. The agricultural workers were all impoverished men, hard-driven to pay their small rents, with little prospect in Ireland beyond the poorhouse in their latter days.

"All this is altered now. I do not say that the agricultural workers are rich, and that the Belfast people are poor; but I do say that, man for man, the people in the country places are more happily situated than the people in the rich Ulster town; and I believe, given the state of society we now know, that in a short while the countrymen will be well-to-do, while the townsmen will be hard-up.

"Do not misunderstand me. I do not mean that the townsmen will be plundered by the countrymen. I mean that as time goes on the effects of the Land Laws, combined with the Old Age Pensions Act, will make life very safe for agricultural workers in Ireland, whereas, the townsmen, having no security, no fixed inalienable thing like land, will be blown up one day by the good winds and blown down the next morning by the bad ones.

"In Mayo I saw a small farm of eight statute acres, a cold and hungry-looking place, put up for sale; and the owner of it refused to take a bid of $350 for the tenant right. I was told that it was not worth more than $250, but the woman who craved for it was willing to pay more than its worth to get it. I saw a small farmer who had four daughters, and to each of them he gave a dowry of $750.

"Every man in that place owns his little bit of land, or is in process of owning it. Every girl in that place has her 'fortune,' the amount of which is noised abroad, and the man who has the finest holding gets her. There is no nonsense about love in Connaught. Marriage is a business transaction. We gave a dance one night to the country people, and when they came the cook told me of a young girl who was in the house. 'She's loookin' for a man'll suit her. Her fortune's over $750!'

"They have hard winters there, and sometimes a man is hard put to it to pay his way, but few of them go under. The Irish are a vital people. The roots of them are deeply planted, else they could not have held on to the land as they have done during six centuries of red persecution.

"They are a good-tempered people, very kindly and full of peace. They care nothing for politics, and Protestant there lives in neighborliness with Catholic. There are a good number of mixed marriages, and no one is a cent the worse for them. It is a poor place to look at, from the viewpoint of a farmer, though it is lovely to see if you have an eye with which to look. It is the part of Ireland which is generally considered to be in the depths of poverty. If you measure the prosperity of the agricultural workers in the richer parts of Ireland (where there are co-operative societies and creameries and many other profit-making things that are not here,) by the condition of these people, you will realise far better than figures can tell you what the state of Ireland now is. I ought to have said something about old age pensions; but it will be enough if I add that $1.24 per week goes very far in a place where you can get a farm of eight statute acres for an annual rent of $18. There are no old people in the poorhouse in Ireland now, not if they are 70 years of age, or nearly that."

CALL TREES IN A CITY DETRIMENT TO HEALTH.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—An interesting discussion is taking place in England just now on the question "Are trees unhealthy?" The governing body of the seaside resort of Eastbourne complain that trees exclude the light and air from adjacent houses and create an unhealthy atmosphere, and they have the support of the local committee of doctors who assert that the trees in many of the roads are by their number and size detrimental to health and to comfort.

The point is of particular importance to London, in view of the efforts which are being made by the local government board and the town-planning groups to beautify the appearance of the metropolis by planting trees along the roadways. The questions that arise are: Which trees and which thoroughfares are the most suitable for the purpose? Leafy trees in narrow roadways are something of a nuisance. When in full leaf they make the thoroughfare look like a tunnel, as in the case of the Camberwell New Road in summer. In wet weather the rain collects on the leaves and branches and drips miserably on to passers-by or even deluges the outside passengers of auto busses.

The assistant director at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, contends that for all-round purposes the plane tree, which predominates in London thoroughfares, is the best for town-planting. It is cleanly, because it annually sheds its bark, thus automatically freeing itself of the soot and grime which collects on everything exposed to the soiled air of the metropolis. It is hardy, grows to a fair height, and, although leafy, does not ramify extensively. There is no prettier sight in London than the line of plane trees in leaf along the Mall. He had often wondered why the authorities had not tried the silver birch. It was an extremely pretty and graceful tree, hardy, with small leaves and thin branches, which reconciled the desire to beautify with the necessity for air and light. He thought that possibly the silver birch might prove to be a useful adjunct to the plane tree.

Trees, he added, had the property of holding moisture, which accounted for the humidity of the atmosphere in their vicinity, and in this respect they were of great use alongside water-courses by limiting evaporation.

BOAST OF THEIR CHILDREN.

Rich People of England Are no Longer Ashamed to Own That They Have Little Ones.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—In one respect fashionable London has recently copied the United States with excellent effect: Rich people are no longer ashamed to own that they have children.

Not many years ago the smart young married woman did not make any display of her children, and the nursery was spoken of as a middle-class institution which existed no doubt, but was ignored. Now it is the height of fashion to have children, not, of course, the old-fashioned family of ten or twelve children such as was common in early Victorian days, but still children all the same.

Young matrons wear their children's miniatures or their names in diamonds on their jewelry, drive with them, talk of them, and have them continually photographed—a particularly infatuated mother not long since ran up a bill for $250 for photographs of a child of eleven months. The presents of the wealthy child nowadays are equally excessive, and the most outrageously expensive toys are calmly accepted by fond parents as well-merited tributes to the children's charms, as visitors to country houses, especially at New Year, know to their cost.

A small boy who would probably have been equally content with a dollar box of soldiers was recently presented with a $200 man-of-war, the donor's regrets that he had not been able to get it complete with guns (costing $500) being received with quite mild disclaimers by the small boy's parents. The tiniest children are presented with such things as grocer's stores completely fitted and costing a small fortune, and expensive mechanical toys.

Then the appalling fashion of jewelry for children has come over from America, and the daughters of American peeresses and others possess complete miniature jewel cases and expensive, if tiny, rings. But, after all, this is perhaps as it ought to be, for fashionable women must devise some way of treating their children better than they treat their dogs—and that is not a very easy task.

Recovered from Lung Trouble—Now Insured

Insurance companies will not accept any one affected with Lung Trouble. When you know a man who has been afflicted and who later has been insured such action means that the policy-holder must be in a very good state of health. Cases have been reported when Lung Sufferers, after taking Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, have successfully passed the medical test of insurance companies. Read this case:—

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:—About a year and a half ago I noticed that my health was rapidly failing. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak; having, in fact, absolutely no ambition whatever. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of Lung Trouble. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have just been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by The Owl Drug Company and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidences.

GRAFTS BONE IN AN ARM.

Vienna Physician Utilizes Member Taken From Dead Body in Extraordinary Operation.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

VIENNA, Dec. 18.—A bone from a dead body has just been utilized in an extraordinary operation performed in a hospital at Prague by Dr. Horak on a girl of 16 named Marie Hubacek.

She was suffering from a diseased bone in her right arm, and was sent to Prague to have the arm amputated. Dr. Horak, however, decided to replace the diseased part of the bone by a corresponding part taken from a dead person immediately after death. For his purpose he utilized a girl who died in hospital from a bullet wound in the temple inflicted by herself. When she had succumbed her right arm was immediately amputated and part of it used to replace the diseased portion which had been removed from the girl Hubacek's arm.

The result was so successful that the Hubacek girl can now use her right arm as readily and as effectually as she can her left.

TANGO TEACHERS ENRICHED.

Enormous Sums Are Made in London by Dancers Who Are Overrun With Work.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—If anybody wants to get rich quickly in London there is no better way today than to become a tango expert. The sums that are being made in England by some of the tango dancers at the present time are simply amazing.

One thinks it a very bad week that does not yield $1500, while $500 is easily made by people who are not at all in the front rank either as dancers or teachers. Some of the dancers are rushing about from luncheon time to supper time in their autos, visiting houses and getting as much as $100 for a quarter of an hour's dance. In their odd moments they give lessons and charge $5.24 for a quarter of an hour.

One man from the Argentine, who was lately in a suburban orchestra at $10 a week, is now making a handsome income as a dancer—and he is by no means young, either. A city clerk, who has the good luck to come from Brazil, is making $100 a week by the tango, and an ex-steward from a mail boat is doing equally well. The music halls cannot get the number of performers they want—although they will gladly pay them $250 a week.

Everybody is sick of tango music here. A music publisher declares that in the last three months he has made no less than $17,500 out of a tango dance written for the pianoforte. Strangely enough (though, perhaps, not so strange, after all,) the music of this dance was composed by a Scotchman, who, even now, has never in his life seen a tango danced. Last week 100,000 copies of this immortal work were shipped over to New York. In the meantime the Scotchman has bought an auto and taken a ticket to the Riviera.

TEST NEW SEAPLANE.

English Admiralty Has a New Invention Whose Main Point Is an Automatic Screw.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—In England a new seaplane has just been tested near Littlestone-on-Sea. It is kept very secret, as the tests are made exclusively for the British admiralty.

The chief factor is an aluminum four-blade screw, which, by a lever, can be made to ascend or descend some four and one-half feet. When the screw is depressed it gears itself automatically with the engine, and when the machine is started it also automatically disengages the gear of the air propeller.

The effect of this is, on the starting of the engine, that the little metal screw revolves in the water and propels the seaplane forward much in the same manner as a motor boat. It is used to prevent the plane overturning in the water from rough waves or a high wind, and also aids it to be more quickly hauled aboard a battleship or cruiser.

in the stable and the field about human nature, and applied his knowledge in establishing and then in maintaining his own dominion."

"Isn't it unfair to wild animals to lock them up in dens and cages?" I asked.

"There are but two main parts in the life of a wild creature," Mr. Baker replied. "He is concerned equally in getting something to eat and in protecting himself against his enemies. Whatever else comes within his experience is secondary. He spends his days and nights in looking for food and in escaping from danger. Caught and confined by man, his principal worries are over. Man feeds him and provides him with a sanctuary.

"One sees a grizzly bear or a Bengal tiger marching to and fro across his iron bars and is sorry, believing that the animal is longing for the mountains or the jungle. When a wild beast paces its cage the spectator may console himself with the thought that the beast is healthy and active. The seemingly contented beast asleep in the corner may be ill or gorged into stupidity by his dinner.

"A mule deer jumped a fence and vanished in the woods. We sent men out at once, but their quest was unsuccessful. In two days the deer was found at the gate of its inclosure. It had tasted freedom and found it bitter. No doubt some dogs had chased it. Anyway, it was weary of the world and was home again.

RACOONS TIRED OF LIBERTY.

"Our racoons live in a large tree, which is shut in by a wire fence. One night a limb was blown down, and over the bridge thus made eight of the racoons escaped. There are several hundred acres of woods surrounding the park. The racoons had all the essentials and conveniences, consequently, for resuming their former life, but every one of them returned in course of time. We would find them singly and in pairs curled up outside the fence surrounding their old home. Moreover, a sick captive beast is given medical attention. Fed, housed, protected and doctored, the park or menagerie animal has what most human beings call a soft snap."

"In what ways are the people benefited by zoological collections?"

"The advantages, it seems to me, are obvious," Mr. Baker answered. "Nearly 2,000,000 persons visit the Bronx Zoo in New York annually. The attendance at the National Zoo in Washington is often 45,000 a day. Evidently the people believe that the parks and the animals they contain are of value. It is good for any man to spend his spare time in the open air. Then city parks are democratic institutions and are open to and visited by all classes of people. Before a cage of lions may be seen the rich and the poor. Children, on idle days, ask their fathers to take them to see the animals. Possibly some of the fathers meant to go elsewhere.

"Parks keeps families together. In Germany, notably in Berlin, people meet their friends in the animal garden, where they can get anything they want to eat at a fine restaurant and where two bands play throughout the evening. The Zoological Park in Washington is part of the educational plan followed by the public schools. Whole rooms of children, accompanied by their teachers make stated visits to the cages and yards, afterward writing descriptions of what they have seen.

"Parks are always popularized by animals. And the interest in animals is growing. Our recent laws, State and national, bear out my statement. We are conserving wild life, and by and by will turn it to profitable account. It will not be long before farms for the raising of foxes, minks, martens, skunks, raccoons and other fur-bearing animals will be doing a steady business. There is money in the fur-producing industry. Silver and black foxes, which are merely a color deviation from the red fox, are worth $10,000 a pair for breeding purposes. A single skin has sold for $2800.

"Our interesting friend, the wild animal, has as bright a future, socially and financially, as any one I know of."

Original Heaven and Hell

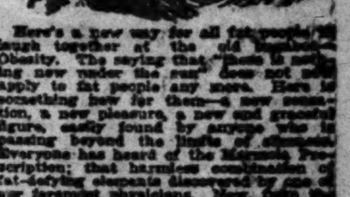
scrit," means "artificially produced." The records distinctly say that "it was constructed perfectly on infallible rules as a language of the gods." Therefore, it was a 'Holy Script;' as SAN SCRIT names it in our own words as a "Holy Writing." The local meaning arbitrarily given to the word "Sanscrit" is merely a further explanation.

The priests who wrote the Bible definitely acknowledged the fathership of words, when the Nineteenth Psalm said: "There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line has gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." I therefore present to my clergy the proofs that the Bible told the truth on this point, and the advance of education will certainly require that the above facts in the history of the world be taught in colleges and in the churches. The New Testament stories incidentally explain all the priests who were trained to the servantship, of mental nobility, and that no man gained excellence without personal effort and difficult training. The question regarding the divinity of our HESus must therefore be extended to the whole of his ancient brotherhood, and nothing in my work is intended to suggest that his predecessors were at fault when they claimed to use the universal mind. We have received no better explanation than their own concerning the phenomena of mind, and it is for the church, and not for me, to show that these teachers are to be "judged by their fruits," and that their work created in man all the decency he possesses. When this could only be done through continuous deception of the ignorant, it must be comprehended and taught that their tremendous task was to improve men who had little more than the simian ability for imitation and were fitted to receive nothing more than the graduated ideals which were from time to time supplied in manufactured stories. On this point the ignorant criticism of anyone was disregarded, because improvement had to proceed through growth, as the word CRE, meaning growth, names the "CREtian" system. In order that there may be more growth, I explain the necessary deceptions of the pre-Christian church, not as the machinations of self-seeking priests, but as the requirements of the mind which knew what was necessary in the leading of men by lure and by charm to the knowledge of fact.

New System of Fat Reduction



Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at the old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of [illegible]. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements discovered by one of our foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bed-time, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial cannot do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich. A large case—sufficient to bring [illegible] results—is but 75c.

ANNIE BOCK ON WARPATH.

Attacks Suffragettes in an Impassioned Protest.

Los Angeles Young Woman Talks to Congress.

Address Before Committee on Rules of House.

[Speech delivered before the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington, December 4, by Annie Bock of Los Angeles, former secretary of Woman Suffrage Campaign Committee:]

Chairman Henry and gentlemen of the committee:

I have come just a woman, speaking for her fireside, her flag, her faith.

I have no meaningless, intangible, garbled statistics to present; no profound philosophy to expound, nothing to tell but my own simple experiences and things that have been called to my personal attention. I had expected now to be in old Madrid, but here I am. I want to tell once more in Washington how sad and depressed I feel to think I ever worked for woman suffrage.

Last August, in my address, which was ordered printed by the United States Senate through the kindness of Senator Martine, I endeavored to show that woman suffrage is a failure for the following reasons:

(1.) That woman does not care for the ballot.

(2.) That a few women are trying to force it on all women.

(3.) That woman seeks political honors.

(4.) That she is intolerant.

(5.) That enfranchisement robs woman of her finer qualities and changes the attitude of man.

(6.) That woman has proved herself not profound, but impulsive.

(7.) That the capitalist is condemned for child labor and the low wage of woman, and the evils that they say result therefrom.

(8.) That women use unfair means to urge their cause.

(9.) That she indorses militancy.

10.) That the suffrage movement is fundamentally Socialistic.

Now, by additional observations I would emphasize some of the points there made.

Do women want the ballot? When at voting time I went about urging women to do their duty and vote, these were some of the things they said to me: "I have not registered," came from some. "My son supports me and does not care to have me vote," replied a sweet-faced woman in widow's weeds. "You had better go in off the street," a resentful one flung at me. "I do not care to vote," responded another. "My father and husband do the voting for our family," was said in a self-satisfied tone by another. A big Irish woman screamed, "Vote? And, sure, Tim would bate the life out of me if I voted, and sure I'd desarve it." "I am not going to vote. I think that if every girl does just the very best she knows how, she does not need to vote," was the expression of a department store girl. Anyone can get like answers over and over again if he takes the time and goes about it as I did.

OFFICIAL.

In the July Clubwoman, the official organ for the California State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Swan, chairman of legislation, an ardent suffragist, writes: "It is a great reflection upon woman's support of woman to recall that in Sacramento our own clubwoman, Mrs. Luella B. Johnson, the only City Commissioner in the United States, doing excellent work as Commissioner of Education, was defeated at the polls for re-election because the interested ones, by staying at home, played into the hands of politicians and she was lost to the city." Remember the above words are from a suffragist, gentlemen, and she tells that the women do not vote. Now, would you have the word of one whom you all know?

Listen! In a November issue of the New York Sun, under the caption—Suffrage Fails, says Works. Senator is discouraged by results from California—you can read the following: "Senator John D. Works, formerly a champion of woman suffrage, today declared before the Woman's City Club of Los Angeles, that woman suffrage in California is a failure. Senator Works made many speeches advocating votes for women during the recent suffrage campaign and his declaration today created a decided sensation at the club. 'The women in California, taken in the mass, have made a failure of suffrage. How many women voted at the last election? The women who go to club meetings and hear public questions discussed probably did, but they are only a small number. The other women did not vote,' he said."

The second point made in my address was that a few women are trying to force the ballot on all women. This was forcibly demonstrated when a few women came to you last August and in their speeches and scores of times through the public press stated that they represented 4,000,000 women voters. I protested that they did not represent me, and I believe that upon investigation since you found that in all the suffrage States there are less than 3,400,000 women over 21 and that out of that number 2,500,000 would be a liberal estimate of those eligible to vote. Thousands of this 2,500,000 have not registered and will never register. But of those who have voted, gentlemen, those whom the suffragists might claim they represented, there are thousands, as the decreasing woman's vote in California will indicate, who do not want to vote. Also there are hundreds, perhaps thousands of others, who vote every time, whom those women did not represent. There are three of these women in my own family, who always vote with a protest in their hearts and on their lips. Surely these suffragists did not represent us. In the apartment where I lived it required considerable urging on my part to get some of the women to vote who did. Even though they voted do you think the suffragists represented them? No. They all hated suffrage and I think that many a one bore a grouch against me for reminding her of her duty to State and country.

ONE WOULD THINK.

Anyone would think, gentlemen, to hear the noise they make, to listen to their impassioned talk, that all the women of this country had risen as in one great, surging army and importuned this handful of agitators to go forth and demand the ballot for woman, while, quite to the contrary, thousands of women do not know and do not want to know anything about suffrage. Furthermore there are hundreds of women, yes, and men, right in the suffrage ranks, whose knowledge of suffrage goes no further than the thought—"Man has the vote. Why not woman?" When they grasp the full import of woman suffrage—like me they will combat it.

THE ARGUMENTS.

Some arguments used in California to gain votes for women were, that woman did not wish to hold office or to have political honors thrust upon her, but that she desired the ballot that she might put only good men in office and vote only for good and just measures. When suffrage came, what happened? Women's leagues and clubs pushed themselves into politics and new societies with ambiguous names sprang into existence to help bring woman forward on civic boards and just casually, of course, to suggest her, then boost her for office. The Mayor and the Governor, when they had appointments to make, were besought by women. Women clamored for representation in the City Council and on the Board of Education. The offices of justice of the peace, police judge, judge of Superior Court, looked good to her. Women rallied in clubs and said:—"Things can never be right till woman is represented in the Legislature."

The woman's paper of University City, St. Louis, printed the following telegram sent by a Los Angeles woman to President Wilson when elected: "Accept my congratulations. In making up your Cabinet, please consider the women in the ten suffrage States. As a member of your Cabinet, a wise, scholarly woman would bring to your council great assistance." An article in a November number of Collier's suggested a woman as next Governor of California. It looks as though women had asked to sit in every chair but the President's.

For years suffragists spread their ideas with practically no interference. They said anything they wanted to without being contradicted. Even today the unsuspecting and uninformed take the assertions of the suffragists as gospel—probably because the Rev. Anna Shaw is at their head. As woman suffragists have become more aggressive, however, some unbiased people desiring absolute information have crossed our country and made investigation in suffrage States, which disproved the assertions of the suffragists to such an extent that the Rev. Anna Shaw feels called upon in her article in the November Trend to say: "All that suffragists demand is the opportunity to use the ballot on equal terms with men, and quite naturally they resent being asked if they will improve Legislation with their ballots, if they will use their ballots faithfully, if they will or will not run for office, if they will or will not neglect their homes and all the other absurd 'ifs,' when men are never questioned in any of these ways before being enfranchised." Are these "ifs" so absurd? One of your colleagues has said that no man really wishes to give suffrage to woman. No! It is when man lets his generosity of spirit get away with his better judgment that he allows his prejudices to be overcome and votes to give her the ballot. California women would never have had the burden of suffrage put upon them if the prejudice of some men had not been overcome by some fair suffragist saying: "Woman wants to vote and you would not be so ungallant as to deny her the privilege," and if the prejudice of other men had not been overcome because they were assured their homes would not be neglected, and if the prejudice of still more men had not been overcome by suffragists declaring woman did not want office, and if the prejudice of still other men had not been overcome because it was asserted woman would improve legislation. When it is known that suffrage in California is largely due to these statements, why this feeling of resentment, unless it be that the suffragists can no longer honestly use these arguments in their propaganda?

INTOLERANCE.

The intolerance and smallness of suffragists, when they claim to be working for the advancement of woman and when at the same time they presumably are fairly bursting with humanitarianism, is apparent everywhere and can be forcibly demonstrated by the treatment accorded me when the object of my visit to Washington last August had become known to them. The Los Angeles Herald of August 27 prints the following letter from Mrs. Foltz in reply to Flora Wilson of Washington, who had written to Mrs. Foltz to know the reason of my attack on woman suffrage: "My dear Miss Wilson," it reads. "Replying to your letter about Miss Bock, I must say I know very little about her. Her view as to the successful operation of woman's suffrage in California cuts no figure here, for the simple reason that her experience is without merit. I think she was a secretary of some sort with a suffrage club. She certainly gave little evidence of deep thinking on suffrage, and certainly as far as her activities were involved she was negligible—entirely so. I came in touch with all the women of importance in the campaign, but I was barely aware of Miss Bock's existence. Each and every charge she makes is false and can only work harm if easterners, who might take her seriously, not knowing she is of absolutely no importance here." Let us review this letter, please. It begins: "Replying to your letter about Miss Bock, I must say that I certainly know very little about her. I came in touch with all the women of importance in the campaign, but I was barely aware of Miss Bock's existence." I wonder if I could bring myself more forcibly to the mind of this woman who barely knows of my existence.

Has Mrs. Foltz forgotten she started a woman's political headquarters in the Merchants' Trust building, where her office is, and that she made herself president while she had me act as secretary and manager while she attended to her law practice? Has she forgotten that she phoned me she was going to form the Million Club and she wanted me present at the preliminary meeting, as she wished me to have some office? (Queer she should offer an office to a person of no importance!) Has she forgotten the little speech she made at Blanchard Hall when at the finish she almost ran across the floor and, referring to her talk, asked me, "How did I do, dearie?" If she cannot recall these instances I might introduce her to hundreds of people from San Diego to Seattle of more or less importance who might help her to recall my entity. "I think," continues Mrs. Foltz, "Miss Bock was a secretary of some sort with a suffrage club." She puts it that way to belittle me as well as the club of which she always seemed jealous. Mrs. Foltz knows absolutely that I was secretary of the California Political Equality League, the largest suffrage organization in California, and I believe she also knows that I was secretary of the Los Angeles branch of the College Equal Suffrage League, both of which I served without compensation. Should she have doubts she can easily inform herself.

Mrs. Foltz continues: "Miss Bock's view as to the successful operation of woman's suffrage in California cuts no figure here, for the simple reason that her experience is without merit." Why this awful howl from California suffragists if my experience has no merit? Why, if my view cuts no figure there, were the suffragists, according to the Los Angeles Herald of August 15, shocked by the dispatch from Washington that Miss Annie Bock, one of the foremost workers in the recent California campaign, had declared woman suffrage a failure? Why, in being interview by this paper, did one prominent clubwoman and suffragist say: "Oh! I could cry! Miss Bock is insane if she said that, but I'm afraid she did. I think the fact that many of us who fought for suffrage study social problems led her to get some wild and woolly ideas of the suffrage movement. She thought such subjects were unladylike and insanely condemned progressiveness as a result. It was her fanatical prudery that has driven her to this. It may do incalculable harm, for she appears convincing, has a pleasing personality and may have weight with strangers who do not know that her mind has been warped." (Gentlemen, I am willing to have any reputable alienist—not a woman—pass on my sanity.)

To quote all the interviews is unnecessary, but the remark of one other woman might be interesting. "I decline to believe," she says, "that if Annie Bock ever intends to return to Los Angeles she would have dared to make such an idiotic statement. She is foolish, but not so foolish as that."

CALLED "INSANE."

Gentlemen, I am pronounced insane and my return to my beloved home is threatened.

Well, let us return to Clara Shortridge Foltz. She concludes her letter thus: "Each and every charge Miss Bock makes is absolutely false and can only work harm if easterners, who might take her seriously, not knowing she is of absolutely no importance here." That sentence is faulty in construction and quite illogical, if correctly printed, though it came from the pen of a woman who sought to be judge of the Superior Court. My each and every charge concerning suffrage in California is absolutely false, writes Mrs. Foltz. I claim now and shall ever continue to claim that my statements are true and that one of them—that woman seeks political honors—is proved by the very acts of Mrs. Foltz when she allows herself to be suggested as police judge, when she applies to the Governor to be named Superior judge, when she telegraphs to the President suggesting a woman in his Cabinet; and a second charge I made—that enfranchisement robs woman of her finer qualities and changes the attitude of man—is brought out and emphasized by Mrs. Foltz, who concludes a letter to the Rev. Anna Shaw relative to suffrage and Mrs. Pankhurst's visit to this country with these words: "I firmly believe that the breach between the sexes is widening and we shall reap a harvest we had not intended to sow if the halt is not called."

This was expressed by me when last August in speaking of the changed attitude of men I said: "There is a subtle something abroad that one can better feel than describe." Are the scales then loosening on the eyes of Mrs. Foltz? She is a courageous woman, a woman who shouts for the flag, a woman who, I believe, would sacrifice much to uphold our constitution. One day, when the scales have all fallen from her eyes, she will grasp the full meaning of woman suffrage, and then she will put aside all selfishness, subdue her pride and, sad and depressed, she, too, will come out and make honest and full confession. Gentlemen, I consider Mrs. Foltz sufficiently important to repeat her words, printed in the Los Angeles Herald of October 15th., "I firmly believe," she says, "that the breach between the sexes is widening and we shall reap a harvest we had not intended to sow, if the halt is not called." Acting on Mrs. Foltz's suggestion, could there be a better time than now to call a halt?

SOCIALISM IN IT.

A national Socialist lecturer speaking in Los Angeles said:—"Comrades, people think that there are as many kinds of socialism as there are Heinz varieties, but there aren't. There is only one kind. Remember, comrades, there is only one kind, but we work it fifty-seven different ways." Yes, there is only one kind of socialism—that kind that robs man of initiative; that kind that says "property is robbery;" that kind that pronounces "rent, interest and profits theft;" that kind that harbors and pampers the lazy, incompetent, the criminal; that kind that condemns thrift and self-sacrifice and damns capital, the child of these virtues; that kind that proclaims its cause not a question of right but might, "because we have the numbers;" that kind that gains recruits by fanning the flames of discontent, that kind that works woman suffrage as the right bower in winning its game; that kind that scorns patriotism and tears down our flag and tramples it in the dust; that kind that would abolish our constitution, destroy our homes and rob us of our faith and hope; that kind that would make the State paternal; that kind that would bring the co-operative commonwealth. This cruel thing that I have tried to bring forcibly before you is the one kind of socialism. "But we work it fifty-seven different ways," he said. Yes, they work it the revolutionary way, like the I.W.W. and seek to bring the co-operative commonwealth by force, by strikes, sabotage, syndicalism, ultimately by the general strike or a revolution; or they work it in the Fabian way, like the suffragist, who knowingly or unknowingly, under the cloak of humanitarianism, helps to bring the co-operative commonwealth by urging and working for old age pension, teachers' pension, mother's pension, old age insurance, eight hour law for women, employers' liability law, commission form of government, woman's suffrage, doing away with the middleman, use of school houses for social centers, settlement work, social welfare work, municipal ownership, peace movement etc.—measures that encourage and increase unthrift and criminality in those it seeks to benefit, and at the same time disheartens and weakens the best element of society by weighing it down with taxation to support these measures.

Had you become intimately acquainted with socialism and woman suffrage, not only by reading but by listening to talks and lectures for three years—or say, even for three months—I say, had you attended suffragist and socialist lectures in parlor, school house, woman's club, church, theater, hall, labor temple, hobo mission, I.W.W. hangout and on the street corner, you would pronounce woman suffrage the Daughter of Socialism, at least you would acknowledge them Twin Sisters, for you would have found them ever walking hand in hand. Both work on the sympathies of a kind, well-meaning, thoughtless, unsuspecting and ignorant public. Last August crowds on Washington's street corners were told by one fair suffragist talking for suffrage that "little children were pulled out of bed and made to go to work." Another one told of a hair brush factory where women had been employed to insert the bristles in the brushes. The women finding that their sight was being impaired by the work, stopped it and the "Capitalist" (the capitalist, notice,) then employed the little children to do the work. "Were the children employed there the children of the women who had formerly worked in the factory?" was asked by an inquisitive listener. "Yes," came the answer from the speaker. "And would you give the ballot to these cruel women, who, suffering from this work, allowed their little children to go and do it in their places?" was then asked. The only response that came was an appreciative laugh from the crowd.

"WORKED OFF."

This well-meaning public is told by a Socialist at the corner of Thirty-fifth and Broadway, New York. "One million little children are starving on the East Side, due to capitalism." I tell you there are a lot of things that are being worked in the name of humanity today that are all wrong. Gentlemen, if every man and woman, instead of urging social centers in the schools, instead of endorsing socialistic forums in the churches and instead of doing social welfare work and [illegible] work (which are a fad on one hand and a graft game on the other) had given time to listening to suffragists and socialists and, having listened, had investigated what they said, and having investigated, had published the truth of their investigations, we would not now have this sly, creeping, cruel creature gnawing at the very vitals of our republic.

The working of socialism and suffrage proceeded so slyly and stealthily in England that they had gained a mighty hold before their power was recognised. We, too, sleep. Ambassador Bryce in a final talk before he left our shores spoke of our constitution as the greatest thing ever penned and, doubtless depressed by the lowering clouds hanging over his own beloved country, warned us never to alter it. Would it not be wise to ponder well the import of his words of warning?

Not only the royal family, but the race which has the majority of votes in Belgium is of German kin. The government leans every day more and more toward Germany, draws farther and farther away from France, so that the other race, the Walloon, which shares the Belgian kingdom, cries out it is betrayed, and will be left defenseless before the enemy, should war break out in Europe.

There is some exaggeration in this; but, none the less, the King of the Belgians is now a German general.

MAY RUN OCEAN LINERS WITH RADIUM POWER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—An English scientist named C. E. S. Phillips has been recently making some novel experiments with radium, the rays of which travel 180,000 miles a second. It appears that in solution radium decomposes water, giving off an explosive mixture of gas. Before an audience of medical men at the London Cancer Hospital Phillips produced these gases, and by fusing them with an electric spark, created a current of air which drove a small fan.

Another experiment was described as a "sporting event," as the lecturer was doubtful whether he could encompass it. In practice it was very successful. From the stage along the roof ran a glass tubing, twenty-five feet in length, connected with a tube of zinc sulphide. The lights were turned down and in the darkness radium emanations were pumped through the tubing, and in an instant the sulphide was glowing luminously while the audience loudly applauded.

Like an ultra-modern conjuror working with the latest medium, Phillips achieved other results illustrating the remarkable properties of radium. He took a balloon and after electrifying it by friction from a handkerchief, made it follow his fingers about; then he passed a speck of radium in a tube over it and the electricity was gone and the balloon was unresponsive. He produced a blue speck of light which was easily influenced by a magnet. He showed the rays penetrating luminously through an opaque surface.

As he demonstrated he dropped little items of information, such as:

The Beta rays of radium have a velocity of 180,000 miles a second.

The Alpha rays or helium have a velocity of 18,000 miles a second.

There are 20,000 tons of radium in the sea.

One ton of radium is equal to 1,500,000 tons of coal in point of radio-energy.

A gramme of radium diminishes to half its quantity in 1750 years; it is slowly giving off energy during that time equal to 3600 horse-power hours.

In view of the fact, he said, that the exhaustion of the coal supply in England was put at 200 years, science must begin to look about for some new source of energy.

"This," he observed, pointing to a retort stand as an example of hidden possibilities, "may have enough energy to run a steamship across the Atlantic."

GHOSTS FROM THE MOUTH, GERMAN PROFESSOR SAYS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Baron von Schrenck-Notzing, the well-known Munich professor who has gained an international reputation in morbid psychology, says ghosts come out of your mouth.

He has just published a book which will excite a good deal of controversy. It contains a record of four years' experiments with the French medium, "Eva," and in it he claims to have established the fact that the so-called materializations are formed from a moist, cloud-like emanation from the mouth and other parts of the body of the person producing them.

To this emanation, which he and others repeatedly saw issuing from Eva's mouth, he has given the name "teleplasma." The experiments were conducted with every precaution to eliminate the possibility of fraud, the medium being stripped, medically examined, and clothed in special attire before each test. In some cases she exhibited her powers in a state of absolute nudity before persons of her own sex only.

The Baron testifies to having watched the "teleplasma" rise like smoke from Eva's mouth, and take the shape of hands, faces, and other objects. On one occasion it streamed down her body, detached itself, and moved about independently on the floor. At this point, however, Eva rose suddenly, flung herself at full length upon it, and lay unconscious. When she was lifted to her feet the emanation had vanished, having apparently been absorbed into her body.

Nine photographic apparatus at one time, set at various angles and simultaneously exposed by flashlights, were placed in the cabinet to photograph the medium and the "ghosts." By means of a cinematograph, Dr. von Schrenck-Notzing recorded pictures of the substance emanating from the medium and materializing into hands, feet, and sometimes full figures.

"What I claim to have established," Dr. von Schrenck-Notzing states in his book, "is this:

"There are such things as ghosts or specters.

"In the case of Medium Eva S., the 'substance' of which the ghosts materialize, came from the medium itself, and is reabsorbed by the medium.

"The stuff of which these ghosts are made varies, as far as one can see it, from smoke-like to spidery weblike, and even has sometimes the appearance of a fine veil.

"To the touch it is damp and sticky.

"Microscopic examination reveals that it is of an organic character."

Official Seal of London.

[Indianapolis News:] The official seal of the corporation of London was formally "broken" on the first of December and a new one submitted. The old one had been in constant use for 532 years. It had only one predecessor, which was destroyed in 1381, because it was "too small, rude and ancient." The seal was of silver, about the size of a dollar. It is much worn and blurred. It probably was used 1500 times annually, or 798,000 times altogether.

Graduation.

RICH BRITONS ARE ALARMED.

Premier Plans Revision of the Income Tax Law.

Amount at Present Exempt Will Be Made Lower.

Protests from the Minority Are Already Heard.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The Prime Minister of England has just announced that the British Parliament intends to embark on a complete revision of the income tax. In a recent speech he stated that "the time has come for a complete re-examination in all directions, both downwards and upwards, of the system of exemption, of abatement, and of graduation. This system may well be replaced by provisions which would make the tax both wider and more equitable in its incidence and more productive in its yield." And people with money here are very anxious to know what this precisely means.

At present no income tax is levied in England upon wage earners whose incomes do not exceed $800 a year. And incomes above that sum are relieved by certain abatements which, however, do not apply to incomes over $3500 a year. Incomes, whether earned or unearned, over $25,000 a year are taxed an extra 12 cents for each $5 (known as the super tax) on such parts of the income as exceed $15,000. As consequence, the British Premier may take refuge in one of four things. He may go in for (1.) Taxation of incomes under $800 a year—and so take in the artisan class.

(2.) Impose a higher super tax—a favorite Radical and Socialist nostrum.

(3.) Revise the present graduation scale.

(4.) Or make more generous abatements for incomes under $3500.

MAY LOWER EXEMPTION.

The best opinion favors the idea that the British government will lower the amount that has now the benefit of exemption. Many of Asquith's supporters believe that everyone in receipt of an income of $6 a week ought to contribute to this tax. On the face of it, this does not look good electioneering business for Asquith's partisans, but any such proposal would necessarily be accompanied by the abolition of the duties on sugar, currants, tea and other common household necessities. So "what is lost on the swings could be gained on the roundabouts," particularly if simultaneously an attempt were made to show the working man that it is cheaper in the long run for him to pay income tax, as he would save more than he paid in that direction by the abolition of indirect taxation.

There is no doubt that in other European countries the income tax nearly always starts at a much lower level than it does today in England. In Austria the income tax begins at $250; in Prussia, at $225; in Saxony, at $100; in Wurtemburg and Bavaria, at $125. In Switzerland, the income tax varies according to the canton on incomes from $250 to $400. On the other hand, in Zurich and Lucerne, the minimum is $100; in Neuchatel, $80; while in Fribourg, there is no limit at all.

It is unnecessary even to attempt to examine in detail all the extraordinary complicated scales of graduation that are found in different continental countries. A more interesting point to note is that in many countries the income tax is applied for local as well as for national purposes. This is the case in Prussia, where every person has to pay an income tax to the local authorities and to the State government. It is the case, also, in Norway, with this difference—that the municipal tax is graduated on a slightly different scale from the national tax. Holland and Denmark also have local income taxes. Whether these foreign countries have completely surmounted the difficulty of ascertaining how much income is properly taxable in each locality cannot be ascertained from these severely official government reports.

SYSTEM'S DISADVANTAGES.

At present in England the income tax is limited to a comparatively small section of the community, and the mischief comes in when it is realized that a very large section of the community enjoys the right to vote. In fact, the majority of voters are not direct tax payers, and do not, in practice, feel such indirect taxes as they are called upon to pay. This is essentially unjust, because one of the most important powers that the elected representative in England possesses is the power of imposing taxation. The injustice is increased by the fact that of recent years it has become the practice of politicians on both sides to cater for votes by offering what they call social reform to the electors.

Whatever other qualities may attach to social reform, it possesses this essential feature, that money is taken out of the exchequer to provide for the wants of the poorer classes. And it is because these poorer classes command the majority of votes that politicians have latterly become so enthusiastic for "social reform." In other words, control of the government in England is no longer in the hands of the tax payers, but of the tax eaters.

Wisely, Harold Cox of the Cobden Club points out: "This system can be tolerated as long as the country remains prosperous, but in time of trade depression there would be very great difficulty in raising revenue, and angry protests from the minority who have now to bear the great burden of taxation. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that all classes should bear some share, however small, of direct taxation. Possibly the simplest plan would be to make the income tax universal and payable quarterly, and that each tax payer's quarterly receipt for his income tax should be his qualification for voting."

LATEST TRIAL AT KIEV PROMISES SENSATION.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 17.—Another sensational trial will take place shortly at Kiev. It promises to be just as interesting as that of the Jew, Beiliss, and a key to it was given the other day in the "Kiewlianine," an ultra-conservative and anti-Jewish paper of Kiev, which for the fifty years of its existence has been always looked upon as a strong supporter of the Russian bureaucrat.

In this article the Kiewlianine revealed several facts that had been carefully concealed until now, and further astounded its readers by saying that these sensational facts had been put together by the deceased editor of the paper, M. Pichno, who had all along said that he would stand up for Beiliss, on the strength of what he had learned concerning the undercurrents of the latter's trial. Also that in taking up the attitude it had adopted, the Kiewlianine was only acting according to the views of its former ever to be lamented editor. The impression produced by this declaration has been immense, and the contents of the article, which were at once telegraphed all over Russia, have so excited public opinion that it is safe to say that the agitation provoked by this unfortunate Beiliss affair, so far from waning, is increasing day by day, and may lead to consequences which it is quite impossible to foresee.

This article begins by mentioning that one of the principal counts upon which the prosecution was based was a so-called letter from Beiliss, addressed to his wife, whilst he was in jail, which a fellow-prisoner of his had undertaken to deliver to the unfortunate woman. In this letter the accused man appeared to have implored his co-religionists to use their best endeavors to come to his assistance, and spare neither efforts nor money on his behalf; furthermore, he added that in order to help him to some purpose, certain witnesses against him ought to be removed and poisoned. This letter was at once given up to the jail authorities, and, not altogether unnaturally, the prosecution built its principal subject of accusation upon it.

Beiliss swore that he had never written this letter, but all the same it was brought into the indictment. The gendarmerie, or rather its political section, whose head at Kiev was, and still is, a certain Col. Iwanoff, was entrusted with the mission to discover the murderers of the boy, Jouschinsky. The colonel had already dealt with that fellow-prisoner of Beiliss, who gave up the letter attributed to the latter, a certain Kazatchenko, who, in reality was a police spy. He sent for him, and, after some prevarications, the man fell upon his knees and owned to the colonel that this whole story of the letter had been invented by him.

Iwanoff hastened to inform the public prosecutor, Tschaplinsky, of his discoveries, but the latter replied to him that the declarations of Kazatchenko had already been consigned in the indictment, which was partly ready, and that he thought it unnecessary to change anything in it in consequence of Kazatchenko's avowal. "Let them find out the truth themselves during the trial."

Luckily the Russian people have themselves already found out the secret of the insistence on the part of the prosecuting authorities to indict Beiliss. Thereby hangs a tale. In 1912, when the Emperor was in Kiev, at the time when Stolypin was murdered there, the ultra-conservative party, which found itself suddenly deprived of its all powerful leader, felt frightened that his disappearance from the political arena might bring about its own fall, or at least make the sovereign more accessible to the advice of his opponents. It was decided to make a desperate effort, not only to maintain itself in power, but also to compromise the Czar in such a way that he would find himself forever bound to it, and unable to adopt another course of policy than the one which it represented.

In order to do this every possible means was put into motion, and even Raspoutine was appealed to. Raspoutine is a kind of vagrant monk, who is consulted by members of the imperial family, and is said to have used his influence on anti-Jewish lines, with the tragic result already seen.

'WARE THE FAIR TYPIST.

Meal With Charming Stenographer Leads to a Duel Between Lawyer and Officer.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—A new peril has been discovered in Germany in relation to pretty typists and their employers and admirers. The moral illustrated by proceedings in the Berlin military courts is this: "Don't take somebody else's typist out to theater and supper."

The trouble began when a lawyer, strolling casually into a popular restaurant in the Leipzigerstrasse one night not long ago, was chagrined to find his pretty typist supping there in the company of a lieutenant of the army engineers. Instead of waiting to admonish the winsome young lady next morning in his office, the man of law strode up to her table and began abusing the lieutenant.

In the course of their declamatory melee the lawyer boxed the officer's ears, whereupon the lieutenant demanded an exchange of cards and a duel under "deadly" conditions. The men actually met in the Grunewald forest, on the outskirts of the capital, a few days later. Three shots apiece were exchanged at fifteen paces, but no blood was shed. This week a brother officer, who had acted as the lieutenant's second, was put on trial for "card-bearing," and sentenced to a day's detention in fortress. The duelists were not prosecuted, but the typist is looking for a new position.

TROPICAL WORLD CONGRESS.

International Delegates Will Discuss at London the Cotton and the Rubber Industries.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—London is annually the rendezvous of international conferences of a curious assortment in character and subject. The latest gathering to be called will have an especial interest for men in the rubber and cotton trade, for the arrangements have now been completed for the assembling in London early next summer of a great international congress of tropical agriculture.

It will be attended by delegates, official and commercial, from all parts of the world, and will be extraordinarily important in view of the extending range of the interests which it will be called upon to survey. As a leading product of tropical agriculture, cotton will, of course, be prominently represented, and all the cotton-growing countries are sending delegates.

Besides cotton, however, the congress will discuss rubber—the world-wide importance and magnitude of rubber manufacturing is growing at such a rate that it is prophesied that it will shortly equal the steel industry—tea, cocoanut fibre, coffee, copra, and sisal hemp among various tropical products. Special attention will be given to such questions as tree diseases, and the health of the workers—the latter an important point in view of the periodical crop of scandals concerning rubber and cocoa plantation life.

It is likely that this notable world congress will be presided over by Prof. Wyndham Dunstan, C.M.G., who is president of the International Association of Tropical Agriculture, while the vice-presidents may include the Earl of Derby as president of the British Cotton-Growing Association, Lord Kitchener, and Sir Henry A. Blake, the well-known former colonial Governor. The congress meetings will chiefly be held at the Imperial Institute in South Kensington.

Reconstruction.

WILL REBUILD TURKISH NAVY.

English Firm Gets Contract for Thirty Years.

Missionary Finds Negro Giants Who Powder Faces.

Man Improves His Chickens with Electricity.

[A. P. Correspondence to The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The material efficiency of Turkey's navy will be for thirty years almost entirely in British hands. The Ottoman government has recently placed a contract to continue for three decades with Armstrong & Vickers, a British firm which has often had close working relations with the Bethlehem Steel Works in foreign contracts, and which has taken over the Turkish arsenal and naval station and will assume control of both repairs and construction.

This is one of many instances in which British firms are helping in building up the navies of other countries. While busy with British orders, the shipbuilding and armament firms in England are also assisting South American republics, Russia, Spain and Greece.

The Turkish reconstruction is probably the biggest undertaking, since it it is wholly in British hands. A new naval base is to be established at Ismidt, about sixty miles from Constantinople on the Asiatic shore of the Gulf of Marmora. For 200 years it was the site of Turkey's arsenal and dockyards, but was abandoned in 1879 owing to the harbor silting up. It will take a dozen years to restore the harbor and bring it up to the standard of a modern naval base. However, it is the intention to build here a construction plant capable of building modern battleships.

In the meantime the present Turkish navy, so badly treated by the Greeks in the recent war, is to be overhauled in the arsenal at the Golden Horn. A staff of Englishmen to superintend the work is already in Constantinople, and although it is proposed to use Turkish labor and material, as much as possible, much will come from England. The board of administration will consist of five Englishmen and four Turks, the latter appointed by the Ottoman government. Besides naval work, the company expects to do considerable repair work for the mercantile marine visiting Turkish waters.

One of the terms of the contract was that the firm was to secure for Turkey a loan of $5,000,000 on favorable terms. This has already been secured, but it is not stated for what the money is to be used. The Porte needs a lot of money for the reorganization of the army, which is again to be undertaken by Germans, despite the adverse criticism of the army trained by them in the battles of Thrace, but it is likely German banks will lend the money for this. The English money may therefore go in part payment for the battleship Rio de Janeiro, built by Armstrong & Vickers for the Brazilian government and for which Greece and Turkey have been competitors.

PORTUGUESE POLITICS.

Political conditions in Portugal are regarded by many observers as nearly chaotic. No man has yet been found who can bring the discordant elements together, and the very worst is prophesied in some quarters for the republic.

All this gives credence to the repeated reports that the British and German governments are in very earnest negotiations in regard to the Portuguese colonies in Africa. There has long been an understanding as to the division of these colonies when the expected breakup of Portugal comes. Some have even gone as far as to express the opinion that three German ships now visiting the west coast of Africa are there to take over some of the colonies at an opportune moment. As to what is to become of Portugal itself no one can be found to express an opinion, but it has been suggested that the country might come under the protection of Spain with the support of the powers.

AFRICAN NEGRO GIANTS.

The Rev. L. Lea-Wilson, who conducts a mission in the district of the White Nile, a thousand miles south of Khartoum, has arrived in England with interesting facts about a race of negro giants, who inhabit the Bahr-el-Ghazal, two hundred miles west of the river. These natives practice neither cannibalism nor human sacrifices and have some admirable traits. Unlike their neighbors, they are never cruel to women or children, and their habits of decorating themselves are somewhat akin to the people of civilization.

For reasons unknown even to themselves, the adults all have six lower teeth removed. Of those remaining, however, they take the most scrupulous care, cleaning them daily with a native brush and wood ash. They take much pride in dressing their hair, powder their faces and wear ostrich feathers. They believe in a Supreme Being to whom they make sacrifices through their chiefs or witch doctors.

ELECTRIC CHICKEN CULTURE.

Raising fowls on electricity has proved a profitable experiment with T. Thorne Baker. Under electrical treatment he declares that chickens can be grown at twice the usual rate with half the usual food. On the farm where the experiments were conducted an intensive poultry house was electrified. The current was applied for ten minutes every hour during the day. Six chickens only out of a total of 400 died, showing a mortality of only 1.5 per cent., when the usual mortality is 50 per cent. during the summer season. The chickens were ready for market in five weeks as against the usual three months. The vitality of the treated chickens was remarkable. Instead of running away when one approached the screen they would peck vigorously at an extended hand, every peck giving a distinct shock to the owner of the hand, but apparently the electricity was not felt by the chickens. Sparks flew from their beaks, but this caused them no concern.

ALSACE UNREST STIRS GERMANY.

Hostile Spirit Inherited by Younger Generation.

Recent Outburst at Zaborn Only Fans the Flame.

Annexed Territory Is Still a Storm Center.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—It would be absurd to pretend that the military and civil authorities in Berlin are not gravely concerned about the future of Alsace-Lorraine. The question has been raised to fever heat by the recent outburst of military zeal at Zaborn, and, although the Kaiser and Reichstag have done their best to allay the fever, it is recognized that anything may happen next year in this dreaded storm center.

After forty-one years of just, efficient, and fairly liberal and sympathetic rule, Alsace-Lorraine is as separatist and Francophile as ever. Years have counted for nought. Elderly men who remember the rule of Napoleon III are dying out, and are being replaced by young men who were never French.

But though most of these young men have German names, and cannot speak any French, they are more Francophile than their fathers and grandfathers. Indeed, it is precisely the growing lad, the "Schangels," as local Germans derisively call him, who is the bitterest enemy of German rule today.

Alsace-Lorraine is now, as it was under France, mainly German in race, language and civilization. There is Frankish blood—also originally German—in Lorraine, but Alsace belongs to the "Alemanni" branch of Teutons. All Alsace, except a few communes near the Swiss frontier, speaks German. Lorraine has a strong French minority. But the last census showed that only 200,000 persons out of 1,800,000 in both provinces regard French as their mother tongue.

Even in Francophile Metz, which is within a few miles of the French frontier, German is the mother tongue of four-fifths of the people. German is the language of all schools and colleges, and of Strassburg University. It is more useful for business than French. Large numbers of the real French of Alsace-Lorraine annually emigrate to France, and the young Alsatian Frenchman enlists in the French army—and never come home again. In short, every material factor seems to make for the complete Germanization of the conquered provinces.

Yet at heart the majority of men and women remain "Nationalist," that is Francophile; they look to France for politics, law, literature and art. They protest with tongues in cheeks that all they want is home rule and freedom within the German Empire; but when they say this three out of four mean that they want the German Empire cut to pieces and their own provinces happily re-annexed to France.

Alsatians do not complain of German rule. They cann_t because Germany has done everything to placate them.

The new Alsatian Nationalist movement has gone hand in hand with French Nationalism. In Verdun a 40,000-strong meeting was held lately at which Frenchmen and Alsatian Frenchmen were appealed to to guard the sacred fire of patriotism until the dawn of the destined day. The patriotic society, "Souvenir Francais," largely controls the movement on both sides of the frontier. In France the "Souvenir" has nearly 1000 local groups and 160,000 members. In Alsace-Lorraine it has twenty-eight branches.

In Alsace-Lorraine the Lorraine Sportive has played a powerful role. Nominally it is "sportive," in reality it is political; and it emphasized its political trend by adopting a "sport" uniform closely resembling that of the French infantry. The Lorraine Sportive finally got itself dissolved, but it exists today under another name. Other Nationalist leagues are the Cercle des Annales, the Cercle of the Revue Alsacienne Illustree, and formerly the Cercle des Etudiants Alsaciens-Lorraine, which also got itself dissolved.

Germans accuse the Metz Academie of carrying on a similar agitation under the cloak of science. Metz altogether is violently French. The inhabitants boycott the esplanade when German military bands play, but turn out in thousands when the music is supplied by the "pompiere," who wear French uniforms.

Alsace-Lorraine's women help the movement. Most of the girls' schools are free from German governmental control. They are conducted by the Roman Catholic clericals, who are the backbone of the French movement.

Berlin newspapers tell a story of a local German official who, being ordered on a voyage, sent his 8-year-old girl to a local pension school. When he returned a year later he found she could not speak her native German. The spirit of these girls' schools is indicated by another story. A little girl, after listening to her school mistress's story of barbarities perpetrated in Asia by Alexander, was asked, "Now, what nation did Alexander the Great belong to?"

"I suppose he was a Prussian," was the answer.

VIENNA'S FIRE LOSS.

City of Over Two Million Inhabitants Sustains Total of Only $355,000 During the Year.

[A. P. Correspondence to The Times.]

VIENNA, Dec. 20.—For a city of 2,098,000 people, extending over an area of 106 square miles, Vienna enjoys a remarkabe limmunity from serious fires. The total losses for the last year amounted to only $355,000, arising from 1062 fires. In the first half of the same year New York Citys' losses are reported as $5,820,000, from 8455 fires.

O fthe Vienna fires only 47 were classed as "large" fires, that is, where two or more lines of hose were brought into play. There were 211 "medium" fires, requiring only one hose.

Carlessness with matches and lights caused 214 of the fires. There were only 18 known cases of arson.

The total alarms were 3159, for in Vienna the service of the fire department are requisitioned in all kinds of accidents in the streets and buildings, som ecf them of the most trivial character—a pigeon entangled in the telephon wires, for inestance.

Mother of a Serb Warrior.

A New Year's spendthrift.

Woe betide the Servian mother who tries to stint either herself or her children on the first day of the New Year in a land where in spite of their Christianity the people are for the most part, it is said, fatalists.

Nationalistic.

SERVIA'S GREATEST DAY THE FIRST OF THE YEAR.

BY P. SOUTH.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BELGRADE, Dec. 16.—New Year's Day in Servia evokes the most curious contradictions and manifestations from the Serbs. The fact is—the Slav is a fatalist in spite of his Christianity, and this is why so much importance is attached in Servia, as in other Balkan countries, to the merest trifles on the first of January, the biggest day in the year.

To begin the twelve-month well in Servia, it is considered necessary to start everything afresh. If possible, only brand new clothes are worn on the auspicious day and woe betide the thrifty mother of a large family who, laying superstition aside for the sake of economy, endeavors to evade this stringent rule for her children. She knows the risk she is taking should she substitute a garment outgrown by an elder child for the new one to which the younger is entitled. She will be reckoned a bad housekeeper and a godless mother. It is still usual in the villages for the home-weaver to provide the entire apparel for the family, and every peasant's house has two looms, one for linen and one for woolen homespun.

At daybreak it is the endeavor of every boy to be the first in bringing good wishes to his friends, and he who succeeds is rewarded with a gold piece or an apple, according to the circumstances of the host. He is also looked upon as a mascot of that particular family for the rest of the year. It is he who builds up the first fire of the year and receives the pitcher of water brought to the door.

The fetching of water on New Year's morning is a matter of considerable importance. The girls of the house, singing, and dressed in their best, sally forth to the nearest spring, or well, with their vessels of burnished bronze. The national "kalo," a graceful dance with many figures, preceeds the drawings of the first bucket of water, half of which is thrown on the ground to propitiate the fairies. The youngest is privileged to walk first as they return in procession, and to present her pitcher to the aforesaid boy, who proceeds to make the coffee for the household, with the assistance of the host. Strangely enough, in all these countries, it is the man's business to manipulate the coffee-pot, although all other culinary duties are left to the woman.

An important item in the programme of the day is the eating of the apple credited with the virtue of preserving one from all throat affection. This apple is baked in the mouth of the suckling pig, the indispensable Christmas fare held in as much honor as turkey and plum-pudding elsewhere. It is preserved, together with the head containing it, until the eighth day, when it is solemnly divided among the members of the household.

When the mid-day meal is dispensed with and the siesta over—for even on such a great day as this the siesta is never omitted—there begins the round of visits incumbent on every male over eighteen years of age. Formerly it was more pleasant than arduous, but in towns of increasing populations, it has become a heavy task, for the obligation still obtains to call on this one day in the year upon even the most slight acquaintances. An omission is regarded as an unpardonable offense.

In the capital and in other of the larger towns, the custom is spreading of sending a card of greeting instead, and a general falling-off in personal visits is the consequence, since it would be difficult to call on some and pass others by. One man, however, whom I knew, refused to shirk his obligations and made a record one New Year's day by paying seventy-two visits in person, a remarkable feat, even though he did no more than dash into each drawing-room with hat and overcoat—a most grievous solecism in the Balkans—call out breathlessly, "Sretna Nova Godina"—"Happy New Year"—and rush off again.

January the first is a day when gipsy fortune tellers are immune from police interference. They go from house to house with their wares—which are the predictions of good luck that everyone likes to hear and amulets preserving from sudden death. In some places in Western Servia, as in Bulgaria, little gipsy children dance as many rounds as days of rain are desired by the community. When a wet harvest supervenes the old women shake their heads and say, "somewhere the rain-charmers danced too long on New Year's Day," and, vice versa if a drought occurs, they will reproach some miser who did not pay for sufficient gyrations.

On one occasion only New Year in Servia was not officially observed. It was immediately following King Peter's accession, when the cloud that hung over the monarch still kept his fellow sovereigns at a distance. Their representatives in Belgrade were precluded from entering the palace while the regicides held posts of honor near the person of the King, and the latter consequently issued a proclamation to the effect that since New Year was nothing but a family feast in Servia he would receive no outside visitors and would himself make a pilgrimage instead to the tombs of his ancestors. So he went off to Topola, where they were buried. The regicides were subsequently removed, the ban was lifted and no more was heard of "Servian family customs" forbidding visitors to the palace.

Diplomats now attend in gala attire on New Year's Day and assist at the removal of the straw with which the floors remain littered during Christmas week in memory of the stable at Bethlehem. This precedes the formal opening of the state ball, at which Crown Prince Alexander, his brother, George, and the younger officers of the military corps usher in the new year by a "Ratno Kolo," a kind of war dance in which the ladies take no part. It is of ancient origin and is this year particularly appropriate after the late hostilities, as it is danced with the martial trappings of saber and spurs.

LADY IN WAITING'S WAGE.

Fifteen Hundred Dollars Is Paid to Her as a General Proposition, London Hears.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—It is an open secret that Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught have had a most diverting country-house "hunt" which at one time seemed destined to become a trifle wearisome and exhausting.

They have at last, however, found a home, and though it is not a permanency it has been taken for a sufficiently long period to enable them to survey England at leisure for a place which will suit them.

The problem of the royal couple's houses has supplied material for the gossips, and at various times they have been announced as having decided upon as many as four different halls in York, around York, and also far away from York.

It is now stated authoritatively that Prince and Princess Arthur have taken for four months Hutton Hall, the beautiful residence of Capt. York, a member of an old Yorkshire family.

It is unlikely, however, that Princess Arthur will follow the example of her mother and her aunts, and do without a regular lady-in-waiting, borrowing one for special state occasions. When the Duke of Fife, Princess Arthur's father, married the Princess Royal, he made it a stipulation that she should not have a ladyi-n-waiting, and Queen Maude of Norway has never had an English lady in attendance.

All the King's aunts have ladies, the Princess Christian having six, of whom only two, however, are paid. The usual salary for a lady-in-waiting is $1500 a year. The duties are rather indefinite, but the lady in attendance on Queen Mary writes all her letters, and generally acts as a sort of assistant private secretary.

It is a little difficult to understand how ladies of position and with households of their own can afford the time to be "in attendance" on royal personages, and in this connection it is interesting to remember that when Lady Salisbury was offered a post of lady-in-waiting by Queen Alexandra, she accepted on the condition that she was never required during her sons' school holidays.

Lucky Man of England Prefers a Bride from this Country—Says British Girls Are all too Stiff.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—"One of the luckiest young men in England," as he is frequently styled, is now on the lookout for an American bride. He is tired of the average English girl that he met—she was so stiff, so sudden, so unresponsive—and he spoke openly of an early trip to New York, Boston, Chicago and San Francisco in search of his ideal woman.

The man is Sir Richard Sutton, who is "Lulu" Harcourt's guest at Nuneham Park. Less than two years ago he inherited a comfortable income estimated at £500,000 a year. He is one of the largest ground landlords in the West End of London, owning the north side of Piccadilly and a large part of Clarges, Sackville and Vigo streets. Besides which he has large estates in Lincolnshire and Berkshire.

Sir Richard Sutton was born a baronet, for his father died two months before his birth. The family mansion of the Suttons is the famous house, No. 94, Piccadilly, which is now the Naval and Military Club. History takes note of it, for here Lord Palmerston lived for a time, and in his day the house was the focus of social life.

CORN CLINIC FOR THE POOR.

QUEEN MARY'S CHIROPODIST LAUNCHES NEW PLAN.

London Practitioners Organize to Wipe Out the Quacks and Charlatans and Incidentally to Relieve Sufferings of Many Who Have Been Imposed Upon.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Considerable public interest has been aroused in London in the developments of the corn clinic for the poor that has just been established in the British capital.

The formation of a "National Society of Chiropodists"—which is the title assumed by this new organization—will admit no longer of any unfortunate sufferer from corns being regarded, in London at all events, with unreasoning merriment. The men and women who have taken upon themselves the duty of relieving his sufferings belong to a type of the highest professional character, and they insist that his sufferings shall be treated with respect as well as the highest surgical skill.

For the last year or two London—from the most fashionable quarters of Mayfair and Belgravia to the poorest working-class neighborhood in the East End—has become overrun with a breed of quacks and charlatans who hang out fantastic legends announcing themselves as "chiropodists by appointment." Unhappily they have had no qualifications for their work beyond the power of applying a razor to the affected parts or supplying a lotion, which, more often than not, was composed of colored water, and for which they charged most exorbitant prices. It is to wipe out this type of operator that the new clinic has been brought into existence.

E. G. V. Runting,

Queen Mary's chiropodist.

For the guidance of members, the society lays down and imposes one inflexible law, which says: "Chiropody is understood to be the surgical and mechanical treatment of abnormal nails; all superficial excrescences on the hands and feet such as corns, warts, callosities and the treatment of bunions, but shall not include the right to operate upon the hands or feet for congenital or acquired deformities, or for conditions requiring the use of anaesthetics other than local, or incisions involving structures below the level of the true skin."

The society admits considerable indebtedness to American colleagues in New York and Chicago, who have done much to stimulate it into activity, J. G. Reis, president of the Pedic Society of Chicago, being particularly referred to in the first address to members. It is of interest to note, too, that one of the first subscribers to the charity is Miss Violet Bryce, daughter of the late British Ambassador at Washington.

When it is discovered that Queen Mary's "Chiropodist by Appointment" is waiting to receive you with the humility of a man who might never have enjoyed the graciousness of a royal smile or "command," the temptation of having your most painful corn removed is more than even a consistent Democrat can resist. "Mr." E. G. V. Runting, who is president of the society, comes of a family of surgeons who have always been associated with royal appointments. His mother was chiropodist to the late Queen Victoria and to Queen Alexandra, and besides holding the appointment to Queen Mary he is a most popular personality in the most exclusive society circles in London. His manner to the poorest patient stamps him as a man of humanitarian feelings, while he has in him all the time the pride that demands the status of chiropody by its immediate elevation into the rank and dignity of the great profession.

In the few weeks that the scheme has been in motion nearly all chiropodists of standing in Great Britain, and a good number from the United States, have joined the society; and some of the leading operators—men and women—attend regularly at the clinic to give their services when needed.

The clinic has already made what is considered an important discovery. The popular view hitherto had been that British women were more subject to corns than men on account of the former's propensity to wear tight boots so as to compress within an unnatural compass what might be regarded as a too expansive foot. A vivacious young woman, a member of the new society, declares this to be a mistaken notion, the average sufferers in males and females being about equal. "There is a greater tendency," she said, "among men to wear ill-fitting boots than there is among women; and what is more, men are more inclined to magnify their sufferings than women." According to this authority it is also a mistake to imagine that corns are in all cases a legacy of badly constructed boots. Scientific investigation has proved that they are a by-product of a variety of diseases peculiar to the human system, and this is one of the reasons why the practice of chiropody should be confined, like surgery and medicine, to persons scientifically trained.

The clinic is situated in Silver street, near the British Museum, and house operators are in attendance just as are house surgeons at the hospitals. The institution is being run generally on hospital lines; the operating-rooms are equipped with the latest fittings and appointments, and the operators wear white linen overalls.

SHE DINES THE KING.

And Yet They Do Say That the Ruler of Great Britain Is Not an Easy Man to Entertain.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—In spite of all the talk about His Majesty's democratic tendencies and his fondness for the freedom of his American friends, King George is not an easy man to entertain. He pretends he does not value the tinsel and trappings of a servile State, but woe attends the hostess who neglects the tiniest detail in the pomp and circumstance of British monarchial power.

To such an extent is this absurd fuss carried that it is known that whenever the King stays with Lord and Lady Iveagh, the latter herself sees to the setting of the dinner table and the distribution around it of the guests. At midday, before which time she does not leave her bedroom, Lady Iveagh has brought to her a miniature model of the dinner table and of everything on it except the actual food, and the arrangements she works out with her toy banquet are afterwards copied with the greatest care by the servants.

King George has also decided to try to muzzle the British newspapers. His Majesty has just resolved to establish some official at the court whose sole duty it shall be to issue matter to the press concerning matters of general interest, respecting the royal family as a whole. The principal newspapers and news agencies will then be informed of the new arrangement, and any paper or agency that publishes matter that has not previously been approved by the new authority will afterwards be debarred from receiving any such officially supplied information.

The censorship idea seems to be very much to the fore now in London.

GOTHAM JUDGE'S DRAFT.

Gaelic Leaguers of Ireland Are Cheered by The Recently Received Gift of $5000.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 20.—The bank draft for $5000 which Dr. Douglas Hyde has just received from Judge Martin Keogh of the New York Supreme Court is cheering news for Gaelic Leaguers. It arrived at a moment when such financial help was sorely needed.

The services of a number of teachers, which otherwise would have to be dispensed with by the executive of the league, can now be retained for at least another twelve months. By that time it is hoped Ireland will have her own Parliament and control of the finances with which to build up an educational system of her own on truly national lines.

For the last year or two matters have not been moving at all too smoothly with the league at home. There has been evidence of petty jealousies and painful personal bickerings in the administrative work which is not calculated to inspire confidence in the minds of many men and women who have always supported the movement with a whole-hearted devotion and allegiance. In such circumstances the finances suffered, so far as home contributions were concerned, and if it had not been for American sympathizers many of the activities of the organization would have closed down.

This draft will remove any danger of immediate financial embarrassment.

EXPLAINS FALL OF BISMARCK.

SAYS CHANCELLOR PLANNED TO OVERTHROW CONSTITUTION.

Prof. Delbrueck of the University of Berlin Declares the Proposed Abolishment of Manhood Suffrage in the Reichstag Elections Was Finally Blocked by the Kaiser.

[A. P. Correspondence to The Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Bismarck planned to overthrow the constitution of the German Empire and abolish manhood suffrage in the Reichstag elections, according to Prof. Hans Delbrueck, the celebrated historian of the University of Berlin.

In a book just published the historian declares that this radical plan, to which the Emperor William II refused his assent, was the cause of the first chancellor's fall. The story in brief is as follows:

Bismarck, who had continuingly increasing difficulties in working with the Reichstag, and finding majorities for his various policies, had apparently, at the beginning of the eighties, become convinced that he would not be able to govern permanently with a Reichstag elected according to the constitution of the new empire, and began laying plans for its abolition. As a first step he had the Federal Council adopt a resolution declaring that the German Empire was a free federation of princes and could be dissolved by them at any time. With this resolution in hand he was ready for the Reichstag elected in 1887, in which there was a clear majority of Socialists, Clericals and Radicals agains him. The anti-Socialist law, enacted in 1878, which made virtual criminals of Socialists and their sympathizers and authorized martial law in a town harboring them, was to expire at the end of 1887, unless re-enacted by the Reichstag. Delbrueck asserts that Bismarck, although he could have secured the extension of the law from the Reichstag, deliberately refrained from serious effort to this end and permitted the measure to lapse. He counted, according to Prof. Delbrueck, that this Reichstag would be dissolved, that the dissolution would be followed by rioting and bloodshed, and that the failure of Parliament to re-enact the law ostensibly designed to cripple Socialist agitation and disorder would excite a storm against the Reichstag, under cover of which he could safely clip its wings.

With the people sufficiently alarmed at street fighting, and other intimations of mob rule, Bismarck planned to have the Emperor announce that he renounced the imperial crown. With this announcement, however, he was to throw out an appeal to the reigning princes of the German states to renew the federation on the same basis as before, except the provision for the election of the Reichstag upon universal, secret and direct ballot. The universal franchise was to be retained in principle, but with provisions for open balloting and that persons adjudged by a court to be guilty of "revolutionary conduct," in other words, the Socialists, wert to be disfranchised.

With his plan matured Bismarck approached the young Emperor. The latter refused absolutely to consider it and the old Chancellor retired.

Delbrueck's statements are questioned by the Conservative press, but have not been authoritatively denied or disputed and in other quarters have been received withou tcomment.

GIRLS WAIT ON DOGS.

The Pampering of Cats and Canines Among the Smart Britishers is Steadily Growing Worse.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The pampering of cats and dogs among the English smart set grows steadily worse.

One may take it that the standard of luxury set in the fashionable London dog salon is maintained after the buyers have taken their dogs home. The post of kennel-maid to the small dogs in these salons is now one for which well-connected girls who "want to do something" are keenly competing. The duties are not onerous, as the roughest work is done by someone else, and all that the maid need do is to be found smiling and well attired in the dogs' drawing-room at times when the buyers call, and be on sufficiently intimate terms with the tiny creatures on white-wooled sofas and chairs to show them off to the best advantage.

Very large prices are realized by the owners of these fancy dogs and cats. A well-known Mayfair lady had a famous breed of French poodles, notably a blue poodle, by name "La Poupee," with a record of thirty prizes and quite a number of cups. "La Poupee's" puppies sold for $500 apiece until the poodle's retirement into private life.

Lady Decies and Lady Marcus Beresford make a speciality of cats, and prices among the famous breeds of these animals almost exceed those asked and given for dogs.

ARMY DUELS INVESTIGATED.

Reichstag Considers Bill Forbidding Contests.

Councillor Fined for Making Speech at Funeral.

Unusual Activity Shown by Small-Arms Companies.

[A. P. Correspondence to The Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—The case of Lieut. von Brandenstein of the Second Guard Regiment, who resigned his commission because he was opposed to the principle of dueling, has brought assurance from the Minister of War that hereafter religious scruples will receive "full consideration" by military courts of honor in matters at issue between brother officers.

A bill against dueling is now before a special Reichstag committee, in which a representative of the War Department has made the following report on the unusual case of Von Brandenstein:

"The officer has long been a member of a religious organization which takes the word of the Bible as his guide in all matters, even those affecting the daily life. By reason of his membership, Von Brandenstein's position in the army was peculiar. One day he declared in the presence of his comrades that, in consonance with the principles of his organization, he could under no circumstances issue or accept a challenge to a duel, because that would violate the sixth commandment. The matter came to the knowledge of the commanding officer, who asked Von Brandenstein whether the report was true. Von Brandenstein repeated his assertion.

"The commander called the lieutenant's attention to the fact that he bore a sword, commanded armed men, and, in certain conditions, would be obliged to make use of his weapon without awaiting the order of his superior officer and without time to decide whether the employment of force was in accord with biblical law. Such conduct would betray a lack of decision, and even a short hesitation might be full of consequences in war. No one with such views could remain an officer.

"The officer at first decided to present his resignation. Later he reconsidered and asked that a court of honor pass upon the case. This request was denied, as no attack had been made on his honor. Thereupon he left the army."

LACKED OFFICIAL CONSENT.

For a layman to make an address at the grave of a friend in Prussia without the permission of the police is a punishable offense, according to the decision of a court of appeals just rendered at Cologne. A privy commercial councillor, Heidemann, a manufacturer, had died, and his friend, Commercial Councillor Hagen, made some remarks at the funeral without having taken the precaution to get the consent of the police. Before the lowest court Hagen was acquitted, but the prosecuting attorney declared that the case was "one of fundamental importance" and carried it to the Court of Appeals, which fined Hagen [illegible] cents.

MESOTHORIUM.

Such "astonishing improvement" in cases of cancer treated with mesothorium has been reported to the Bavarian Gynecological Society at Munich that a petition setting forth the necessity for state aid in securing a sufficient supply of mesothorium for general use in cancer treatment has been signed by all the sixty-eight physicians present at the last meeting. The signers included many of the most prominent university instructors and gynecologists of Bavaria.

Prof. Doderlein presented twenty-four women, all of whom had been receiving this treatment. In the case of each one the cancerous cells had completely disappeared. He reported also the case of one woman who was so near death that it was with great misgivings that she was brought to Munich from Nuremberg. She returned some months later, apparently completely cured. Whether cancer will return in any of these cases cannot yet be told—the period of treatment and observation has been too short—but so far as the physicians can judge from examination, the cures are complete.

ARMS COMPANIES BUSY.

A report of the leading German small arms company shows unusual activity just now in the production of military rifles and machine guns. In October, 1912, the company had only 946 men employed making rifles, but in October, 1913, there were [illegible], and the number of employees in the machine-gun department had increased from 104 to 430. Some [illegible] it is facetiously treated [illegible] the activity is undoubtedly due to orders received from Mexico, some to formation of the Ulster army under Sir Edward Carson, but the increase is probably very largely due to the manufacture of arms for the thousands of extra soldiers to be added to the German army under the recent legislation.

SEEK HARDER CLIMBS.

German alpinists, who swarm to Switzerland and the Tyrol every summer, and scorn the services of professional guides even for such summits as the Matterhorn, Mont Blanc and the Jungfrau, are now seeking adventure farther afield. The Hanover section of the German Alpine Club has appropriated [illegible] to build a hut on Mt. Kilimanjaro, the highest peak of the African continent. Kilimanjaro is located on the northeastern boundary of German East Africa, and overtops Mont Blanc by some 4000 feet. The mountain consists of two peaks, the highest of which has an altitude of 19,710 feet. Although in the equatorial region, it has a mantle of perpetual snow and gives rise to a number of large glaciers.

GERMANY'S POPULATION.

Germany will have 80,000,000 inhabitants in 1930, twice its population when the empire was founded in 1871, according to an estimate based on the vital statistics for the empire for 1912. The non-Prussian states have come to the rescue with 2000 more births than in 1911, offsetting the decrease of 3843 in births in Prussia, on which such gloomy assumptions of Germany's stagnation in population were based when the Prussian statistics were published a few weeks ago.

The population of the empire increased by 839,887 through the excess of births over deaths, the surplus being almost 100,000 greater than in 1911.

ARMY DUELS INVESTIGATED.

Reichstag Considers Bill Forbidding Contests.

Councillor Fined for Making Speech at Funeral.

Unusual Activity Shown by Small Arms Companies.

[A. P. Correspondence to The Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—The case of Lieut. von Brandenstein of the Se-ond Guard Regiment, who resigned his ommission because he was opposed o the principle of dueling, has rought assurance from the Minister of War that hereafter religious scruples will receive "full consideration" y military courts of honor in mat-ers at issue between brother officers.

A bill against dueling is now before special Reichstag committee, to hich a representative of the War De-artment has made the following re-ort on the unusual case of Von randenstein:

"The officer has long been a mem-er of a religious organization which akes the word of the Bible as its uide in all matters, even those affect-ng the daily life. By reason of his membership, Von Brandenstein's po-ition in the army was peculiar. One ay he declared in the presence of his omrades that, in consonance with the rinciples of his organization, he ould under no circumstances issue or ccept a challenge to a duel, because hat would violate the sixth command-ent. The matter came to the knowl-dge of the commanding officer, who sked Von Brandenstein whether the eport was true. Von Brandenstein epeated his assertion.

"The commander called the lieu-enant's attention to the fact that he ore a sword, commanded armed men, nd, in certain conditions, would be bliged to make use of his weapon ithout awaiting the order of his su-erior officer and without time to de-ide whether the employment of force as in accord with biblical law. Such onduct would betray a lack of de-ision, and even a short hesitation ight be full of consequences in war. No one with such views could remain n officer.

"The officer at first decided to pre-ent his resignation. Later he recon-idered and asked that a court of onor pass upon the case. This re-uest was denied, as no attack had een made on his honor. Thereupon e left the army."

LACKED OFFICIAL CONSENT.

For a layman to make an address t the grave of a friend in Prussia ithout the permission of the police a punishable offense, according to he decision of a court of appeals just endered at Cologne. A privy com-ercial councillor, Heidemann, a manu-facturer, had died, and his friend, ommercial Councillor Hagen, made ome remarks at the funeral without aving taken the precaution to get the onsent of the police. Before the low-st court Hagen was acquitted, but the rosecuting attorney declared that the ase was "one of fundamental im-ortance" and carried it to the Court f Appeals, which fined Hagen 71 ents.

MESOTHORIUM.

Such "astonishing improvement" in ases of cancer treated with meso-horium has been reported to the Ba-arian Gynecological Society at Mu-ich that a petition setting forth the ecessity for state aid in securing a ufficient supply of mesothorium for eneral use in cancer treatment has een signed by all the sixty-eight hysicians present at the last meeting. he signers included many of the ost prominent university instructors nd gynecologists of Bavaria.

Prof. Doderlein presented twenty-our women, all of whom had been eceiving this treatment. In the case f each one the cancerous cells had ompletely disappeared. He reported lso the case of one woman, who as so near death that it was with reat misgivings that she was brought o Munich from Nuremberg. She eturned some months later, ap-arently completely cured. Whether ancer will return in any of these ases cannot yet be told—the time f treatment and observation has een too short—but so far as the hysicians can judge from examina-on, the cures are complete.

MRS. TRYPHOSA BATCHELLER.

She Will Go to London to Receive the Coveted Decoration of the Order of the League of Mercy From King George.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—"Those who have the privilege of knowing modern royalty," said Mrs. Bates Batcheller, in her attractive sitting-room in a local hostelry, "realize that no class of people in the world work so hard. The old idea that kings and queens sat on their thrones all day and received the salaams of their devoted subjects has passed with other pretty fairy tales. Another impressive fact which I realize more and more every day, is the workers of the world make a class apart and come together for their mutual benefit. When one is genuinely sincere in some useful endeavor, royalty is as approachable as genius, celebrities of any description. I do not subscribe to the sentiment current that the more democratic the nation the more we adore royalty and titles. Those who stand at the head of affairs are always interesting whether they hold titles dating back to prehistoric times or mere accidents in the progress of affairs.

"I find great joy in seeing how gentle and kind the truly great show themselves to be. Now in England for instance, all the hospitals are kept up by private subscription. Such a thing as the State, the municipality or the village, allowing certain part of the taxes to go to keep up the charitable institutions is undreamed. So the burden of seeing that the ailing poor receives the care which civilized nations provide in these modern times falls heavily on royalty and the aristocracy. Those who happen to be in London on June 14 will witness a sight which makes an enduring impression. This date is known as Alexandra Day and throughout all London pretty young girls gowned in white and selected from important social circles, sell flowers on the streets. These flowers are tiny clusters of pink paper made in the various hospitals by the patients. To be without such a decoration when you venture abroad is to proclaim yourself very indifferent to public sentiment. Every vehicle in London and they are many, have a cluster of these pink blossoms, some adorning the cut-glass receptacles of fine motor cars, others tucked in the blinders of the cab horses, the drays and the sturdy propellers of the 'buses. The prices paid for these flowers are as one wills. Some get them for a half-penny and others pay a pound. The League of Mercy of which I am a vice-president and of which I have been suggested for the honor of the decoration, each year gives thousands of pounds for the support of the hospitals. The grand president and lady grand president are usually the Prince and Princess of Wales and the society is under the direct supervision of the King and Queen. The Prince of Wales being very young and unmarried, the grand president is now the Prince of Teck, brother of the Queen, and his wife who was the daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh, is the lady grand president. It is almost incredible how diligently the royal ladies work for this cause. The little Princess Royal is deeply interested in hospital work and she employs herself many hours a day, making fancy articles for bazaars to raise funds. How many young girls in general society in this country trouble about such things? Usually 'father and mother' contribute a check for all sorts of charity and responsibility ends there. This is just one instance out of hundreds which I might cite to show how closely English royalty comes to the work which means the aid of suffering humanity.

"I found it an inspiring incident to know a royal Prince of the house of Bavaria, Ludwig Ferdinand, plays the violin in the great orchestra at the operahouse Prince Regenten. This Prince, like so many of his countrymen, finds his deepest joy in music. He plays divinely and easily won his position in a country-wide competition. He assumes no airs among his humbler-born colleagues, but the salary which he gets as they do, goes to a favorite sanatorium. For, besides being one of the great violinists, Prince Ludwig is a celebrated physician. He took high honors in the University of Munich and his offices are in a poor section of the city and his patients are mostly the poor, without funds to get expert treatment. He has occasionally a rich patient and these fees, like his stipend in the orchestra, go to keep up his sanatorium. The exiled Queen Mother of Portugal was a famous doctor of Lisbon and her departure is bitterly regretted by her poor. She does much good work in London and spends most of her day relieving suffering. The Queen of Belgium is one of the experts on children's diseases and her treatises rank with the authoritative. She gives hours daily to this work of benevolence, always among the patients of free hospitals. I might prolong the list, but this is sufficient to prove what an erroneous idea we generally have of the personages who sit upon a throne. I have met nearly all of those now in power in every capital of Europe and all give their time and talent to useful things. Social pleasures take up less of their day than the middle class American of ample means gives to relaxation and certainly much less than our gilded throng.

"One of the typical experiences I enjoyed last summer while journeying through Europe by motor with the Infante Eulalia of Spain was a visit to the home which Queen Alexandra and Dowager Empress of Russia maintain at Hvidore, near Copenhagen. Here they live simple lives, with no ladies in waiting or any of the trappings of state. They had just as few attendants as compatible with being comfortable and they enjoy long walks together without any company other than their faithful dogs. Here they receive their friends, serve tea without any frills, and even make an occasional excursion into the kitchen to try favorite recipes. I spent several hours here and it was comforting to note the delight these noble women took in their freedom. It conveyed to me the intimation that living on the heights is isolated and can be wearing at times."

Mrs. Tryphosa Batcheller.

Mrs. Bates-Batcheller was educated in Paris and began to study voice culture under the celebrated Marchese and for a time she hesitated between a professional career on the stage and the literary career which she later adopted. Her father, Theodore C. Bates, a rich manufacturer of Worcester, Mass., did not encourage the stage, though the voice promised fame. Mrs. Bates was another determining factor and so perhaps a great voice was lost to the world, at least so competent critics who have heard Mrs. Batcheller sing, constantly assert. But Mrs. Batcheller considers her mission in strengthening the bonds between this country and the mother countries of Europe altogether worthy of her best efforts. She drifted into the present method of writing books in letter form about the wonderful places and the celebrated people of the Old World, as it were, without definite determination. Her warm-hearted response to every appeal for charity led to her intimate acquaintance with royal ladies since, as she says, they give most of their lives to such causes. Some eight years ago she sang for charity in London and met with such success she gave many concerts to aid the hospitals. This attracted the attention of Queen Alexandra and led to her knowing nearly all the British royal family very well. She was equally as amiable in Paris and in Rome and everywhere her concerts attracted the best and the most generous patrons. Living for many years in Italy, her first works, "Glimpses of Italian Court Life" and "Italian Castles and Country Seats" resulted. They were received with commanding attention because of the simplicity of the picture—great people in their famous places yet living as human lives as Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Jones in their small American homes. Fascinating bits of history cling to these old Italian villas and their gardens, to the works of art and to the very names borne by living men and women in the United Kingdom. It made for good will on the broad lines and lent dignity to American concept of the royal. The book on Spain recently published, will, if possible, be even more valuable in international results, or at least so international students aver.

Every nation of Europe is giving of her men and women to make up the American nation and to see the old countries at close view and through the eyes of a loyal American is a powerful incentive for good will and understanding. So clearly does this impress itself on European statesmen that many monarchs have invited Mrs. Batcheller to portray them and have placed every assistance at her disposal. With such unique privileges she has in contemplation a book on Austria-Hungary, with sidelights on Bohemia and those mysterious lands known as Croatia and Bosnia, the borderland between the East and the West, the oldest and most conservative of Catholic countries, Austria and the domain of the Moslem. She visited Denmark, Norway and Sweden with this idea in her mind and was received by all the potentates with distinguished courtesy.

"It would be impossible to imagine," she said, "a country more democratic than Norway. The nobles rarely use their titles and the King and Queen have bowed to the will of the people with easy grace. The King walks about Christiania as familiarly as a member of Congress would here and is much more approachable at all times than an American Cabinet official, still less an American President. He rides in the street cars and enters shops and places of amusement without any ceremonial. It is many a long day since Americans saw their President in a street car and their entrance into theaters is always signalized by an outburst. Democracy seems ruling the north of Europe and it is real democracy, not a tradition of it. I wish Americans would visit Spain in larger numbers. No country is more repaying. With Mr. Batcheller we planned our tour in a motor car though every one told us we could not possibly go through Spain in this way. The Infante, who was our companion throughout the entire journey, was, I think, solemnly warned not to undertake anything so wild. She, however, showed a sporting spirit and I fancy she would not have missed the experience for untold wealth. The glory of the scenery was worth all the fatigue and then our touching hitherto unvisited spots made it all the more romantic. We crossed the Pyrenees by the ancient pass Col de Perthus and we have the honor of being the occupants of the very first automobile to venture this way. Hitherto donkeys or heavy wagons were the mediums if one did not wish to lose time by the involved road covered by the steel rails. It was an adventure worth undertaking and happily our machine proved all we had claimed for her. The reverent piety of the Spanish peasant stands out luminously among the experiences of my trip. We had the pleasure of seeing some of the picturesque street processions, especially those around Christmas and New Year and the Christmas of the Gentiles, January 6. The Bambino Christ Child is carried in the streets with solemn ceremony and all business is suspended to witness the pageant. All the street scenes were so full of life and variety of color. Those who have visited Naples have seen something of this wonderful panorama, only Spain presents it more vividly and in greater coloring."

Mr. and Mrs. Batcheller will rail in the early spring for London to remain throughout the season. It is possible Mrs. Bates, who has been a semi-invalid since the death of her husband a year ago, will join her daughter in the summer.

BUST DEVELOPED
ONE OUNCE A DAY

A New Simple Easy Home Method That Gives Quick And Permanent Success

Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, firmness and exquisite development. Then ask yourself how much you would like to have such a photograph of yourself, showing the glory of womanhood with it's lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of myself to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

I Will Tell You How-FREE

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect an opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny, angular and un-attractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you— a woman—should have the rich pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of whom, perfumes our scared literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that pitiful aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man.

Write to Me Today

I don't care how fallen, or flaccid, or undeveloped your bust now is—I want to tell you of a simple home method—I want to tell you how you can gain perfect development one ounce a day. No physical culture — no massage, foolish baths or paste — no plasters, masks or injurious injections—I want to tell you of an absolutely new method, never before offered or told about—insuring immediate success and permanent beauty.

Send No Money

Just write me a letter—address it to me personally—that's all. I will answer it by return mail—and you can develop your bust one ounce a day—you can be what you want to be. Believe me when I say that you will bless me through years of happiness for pointing the way to you and telling you what I know. Please send your letter today to the following address:

IT has taken us fifteen years to bring the Nemo Self-Reducing principle to perfection. Nemo Corsets are the product of over a hundred patented inventions. Each model represents not ONE but SEVERAL of these original inventions.

These facts prove the ABSURDITY of expecting to find a SUBSTITUTE for Nemo Corsets among the many IMITATIONS which have sprung up in the wake of Nemo success.

Some Nemo features are visible, and can be copied closely enough in appearance to mislead an incautious buyer. Others—the famous Nemo "bridge," for example—are beyond the skill of any imitator.

It has been demonstrated beyond question that all other corsets, no matter how much they may resemble the Nemo in looks, DO NOT and CANNOT render anything even approaching the Nemo Hygienic Service.

"DUPLEX" SELF-REDUCING. The new models, Nos. 327 and 328, are called "duplex," because they render a double service—absolute control in the back, and perfect support in the front.

Extending far below the back steels are bands of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing, detached from corset-body at lacing ends (Fig. 1). This permits close lacing of lower part of the bands, to make them curve in under the body (Fig. 2), without interfering with the lacing of the corset proper.

The effect is shown in the picture—a perfect, smooth incurve, which prevents corset-edge or bones from showing through, keeps corset from sliding up, and insures ease when you're seated. ABSOLUTELY NEW! (C-3)

The improved Self-Reducing front, with its curved steels and flattening straps, gives excellent abdominal support and reduces both the abdomen and the upper limbs.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN.

BY HAROLD MACGRATH.

This is the opening installment of a serial story by Harold MacGrath, entitled "The Adventures of Kathlyn." One chapter will be printed in this paper each week for twenty-six weeks.

Every two weeks in leading moving picture theaters in this city a photoplay based on this novel will be presented. Each film will cover two chapters of the story. The photographs which will be used as illustrations in this paper are still pictures of scenes from the play.

CHAPTER I.

[Copyright, 1914, by Harold MacGrath.]

UNDER a canopied platform stood a young girl, modeling in clay. The glare of the California sunshine, filtering through the canvas, became mellowed, warm, and golden. Above the girl's head—yellow like the stalk of wheat—there hovered a kind of aureola, as if there had risen above it a haze of impalpable gold dust.

A poet I know might have cried out that here ended his quest of the Golden Girl. Straight she stood at this moment, lovely of face, rounded of form, with an indescribable suggestion of latent physical power or magnetism. On her temples there were little daubs of clay, caused doubtless by impatient fingers sweeping back occasional wind-blown locks of hair. There was even a daub on the side of her handsome, sensitive nose.

Her hand, still filled with clay, dropped to her side, and a tableau endured for a minute or two, suggesting a remote period, a Persian idyl, mayhap. With a smile on her lips she stared at the living model. The chatoyant eyes of the leopard stared back, a flicker of restlessness in their brilliant yellow deeps. The tip of the tail twitched.

"You beautiful thing!" she said.

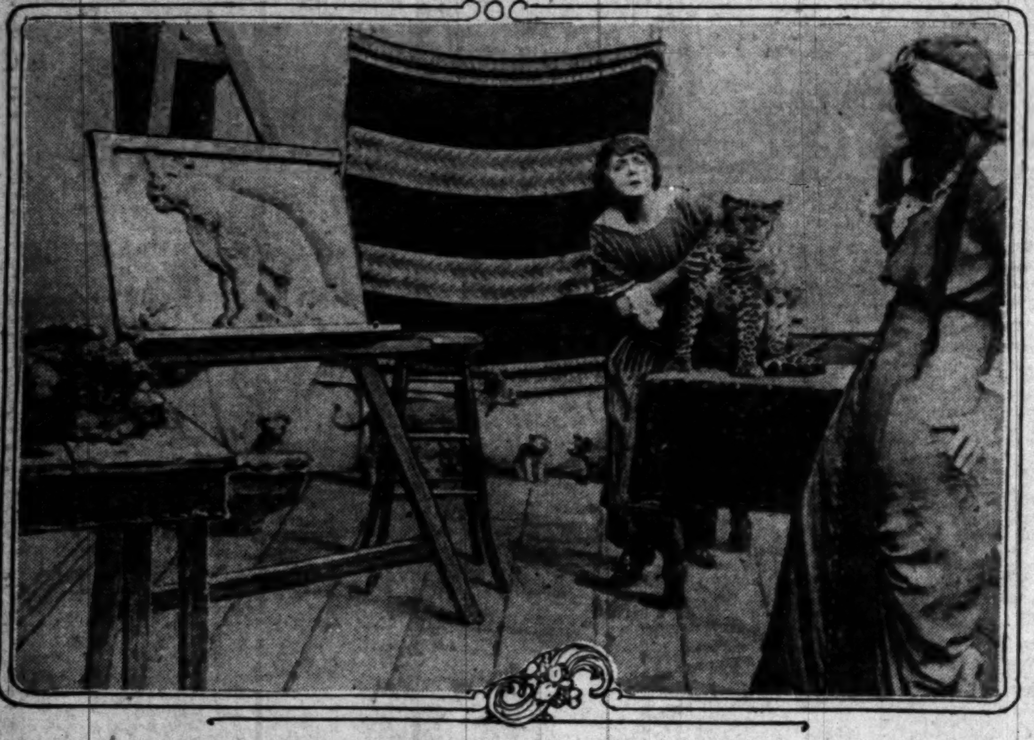
She began kneading the clay again, and with deft fingers added bits here and there to the creature which had grown up under her strong, supple fingers.

"Kathlyn! Oh, Kit!"

The sculptress paused, the pucker left her brow, and she turned, her face beaming, for her sister Winnie was the apple of her eye, and she brooded over her like the mother would have done had the mother lived. For Winnie, dark as Kathlyn was light, was as careless and aimless as thistledown in the wind.

A collie leaped upon the platform and began pawing Kathlyn, and shortly after the younger sister followed. Neither of the girls noted the stiffening mustaches of the leopard. The animal rose, and his nostrils palpitated. He hated the dog with a hatred not unmixed with fear. Treachery is in the marrow of all cats. To breed them in captivity does not matter. Sooner or later they will strike. Never before had the leopard been so close to his enemy, free of the leash.

"Kit, it is just wonderful. However can you do it? Some day we'll make dad take us to Paris, where you can exhibit them."



Kathlyn's sister, Winnie,

Becomes frightened by a leopard in Kathlyn's studio in California.

A snarl from the leopard, answered by a growl from the collie, brought Kathlyn's head about. The cat leaped, but toward Winnie, not the collie. With a cry of terror Winnie turned and ran in the direction of the bungalow. Kathlyn, seizing the leash, followed like the wind, hampered though she was by the apron. The cat loped after the fleeing girl, gaining at each bound. The yelping of the collie brought forth from various points low rumbling sounds, which presently developed into roars.

Winnie turned sharply around the corner of the bungalow toward the empty animal cages, to attract her father and at the same time rouse some of the keepers. Seeing the door of an empty cage open, and that it was approached by a board runway, she flew to it, entered, and slammed the door and held it. The cat, now hot with the lust to kill, threw herself against the bars, snarling and spitting.

Kathlyn called out to him sharply, and fearlessly approached him. She began talking in a monotone. His ears went flat against his head, but he submitted to her touch because invariably it soothed him, and because he sensed some undefinable power whenever his gaze met hers. She snapped the leash on his collar just as her father came running up pale and disturbed. He ran to the door and opened it.

"Winnie, you poor little kitten," he said, taking her in his arms, "how many times have I told you never to take that dog about when Kit's leopard is off the leash?"

"I didn't think," she sobbed.

"No. Kit here and I must always do your thinking for you. Ahmed!"

"Yes, sahib," answered the head keeper.

"See if you can stop that racket over there. Sadie may lose her litter if it keeps up."

The lean, brown Mohammedan trotted away in obedience to his orders. He knew how to stop captive lions from roaring. He knew how to send terror to their hearts. As he ran he began to hiss softly.

Col. Hare, with his arm about Winnie, walked toward the bungalow.

"Lock your pet up, Kit," he called over his shoulder, "and come in to tea."

Kathlyn spoke soothingly to the leopard, scratched his head behind the ears, and shortly a low, satisfied rumble stirred his throat, and his tail no longer slashed about. She led him to his own cage, never ceasing to talk, locked the door, then turned and walked thoughtfully toward the bungalow.

She was wondering what this gift was that put awe into the eyes of the native keepers on her father's wild animal farm and temporary peace in the hearts of the savage beasts. She realized that she possessed it, but it was beyond analysis. Often some wild-eyed keeper would burst in upon her. Some newly captive lion or tiger was killing itself from mere passion, and wouldn't the memsahib come at once and talk to it? There was a kind of pity in her heart for these poor wild things, and perhaps they perceived this pity, which was fearless.

"She gets a little from me, I suppose," Col. Hare had once answered to a query, "for I've always had a way with four-footed things. But I think Ahmed is right. Kathlyn is heaven-born. I've seen the night when Brocken would be tame beside the pandemonium roundabout. Yet half an hour after Kit starts the rounds everything quiets down. The gods are in it."

The living-room of the bungalow was large and comfortable. The walls were adorned with the heads of wild beasts and their great furry hides shared honors with the Persian rugs on the floor. Hare was a man who would pack up at a moment's notice and go to the far ends of the world to find a perfect black panther, a cheetah with a litter, or a great horned rhinoceros. He was tall and broad and amazingly active, for all that his hair and mustache were almost white. For thirty years or more he had gone about the hazardous enterprise of supplying zoological gardens and circuses with wild beasts. He was known from Hamburg to Singapore, from Mombassa to Rio Janeiro. The Numidian lion, the Rajput tiger, and the Malayan panther had cause to fear Hare Sahib. He was even now preparing to return to Ceylon for an elephant hunt.

The two daughters went over to the tea tabaret, where a matronly maid was busy with the service. The fragrant odor of tea permeated the room. Hare paused at his desk. Lines suddenly appeared on his bronzed face. He gazed for a space at the calendar. The day was the 15th of July. Should he go back there, or should he give up the expedition? He might never return. India and the border countries! What a land, full of beauty and romance and terror and squalor, at once barbaric and civilized. He loved it and hated it, and sometimes feared it, he who had faced on foot many a wounded tiger.

He shrugged, reached into the desk for a box of Jaipur grass enamel and took from it a medal attached to a ribbon. The golden disk was encrusted with uncut rubies and emeralds.

"Girls," he called. "Come here a moment. Martha, that will be all," with a nod toward the door. "I never showed you this before."

"Goodness gracious," cried Winnie, reaching out her hand.

"Why, it looks like a decoration, father," said Kathlyn. "What lovely stones! It would make a beautiful pendant."

"Vanity, vanity, all is vanity," said the colonel, smiling down into their charming faces. "Do you love your old dad?"

"Love you!" they exclaimed in unison, indignantly, too, since the question was an imputation of the fact.

"Would you be lonesome if I took the Big Trek?" whimsically.

"Father!"

"Dad!"

They pressed about him, as vines about an oak.

"Hang it, I swear that this shall be the last hunt. I'm rich. We'll get rid of all these brutes and spend the rest of the years seeing the show places. I'm a bit tired myself of jungle fodder. We'll go to Paris, and Berlin, and Rome, and Vienna. And you, Kit, shall go and tell Rodin that you've inherited the spirit of Gerome. And you, Winnie, shall make a stab at grand opera."

Winnie gurgled her delight, but her sister searched her father's eyes. She did not quite like the way he said those words. His voice lacked its usual heartiness and spontaneity.

"Where did you get this medal, father?" she asked.

"That's what I started out to tell you."

"Were you afraid we might wish to wear it or have it made over?" laughed Winnie, who never went below the surface of things.

"No. The truth is, I had almost forgotten it. But the preparations for India recalled it to mind. It represents a royal title conferred on me by the King of Allaha. You have never been to India, Kit. Allaha is the name we hunters give that border kingdom. Some day England will gobble it up; only waiting for a good excuse."

"What big thing did you do?" demanded Kathlyn, her eyes still filled with scrutiny.

"What makes you think it was big?" jestingly.

"Because," she answered seriously, "you never do anything but big things. As the lion is among beasts, you are among men."

"Good lord!" The colonel reached embarrassedly for his pipe, lit it, puffed a few minutes, then laid down the pipe. "India is full of strange tongues and strange kingdoms and principalities. Most of them are dominated by the British raj, some are only protected, while others do about as they please. This state"—touching the order—"does about as it did since the days of the first white rover who touched the shores of Hind. It is small, but that signifies nothing; for you can brew a mighty poison in a small pot. Well, I happened to save the old king's life."

"I knew it would be something like that," said Kathlyn. "Go on. Tell it all."

The colonel had recourse to his pipe again. He smoked on till the coal was dead. The girls waited patiently. They knew that his silence meant that he was only marshaling the events in their chronological order.

"The king was a kindly old chap, simple, yet shrewd, and with that slumbrous oriental way of accomplishing his ends, despite all obstacles. Underneath this apparent simplicity I discovered a grim sardonic humor. Trust the oriental for always having that packed away under his bewildering diplomacy. He was all alone in the world. He was one of those rare eastern potentates who wasn't hampered by parasitical relatives. By George, the old boy could have given his kingdom, lock, stock, and barrel, to the British government and no one could say him nay. There was a good deal of rumor the last time I was there that when he died England would step in actually. The old boy gave me leave to come and go as I pleased, to hunt where and how I would. I had a mighty fine collection. There are tigers and leopards and bears and fat old pythons, forty feet long. Of course, it isn't the tiger country that Central India is, but the brutes you find are bigger. I have about sixty beasts there now, and that's mainly why I'm going back. Want to clean it up and ship 'em to Hamburg, where I've a large standing order. I'm going first to Ceylon, for some elephants."

The colonel knocked the ash from his pipe.

"The old boy used to do some trapping himself, and whenever he'd catch a fine specimen he'd turn it over to me. He had a hunting lodge not far from my quarters. One day Ahmed came to me with a message saying that the king commanded my presence at the lodge, where his slaves had trapped a fine leopard. Yes, my dears, slaves. There is even a slave mart at the capital this day. A barbaric fairy land, with its good genii and its bad djinns."

"The Arabian Nights," murmured Winnie, snuggling close to Kathlyn.

"The oriental loves pomp," went on the colonel. "He can't give you a chupatti—"

"What's that?" asked Winnie.

"Something like hardtack. Well, he can't give you that without ceremonial. When I arrived at the lodge with Ahmed the old boy—he had the complexion of a prima donna—the old boy sat on his portable throne, glittering with orders. Standing beside him was a chap we called Umballa. He had been a street rat. A bit of impudence had caught the king's fancy and he brought up the boy, clothed, fed him, and sent him away down to Umballa to school. When the boy returned he talked Umballa morning, noon and night, till the soldiers began to call him that, and from them it passed on to the natives, all of whom disliked the upstart. Hanged if I can recall his real name. He was ugly and handsome at the same time; suave, patient, courteous; yet somehow or other I sensed the real man below—the Tartar blood. I took a dislike to him, first off. It's the animal sense. You've got it, Kit. Behind the king sat the Council of Three—three wise old ducks I wouldn't trust with an old umbrella."

Winnie laughed.

"While we were salaaming and genuflecting and using grandiloquent phrases the bally leopard got loose, somehow. Maybe some one let him loose; I don't know. Anyhow, he made for the king, who was too thunder-struck to dodge. The rest of 'em took to their heels, you may lay odds on that. Now, I had an honest liking for the king. Seeing the brute make for him, I dashed forward. You see, at ceremonials you're not permitted to carry arms. It had to be with my hands. The leopard knocked the old boy flat and began to maul him. I kicked the brute in the face, swept the king's turban off his head and flung it about the head of the leopard. Somehow or other I got him down. Some of the frightened natives came up, and with the help of Ahmed we got the brute tied up securely. When the king came around he silently shook hands with me and smiled peculiarly at Umballa, who now came running up."

"And that's how you got those poor hands!" exclaimed Kathlyn, kissing the scars which stood out white against the tan.

"That's how," raising the hands and putting them on Kathlyn's head in a kind of benediction.

"Is that all?" asked Winnie, breathlessly.

"Isn't that enough?" he retorted. "Well, what is it, Martha? Dinner? Well, if I haven't cheated you girls out of your tea!"

"Tea!" sniffed Winnie disdainfully. "Do you know, dad, you're awfully mean to Kit and me. If you'd take the trouble you could be more interesting than any book I ever read."

"He doesn't believe his stories would interest vain young ladies," said Kathlyn, gravely.

Her father eyed her sharply. Of what was she thinking? In those calm, unwavering eyes of hers he saw a question, and he feared in his soul she might voice it. He could evade the questions of the volatile Winnie, but there was no getting by Kathlyn with evasions. Frowning, he replaced the order in the box, which he put away in a drawer. It was all arrant nonsense, anyhow; nothing could possibly happen; if there did, he would feel certain that he no longer dwelt in a real workaday world. The idle whim of a sardonic old man; nothing more than that.

"Father, is the King dead?"

"Dead! What makes you ask that, Kit?"

"The past tense; you said he was, not is."

"Yes, he's dead, and the news came this morning. Hence, the yarn."

"Will there be any danger in returning?"

"My girl, whenever I pack my luggage there is danger. A cartridge may stick; a man may stumble; a man you rely on may fail you. As for that, there's always danger. It's the penalty of being alive."

On the way to the dining-room Kathlyn thought deeply. Why had her father asked them if they loved him? Why did he speak of the Big Trek? There was something more than this glittering medal, something more than this simple tale of bravery. What? Well, if he declined to take her into his confidence he must have good reason.

After dinner that night the colonel went the rounds, as was his habit nightly. By and by he returned to the bungalow, but did not enter. He filled his cutty and walked to and fro in the moonlight, with his head bent and his hands clasped behind his back. There was a restlessness in his stride not unlike that of the captive beasts in the cages near-by. Occasionally he paused at the clink clink of the elephant irons or at the "whuff" as the uneasy pachyderm poured dust on his head.

Bah! It was madness. A parchment in Hindustan, given jestingly or ironically by a humorous old chap in orders and white linen and rhinoceros sandals. . . . A throne! Pshaw! It was bally nonsense. As if a white man could rule over a brown one by the choice of the latter! And yet, that man Umballa's face, when he had shown the King the portraits of his two lovely daughters! He would send Ahmed. Ahmed knew the business as well as he did. He would send his abdication to the council, giving them the right to choose his successor. He himself would remain home with the girls. Then he gazed up at the moon and smiled grimly.

"Hukum hai!" he murmured in Hindustan. "It is the orders. I've simply got to go. When I recall those rubies and emeralds and pearls. . . . Well, it's not cupidity for myself. It's for the girls. Besides, there's the call, the adventure. I've simply got to go. I can't escape it. I must be always on the go . . . since she died."

A few days later he stood again before the desk in the living-room. He was dressed for travel. He sat down and penned a note. From the box which contained the order he extracted a large envelope, heavily sealed. This he balanced in his hand for a moment, frowned, laughed and swore softly. He would abdicate, but at a snug profit. Why not? . . . He was an old fool. Into a still larger envelope he put the sealed envelope and his own note, then wrote upon it. He was blotting it as his daughters entered.

"Come here my pretty cubs." He held out the envelope. "I want you, Kit, to open this on December 31, at midnight. Girls like mysteries, and if you opened it any time but midnight it wouldn't be mysterious. Indeed, I shall probably have you both on the arms of my chair when you open it."

"Is it about the medal?" demanded Winnie.

"By George, Kit, the child is beginning to reason out things," he jested.

Winnie laughed, and so did Kathlyn, but she did so because occultly she felt that her father expected her to laugh. She was positively uncanny sometimes in her perspicacity.

"On December 31, at midnight," she repeated. "All right, father. You must write to us at least once every fortnight."

"I'll cable from Singapore, from Ceylon and write a long letter from Allaha. Come on. We must be off. Ahmed is waiting."

Some hours later the two girls saw the Pacific Mail steamer move with cold and insolent majesty out toward the Golden Gate. Kathlyn proved rather uncommunicative on the way home. December 31 kept running through her mind. It held a portent of evil. She knew something of the orient, though she had never visited India. Had her father made an implacable enemy? Was he going into some unknown, unseen danger? December 31, at midnight. Could she hold her curiosity in check that long?

Many of the days that followed dragged, many flew—the first for Kathlyn, the last for Winnie, who now had a beau, a young newspaper man from San Francisco. He came out regularly every Saturday and returned at night. Winnie became, if anything, more flighty than ever. Her father never had young men about. The men he generally gathered round his board were old hunters or sailors. Kathlyn watched this budding romance amusedly. The young man was very nice. But her thoughts were always and eternally with her father.

During the last week in December there arrived at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco an East Indian, tall, well formed, rather handsome. Except for his brown turban he would have passed unnoticed. For Hindus and Japanese and Chinaman and whatnots from the southern seas were every-day affairs. The brown turban, however, and an enormous emerald on one of his fingers, produced an effect quite gratifying to him. Vanity in the oriental is never conspicuous for its absence. The reporters gave him scant attention, though, for this was a time when the Gaekwar of Baroda was unknown.

The stranger, after two or three days of idling, casually asked the way to the wild animal farm of his old friend, Col. Hare. It was easy enough to find. At the village inn he was treated with tolerant contempt. These brown fellows were forever coming and going, to and fro, from the colonel's celebrated farm.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon of the 31st day of December, this East Indian peered cautiously into the French window of the Hare bungalow. The picture he saw there sent a thrill into his heart. She was as fair and beautiful as an houri of Sa'adi. She sat at a desk, holding a long, white envelope in her hand. By and by she put it away, and he was particular to note the drawer in which she placed it. That the dark-haired girl at the tea tabaret was equally charming did not stir the watcher. Dark-haired women were plentiful in his native land. Yonder was the girl of the photograph, the likeness of which had fired his heart for many a day. With the patience of the oriental he stood in the shadow and waited. Sooner or later they would leave the room, and sooner or later, with the deftness of his breed, he would enter. The leopard he had heard about was nowhere to be seen.

"Winnie," said Kathlyn, "I dread it."

Winnie set down the tea cup, her eyes brimming.

"What can it all mean? Not a line from father since Colombo, five months gone."

"Do you think ——"

"No, no!" replied Kathlyn, hastily. "Father sometimes forgets. He may be hunting miles from telegraph wires and railroads; it is only that he should forget us so long. Who knows? He may have dropped down into Borneo. He wanted some pythons, so I heard him say."

The elder sister did not care to instill into the heart of her charge the fear which was in her own.

"Who knows but there may be good news in the envelope? Dad's always doing something like that. New Year's!"

The collie, released from the kitchen, came bounding in. In his exuberance he knocked over a cloisonne vase. Both girls were glad to welcome this diversion. They rose simultaneously and gave chase. The dog headed for the outdoor studio, where they caught him and made believe they were punishing him.

Quietly the watcher entered through the window, alert and tense. He flew to the desk, found the envelope, steamed it open at the kettle, extracted the sealed envelope and Col. Hare's note. He smiled as he read the latter and changed his plans completely. He would not play messenger; he would use a lure, instead. With his ear trained for sounds, he wrote and substituted a note. This houri of Sa'adi would not pause to note the difference in writing; the vitalness of the subject would enchain her thoughts. It was all accomplished in the space of a few minutes. Smiling, he passed out into the fast settling twilight.

They were shipping a lion to San Francisco, and the roaring and confusion were all very satisfactory to the trespasser.

Midnight. From afar came the mellow notes of the bells in the ancient Spanish mission. The old year was dead, the new year was born, carrying with it the unchanging sound of happiness and misery, or promises made and promises broken, of good and evil.

"The packet!" cried Winnie.

Kathlyn recognized in that call that Winnie was only a child. All the responsibility lay upon her shoulders. She ripped the cover from the packet and read the note.

"Kathlyn: If not heard from I'm held captive in Allaha. Sealed document can save me. Bring it yourself to Allaha by first steamer. FATHER."

"I knew it," said Kathlyn, calmly. The fear in her heart had, as the brown man had anticipated, blinded her to the fact that this was not her father's characteristic blunt scrawl.

"Oh, Kit, Kit!"

"Hush, Winnie! I must go, and go alone. Where's the evening paper? Ah, there it is. Let me see what boat leaves San Francisco tomorrow. The Empress of India, 6 a.m. I must make it. Now, you're your father's daughter, too, Winnie. You must stay behind and be brave and wait. I shall come back. I shall find father, if I have to rouse all India. Now, to pack."

When they arrived at the station the passenger train had just drawn out. For a while Kathlyn felt beaten. She would be compelled to wait another week. It was disheartening.

"Why not try the freight, then?" cried Winnie.

"You little angel! I never thought of that!"

But the crew would not hear of it. It was absolutely against the company's rules. Kathlyn could have cried.

"It isn't money, miss; it's the rules," said the conductor, kindly. "I can't do it."

Kathlyn turned in despair toward the station. It was then she saw the boxed lion on the platform. She returned to the conductor of the freight.

"Why isn't that lion shipped?"

"We can't carry a lion without an attendant, Miss. You ought to know that."

"Very well," replied Kathlyn. She smiled at the conductor confidently. "I'll travel as the lion's attendant. You certainly cannot object to that."

"I guess you've got me," admitted the conductor. "But where the dickens will we put the cat? Every car is closed and locked, and there is not an empty."

"You can easily get the lion in the caboose. I'll see that he doesn't bother anyone."

"Lions in the caboose is a new one on me. Well, you know your dad's business better than I do. Look alive, boys, and get that angora aboard. This is Miss Hare herself, and she'll take charge."

"Kit, Kit!"

"Winnie!"

"Oh, I'll be brave. I've just got to be. But I've never been left alone before."

The two girls embraced, and Winnie went sobbing back to the maid who waited on the platform.

What happened in that particular caboose has long since been newspaper history. The crew will go on telling it till it becomes as fabulous as one of Sindbad's yarns. How the lion escaped, how the fearless young woman captured it alone, unaided, may be found in the files of all metropolitan newspapers. Of the brown man who was found hiding in the coat closet of the caboose nothing was said. But the sight of him dismayed Kathlyn as no lion could have done. Any dark-skinned person was now a subtle menace. And when, later, she saw him peering into the porthole of her stateroom, dismay became terror.

Who was this man?

CHURCHMEN SCIENTISTS.

Sir William Crooks, discoverer of thallium, recently celebrated his eighty-first birthday. Notwithstanding his age he is among the young men of the time. He is still actively engaged in important experimental work. His scientific research and important discoveries long before made him one of the world's most famous men.

President Schurman of Cornell University has accepted the Stafford Little Lectureship on public affairs at Princeton for the academic year 1913-1914. The lectures will be late in March or in April, and on The Balkan Situation, of which Dr. Schurman has a first-hand knowledge, having been minister to Greece.

Celestin Dembion, member of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, and professor of literature at Brussels University, is announced for an American tour to begin next June on which he will lecture in support of his theory that the Shakespearean plays were actually written by Roger Manners, the fifth earl of Rutland.

Prof. John M. Coulter of Chicago University has declared in a lecture that eugenics is practically a failure, saying: "Voluntary selection plays a more important part in the [illegible] of heredity than anything eugenics has dreamed of." He asserted that a consonance of sympathies takes precedence in importance over other acknowledged abilities and determining factors."

Rev. Lyman Brice wants to be Trenton's overseer of the poor and has offered if appointed to devote $700 of his yearly emolument to charity.

Grand Junction, Colo., may have a minister for its chief of police. Friends of the Rev. J. A. Becher, former pastor of the Congregational Church, are urging Mayor-elect Cherrington to give him the appointment.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Although 87 years of age, [illegible] Shaw of Otisfield, Me., has cut and split sixteen cords of wood this fall.

Despite the fact that she has celebrated her one hundred and third birthday Mrs. Polly C. Johnson of Somerville, Mass., claims that her sight is strong enough for her to see that the fashions of the present day are "absolutely barbarous and a disgrace to civilization."

Mrs. Thomas Bennett of Brooklyn celebrated her one hundred and second birthday last week in the house built by her husband fifty years ago.

England's oldest woman, Mrs. Rebecca Clarke, aged 106, of Wood Green, near London, presided, last week, at the wedding breakfast of her baby son Harry, aged 67. Cold weather prevented her from attending the wedding. At the breakfast she proposed the health of the newly married couple, ate the first slice of wedding cake, and recited a few verses of her own composition about her pet dog that she held in her arms.

An admonition not to worry was the pith of the advice given by Joseph Bradbury to his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who gathered at South Orange, N. J., for the celebration of his ninety-third birthday anniversary. "Do not worry over things," he said, "so that you will not be nervous and you will sleep well. If you sleep well you will be happy, and if you are happy you will live long."

MEN AND EVENTS.

Judge Mahoney of Chicago on Christmas morning released twelve "honor prisoners" on their own recognizance in the sunrise court of the South Clark Police Station. "Now boys, let's have some breakfast," he said, and led the way to a restaurant across the street, where they all sat down at the same moment for fear one might be in bad luck.

William Maverick, a rancher of San Antonio, Tex., distributed $1,500,000 among his five children on Christmas Day.

J. W. Ostrander, who has just died at Knoxville, Tenn., had been an Odd Fellow sixty-seven years. He served as Grand Master of Wisconsin before removing to Tennessee. He was Tennessee's oldest Odd Fellow both in point of lodge service and age.

James Fogg of Bridgton, Me., was in the Civil War, 1861 to 1865; his father, John W. Fogg, was in the War of 1812, and his grandfather, Joseph Fogg, who came from England in 1777, was in the Revolution. James Fogg is 78 years old and active.

Justice of the Peace B. F. [illegible]berg of Huntingdon, Pa., has made the record for killing noxious animals. During the past two years he has been awarded, $1358 by the state for scalps of the following animals: Seven wildcats, twenty-six minks, [illegible] foxes and 220 weasels.

The "best sellers" for October in Lo[illegible] Angeles, according to the Bookma[illegible] were: "Gold," "The Woman Tho[illegible] Gavest Me," "The Story of Waitsti[illegible] Baxter," "The Inside of the Cup," "A Fool and His Money," and "John Bar[illegible] leycorn," ranking in popularity in th[illegible] order given.

The largest sales for non-fiction during that time in this city were "Western Bird Guide," "Crowds," "Preface to Politics," and "Autobiography of George Dewey."

Figures are not yet at hand to determine which has been the best seller for the year, but in all probability it lies between "V. V.'s Eyes" and "The Inside of the Cup." Let another decade pass, or perhaps less time, and the amazement of multitudes will be how either of these books found popularity. The salable qualities of "The Inside of the Cup" has been chiefly due to the discussion given it by preachers, whom it attacks.

Why and wherefore the prejudice that publishers have against including photographs of the authors in books is beyond understanding. It is also interesting to have a little biographical sketch of the author, but at present neither the photographs nor the sketches are fashionable. And yet the publishers are always pleased to have such pictures and notices published in magazines or newspapers—nor does the modesty of authors, which is not less than that of actors, feel offended when they are dragged out into the calcium of publicity.

When Lord Macaulay undertook to make a Marsyas out of Robert Montgomery the photograph at the front of the alleged poems received the first lash. Macaulay said that it presented Mr. Montgomery trying very hard to look like a poet. We fancy that it is for fear of such unkind cuts that photographs of authors in their own books has fallen into bad taste.

Still when we read what a person has written we like to know what the person looks like, as well as to have an inkling into his history. How much easier it is, for instance, to understand Bernard Shaw after looking upon the likeness of his face!

Everybody's magazine that didn't revolt from that form of tainted fiction which was so prevalent a few years ago under the form of "muckraking!"

Not having read all of the books of the year we are in no position to say which is the best; but of all those that we have read, none, in our estimation, equals "The Gathering Storm," by an anonymous author, published by the John Lane Company, which presents an unvarnished study of eco-

The situation in American literature today is such that we would not wish the acquaintance of the majority of our novelists." By that standard think how Dickens' characters would fare? And as Harper's Weekly asks: "Would you like to shake hands with Bill Sykes? . . . Could you tolerate Iago or Lady Macbeth? It would never do to invite either of those persons to

The Austin Publishing Company of [illegible] is handling "Letters From [illegible]," alleged to be a personal narrative "after death." Several years ago [illegible] much discussed, the authenticity of the dictation from the spirit world being vouched for by W. T. Stead, with whom spiritualists have since claimed to communicate. It is not nearly so interesting nor (dare we say it?) plausible as Swedenborg's "Heaven and Hell."

Conjecturing, fancying and affirming what is just across the grave has been the chief occupation of philosophers and mystics, yet we have no more dependable material as when Thales of Militus speculated on the "hereafter" 2500 years ago.

Everybody's Magazine has taken up the cudgel against what it chooses to call "tainted fiction," and says: "Here is a new name for an old disease. It is the same old thing, indecent fiction. . . . Indecent fiction has been with us before, but it couldn't get into your home without your knowing it. Tainted fiction that is being printed today is not labelled. It may come within the covers of a magazine you have trusted for years." Was it—or was it? Memory is a tricky thing! Everybody's was one that didn't revolt from that form of tainted fiction which was so prevalent a few years ago under the form of "muckraking?"

Having read all of the books of the year we are in no position to say which is the best; but of all those that we have read, none, in our estimation, equals "The Gathering Storm," by an anonymous author, published by the John Lane Company, which presents an unvarnished study of eco-

FASCINATING HISTORY.

BRIGHAM YOUNG AND HIS MORMON EMPIRE. Frank J. Cannon and George L. Knapp. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

TWO conspicuous features of "Brigham Young and His Mormon Empire" that stand out in bold relief are the obvious effort at fairness made by the authors and the excellent style with which the story is told. There is, perhaps, no man not on the inner councils of the church who knows more about the Mormons than former United States Senator Frank J. Cannon. He was born into the faith; his family stood high in the church, but he became an "apostate." George L. Knapp, author of one or two novels, is more favorably known to those familiar with his work as an essayist than because of his work in fiction.

This book takes up the history of the Mormons from the time of Joseph Smith's revelations, sketches Brigham Young's parents and his early life, closely follows the struggle of the new sect amid the frontiersmen of Missouri and Illinois, which ends in the death of Smith and elevation of Brigham Young to the presidency of the church, gives a graphic and detailed description of the migration across the plains, the settlement and prosperity in Utah and the long-drawn fight against the authority of the Federal government.

The history is told with a keenness of observation that fascinates; it bristles with satire but is devoid of animus; facts are weighed with careful judgment, and while the Mormons will not be willing to adopt it as their official history, it gives them far more credit and speaks in more considerate terms of their early prosecutions than previous gentile histories of which we know.

The most startling assertion made is that polygamy is now practiced and never has been abolished. Say the authors: "Polygamy made the Mormon church a thing apart socially, as its despotic prophet set it apart in religious and political matters. It is perhaps one cause of the comparative failure of the church as a proselyting agency. It has brought manifold suffering on the Saints, and it was the direct cause of the prophet's death. But it has never been abandoned. At times it has been repressed; at times it has been held in abeyance; and even a revelation was published recalling God's mistake in giving this covenant to a sinful world—but the covenant goes on."

It is also asserted that the present head of the church has "at least five known plural wives and forty-three children—twelve of whom were born to him after he had pledged his honor to abstain from plural marriage living."

The authors also affirm that the famous oath of "blood vengeance" against the United States was taken by 1500 exiles leaving Nauvoo and has been perpetuated. They declare the oath, in substance, to be as follows:

"You do solemnly swear, in the presence of Almighty God, His holy angels, and these witnesses, that you will avenge the blood of Joseph Smith upon this nation, and so teach your children; and that you will from this day henceforth begin and carry our hostility against this nation, and keep the same a profound secret, now and ever. So help you God!"

The authors affirm that while "blood atonement" was practiced by the Mormons that there were no bands, as is commonly reported, known as "Danites," "Avenging Angels" or "Blood Atoners." It is stated that the organization of Danites may have existed for a time before the migration, but as a society it was not recognized in Utah, where blood atonement was first taught.

Brigham Young is called "the business manager of Mormonism." The authors are generous in complimenting his forceful, capable character. At every emergency, even before the death of the prophet, Young came to the front with sane counsel and masterful energy. It was he who rescued and guided the Saints after the crushing defeat in Missouri; it was he who organized and superintended the emigration under fearful hradships from Illinois to Utah; it was he who seized upon and compelled his followers to develop the resources of their new country; it was he who supervised the building of fences, the planting of crops, the paying of tithes, the sealing of wives and the building of temples; it was he who opposed the encroachments of Federal authority and fought, cajoled, outwitted and hoodwinked the representatives of the government. As a summary of his opposition, it is said: "He matched his wits against the might of the United States government, and did not come off second best. He yielded in outward seeming to Federal power; but in reality he was emperor of his little realm to the hour of his death, and his subjects never doubted his supremacy. He drove Federal appointees in disgrace from his kingdom, and took their positions for himself and his favorites. No matter how overwhelming the power with which he was dealing, Young was never a suppliant. . . . He never pleaded for mercy nor owned himself in need of mercy. He met chastisement with fresh provocation."

The authors lay the Mountain Meadow massacre at the door of the Mormons, saying that Young tried to prevent it too late, but refused to make any attempt to punish the instigators and murderers afterwards.

During his lifetime Young had but one "revelation"—that was when the emigrants were distressed by the hardships of the migration. At all other times he simply said that a thing must be done and did not bother, as was Joseph Smith's wont, to insist that the Lord had spoken on the matter. That fact is taken as another instance to reveal the supreme self-assurance of the man, who was big enough to rule his people without having to call on divine authority to back him up.

The authors state that the actual number of his wives was never known, and doubt if Brigham himself knew, in so much as he was constantly being "sealed" to women, many of whom he had never seen. That he was a kind father and husband none deny. The authors also call attention to the surprising difference with which Brigham treated the aged and poverty-stricken, and the manner in which they are cared for today. It is said that none were cast into the poorhouse or suffered from destitution while he lived, but that no such consideration is shown them today—even though they may have paid tithes for a generation or more.

FOUNTAIN OF KNOWLEDGE.

THE LIBRARY OF ORIGINAL RESEARCH, published by the University Research Extension Company, Milwaukee, Wis.

HISTORY by its contemporaries is presented in "The Library of Original Research," and in ten volumes (typographically attractive) the editors have assembled chronicles from the dawn of legends right down the economic agitations of this century.

The first volume is devoted to "The Ancient World" and deals with the records of civilizations of Egypt, Babylon and Chaldea, furnishes forth descriptions from the archives of stones. The second volume is devoted to "The Greek World;" the third to "The Roman World;" the fourth volume to the "Early Medieval Age;" the fifth volume to "Ninth to the Sixteenth Century;" the sixth to "The Advance in Knowledge from 1650 to 1800;" the seventh volume to the "Era of Revolutions" (dealing with the revolutions in France and in the United States;) the eighth volume covers the period between "1800-1833;" the ninth covers the period between "1833-1865," and the tenth deals with the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

TALES OF COWBOYS.

"THE COMING OF CASSIDY." Charles E. Mulford. A. C. McClurg & Company, Chicago.

CASSIDY is a sort of a respectable "Diamond Dick"—a western gunfighter recognized by the polite publishers of fiction, which gives him caste. Wrap him up between the yellow covers of a "five center"—the kind made purposely to read behind geographies in school—and he would be contraband in the hands of young people.

The book is a collection of short stories (on the order of "Wolfville Days) about cowpunchers, cattle rustlers and all the other stage scenery that has made "Arizona" famed as a State and as a play. During a shooting scrape Cassidy receives a bullet in one of his legs, which, after healing, causes him to limp, and he gains the sobriquet of "Hop-Along-Cassidy."

The stories are like others of the West with a little more disregard for funerals than even writers of frontier fiction are inclined to show. From cover to cover there is action, shooting, plots and heroism.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF RAILWAYS. Samuel O. Dunn. D. Appleton & Company, New York.

THE SUBJECT of government ownership of railways is one that is hardly surpassed by any other that seems likely ever to be presented to American democracy for settlement. It is a question to which every intelligent American should give thoughtful consideration. Mr. Dunn claims that with the actual and potential sentiment for government ownership apparently growing, and the opposition to it from interested sources apparently tending to decline, it is conceivable that conditions and public opinion might so crystalize as suddenly to bring it about. The author makes the claim—and rightly, too—"that the question of government versus private ownership ought, therefore, to be receiving serious study, not only from economists and statesmen, but from the public. It can be considered dispassionately now. It could not be if it became a partisan issue." The data compiled by the author present the subject matter to the reader in a manner that indicates forcefully the magnitude and gravity of the question. The effects of the adoption of government ownership on public finances and private enterprise, on the tax-paying public, on investors, on travelers and shippers, on the working class and on politics and government would be greater and farther-reaching than those of any other conceivable economic or industrial change—except that to socialism—is a claim advanced by the author.

Mr. Dunn tells the reader how, under the civil service regulations, the Interstate Commerce Commission and State Railway Commissioners, conditions in the management of railways have been improved, and how a good many serious abuses in railway management have been corrected, showing that owing to these changes, discussion of the question of public ownership must now proceed along new lines. The choice being now no longer between public management and unregulated private management, but between public management and strictly regularly private management. The author shows by preponderance of evidence that under existing conditions the adoption of government ownership in the United States would not be beneficial to the public.

Mr. Dunn claims that the danger confronting the country, under private management and public regulation, is twofold; on the one hand there is danger that if the pressure of the regulating authorities and public opinion shall be relaxed some railway managements may revive the old abuses. On the other hand, there is the danger that regulation may become so comprehensive and restrictive as to limit unduly the exercise of discretion, initiative and enterprise by railway managers, and to reduce and keep the profits of railways below the point where investments in them will be sufficiently attractive. But in view of the improvements which have been made within recent years, both in the management and in the regulation of railways in this country it would seem that it should not be impracticable to develop a railway public policy by which both of these dangers should be avoided.

The purpose of this volume is first to give information as to the comparative results of public and private ownership and management of railways in various leading and typical countries. Its chief purpose, however, is to try to direct serious consideration to the question of what—in view of the experience of other countries with State ownership and management, and of the conditions existing in the United States—would probably be the result of the adoption of government ownership and management of railways. The author is one of the foremost authorities of America on railroad questions, and his treatment of the subject may be regarded as conservative, judicial and fair.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

THE LIFE OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE. Sir Edward Cook. MacMillan & Company, New York and London.

THIS very handsome "Life of Florence Nightingale" is in two volumes, charmingly bound, and most satisfying as to material and type. The frontispiece to the first volume is from a water color representing Miss Nightingale's mother with her two little daughters. A little further on is the reproduction from a drawing of Florence Nightingale's head when a young girl, 1845. The face is pensive and exquisitely beautiful, and it remains so in the later pictures, one of which constitutes the frontispiece of the second volume. This is from a portrait painted in 1887 by Sir William Richmond. There are two still later ones, one from a photograph in 1906, after Miss Nightingale had become so infirm as to be confined to her bed; and the other from a water color drawing made in 1907.

The books are compiled from Miss Nightingale's own copious memoranda, made during her long years of service to humanity, as well as personal correspondence, her published writings, and official reports. Her papers relating to her work during the Crimean War are voluminous, and their substance has been verified by reference to official documents.

From her early girlhood Florence Nightingale felt the sacrificial calling of her life. And yet to her it was not a sacrifice. It was a passion, a religion. And for a well-born girl of high natural ability and considerable attractiveness to revolt against the environment of a luxurious home in order to pursue an ideal with consistent and self-torturing tenacity, in practice as well as in speculation, overcoming all obstacles and temptations of circumstances, is proof that she had already served an apprenticeship before the call to the Crimea came. It may be popularly believed that Miss Nightingale's life work subsisted mainly, if not wholly, in her services in the Crimea. While these are tremendous, while she may almost be said to be the founder of female nursing in war, and of the Red Cross societies throughout the world, the nursing at Scutari and in the Crimea was by no means the final word of her usefulness. The plans she laid, and what they meant later to the conservation of the health of the British soldier, and the correction of conditions that militated against it, are another important chapter in this splendid woman's life. For forty years she worked on Indian questions as a reformer, with assiduity, persistence and ingenuity, which were as marked in this sphere as in all others.

Miss Nightingale's literary work, her splendid friendship, the honors which her modest nature deprecated, but which forced themselves upon her —all of these form additional details of intense interest, and lead gently on to the closing years, when, as a very old woman, the Order of Merit was conferred upon her by King Edward, and a little later the Freedom of the City of London—an honor which had been conferred upon but one woman before her—Lady Burdett-Coutts. Miss Nightingale was not merely a sentimental philanthropist. Queen Victoria had said of her: "Such a clear head! I wish we had her at the War Office."

A full list of Florence Nightingale's literary works is given in the appendix of the second volume, as well as other important works concerning this well-beloved, never-to-be-forgotten woman.

WIT, HUMOR AND INFORMATION.

TRAVEL LETTERS FROM NEW ZEALAND, AUSTRALIA AND AFRICA. E. W. Howe. Crane & Company, Topeka.

THIS is a delightful book of travel letters because it does not attempt to cram the reader with instructions and statistics. It is written in a semi-humorous vein, and the personal style which might almost be termed "chatty." The impressions are created by taking the reader intimately into the conditions attending the trip described, whether on shipboard, railroad train or in the foreign countries and cities visited. There are most amusing descriptions of such characters as one is sure to meet upon such an extended journey, from the snoring comrade of the stateroom to the pretty lass who sits upon the right hand of the captain.

While the style in which the book is written is light and easily readable, the author demonstrates an extraordinary capacity for gathering information—that intimate sort of information that gives the reader a good idea of exact conditions in those parts where the author has traveled—climate, soil, agricultural products, stock, industries, manners and customs, character of human denizens. It is a pleasant way of acquiring knowledge, almost without knowing it, and without the toil and effort of attention which must usually be spent upon a travel book. The author breezes across the Pacific Ocean, touching at the Samoa Islands and other points, and finally arriving in Sidney. Many other points in Australia are visited, and many others in New Zealand and South Africa. Then northward bound, the travelers eventually traverse the waters of the Red Sea, and the Mediterranean; and the reader is almost sorry to find them homeward bound over the Atlantic, and finally safely Pullmaned into their home town of Atchison.

The book is written with something of the whimsicality of Mark Twain's works, although it is never quite fair to make comparisons. Mr. Howe is quite capable of making a niche for himself, without invading the sanctuary of our altar to our immortal and beloved humorist.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Frederick Samuel Dellenbaugh, the noted explorer and artist, author of "The North Americans of Yesterday," "A Romance of the Colorado River," "A Canyon Voyage," etc., and librarian of the American Geographical Society, is busily engaged on a book which Holt & Co. will publish in 1914 under the title of "Leaders to Our Western Sea," a story of the growth of the United States from the Alleghenies to the Pacific. Detailed accounts of great explorers, including Boone, George Rogers, Clark, Lewis and Clark, Pike, Wilson, Price Hunt, Long, Jedediah Strong, Smith, Fremont, Kane and Powell, will be a feature of the book.

Miss Helen Keller, with her teacher, Mrs. Macy, is making a lecture tour throughout the country. Mrs. Macy speaks about three-quarters of an hour, and Miss Keller for fifteen to twenty minutes, after which the audience is given opportunity to ask questions of Miss Keller. How she gains impressions from the outside world through her fingers is told in her notable little book, "The World I Live In." Her idea of beauty is expressed in her book, "The Song of the Stone Wall."

Jules Guerin's "Housetops of Nazareth" has been awarded the Charles W. Beck, Jr., prize of $100—the one award made each year at the annual water color show at the Philadelphia Academy of the Fine Arts. The award is bestowed each year for the best picture made in colors for color production in any American publication. "Housetops of Nazareth" was reproduced in the colors of the original canvas in the Century Magazine of May, 1910, and later was made one of the eighteen pages in color in "The Holy Land" in its book form—a work on which Jules Guerin and Robert Hichens collaborated.

Canon Hannay, better known to the reading public under his pen name of George A. Birmingham, was preparing for a trip to Spain. He entered a book shop in order to purchase some guide books for his travels. The clerk, being asked what he would recommend, took down a novel from the shelf, and said: "This is about the best thing we have on the subject." Canon Hanney, looking at the title, read "Spanish Gold"—his own novel—whose locale is miles remote from Spain.

Annie Smith Peck has distinguished herself by climbing mountains to a greater height than any of our resident masculine explorers, and by her authorship of "The South American Tour." She stood at the summit of the highest peaks in Mexico, and descended to interview Porfirio Diaz as long ago as 1897—when Woodrow Wilson was still a dominie and Huerta was unheard of. Ever since that time this author's efforts have been devoted largely to awakening her countrymen to the enjoyment of pleasure travel in the South, and to the development of commercial and friendly relations with South America.

The President's appointment of Brand Whitlock to the office of Minister to Belgium has been confirmed by the Senate. Mr. Whitlock's political and literary careers have gone hand in hand, one serving the other. Those who have read his works dealing with a solution of problems of civic conditions in America must feel that he understands the game of politics pretty thoroughly. His "On the Enforcement of Law in Cities," "The Turn of the Balance," "The Gold Brick," "The Fall Guy," all present an up-to-date discussion of political, social and moral conditions in the America of today, and the author's admirers will be glad to know that his sphere of public service is to be extended to one of international importance.

Dr. Edward E. Barnard, who, as an astronomer, has achieved an enviable reputation for photographic meteorological phenomena, edited the terms in astronomy for the New Standard Dictionary recently published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company. Under the direction of Dr. Barnard, with the assistance of the Yerkes and the Lick observatories, as well as the United States Weather Bureau, full-page plates of astronomical and meteorological phenomena, embracing nebulae, comets and clouds were prepared to embellish the new work.

Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks, with Prof. J. T. Lauck, author of "The Immigration Problem," lately transferred his connection from Cornell University to the New York University, and is frequently heard at important gatherings in and near the metropolis on questions of civic and political interest. A new and revised edition of his book, "Immigration," is in preparation, and will shortly be issued.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

BY GENEVIEVE FARNELL-BOND.

If you do not believe that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country, listen to this tale about James Whitcomb Riley. It would seem that an Indianapolis lawyer, with a friend, made a motor trip to Greenfield, Ind., on a pilgrimage of honor to the Hoosier poet's birth town. The friends dined at the best hostelry, and then strolled out to get some information from the clerk as to exact location of the house where Riley lived.

"Will you kindly tell us where the Riley house is?" the lawyer inquired.

"I don't know any hotel by that name," replied the clerk; "though there may be some such boarding-house here."

"I mean the James Whitcomb Riley house," said the lawyer, perfectly sure that the clerk had not understood.

"Riley—Riley!" and the clerk scratched his head. "Don't know him. Maybe his name's in the directory."

"I—I guess he's moved." And the two shrine-seekers stared at each other foolishly.

"Probably," replied the clerk, smugly. "Them Irish never do stay long in one place."

Thomas Hardy's home-coming to Dorchester was not hailed as the triumphal entry of a literary genius. The good Wessex folk understood that he had made money with his books, and commercially they respected him. But doubtless they entertained a good-natured contempt for those people in the big world who could pay good money for such things as novels—even the best. Here, in California, certain cultured, educated individuals, supposedly well-read, have looked at me without a ray of recognition when Edwin Markham's name was mentioned. "Markham? I don't believe I know him," declared the young scion of literary forebears. "No, I really don't know who he is. I might have met him back East. But then, don't know, I meet so many people. I really can't remember them all." And he struggled to adjust his eyeglass cord over his ear, and under his long locks. A young poetess, whose fame had begun to spread broadcast over the country, returned to her native town in Wisconsin. Jumping from the train, she hastily bargained with a hack driver, and entered the vehicle. The conveyance had not proceeded far when she spied her girlhood chum. "Ella!" she cried gaily, and ordering the driver to stop, she invited her friend to enter. "Now, really, I loved Ella dearly," the other Ella told me; "but after the writing of that last poem—well, you know, I had to excuse myself!"—exhibiting a most consistent combination of bad faith and provincialism.

Sometimes I am tempted to think something of myself out in the big, scrambling current of the world's work. But after a visit to the home town, I emerge feeling awfully ordinary, for there I am nobody but 'Little Genevieve.' And no doubt it serves me good and right. But take my advice, all ye authors and authorettes: keep away from your home town until you've really done something; unless you have the hide—speaking psychically—of rhinoceros.

More about James Whitcomb Riley. During the recent celebration of his birthday anniversary in Cincinnati, he recounted the circumstances of his first meeting with Marshall P. Wilder. Dining at the Lotus Club, Riley, Mark Twain and Bill Nye, looking down from the balcony into the room below, saw a very tiny man executing some comedy dance steps on top of the piano for a small, select crowd of friends and members. "Who's that?" demanded Riley. "Oh," drawled Nye, "that's Marshall P. Wilder. He's a professional dwarf."

The "close to nature" faddists are giving us some really practical literature on the subject. It may take some readers some time to discover whether or not a poet's nature outpourings are the result of actual contact with good old Mother Earth, in her myriad moods—that is, if these readers do not happen themselves to know much about nature, and are content with poetry that sounds pretty and says little. But the nature stuff that is being given to the reading public by the prose writer, and one who knows his business thoroughly, is another thing. The belief is gaining ground that all children should know something about out-of-door nature. Hundreds of schools have introduced gardening into their curricula. It is a good thing. Who knows how many little embryonic poets are getting familiarity with the soil in this way? And think how much nature-faking literature will be spared us in the growing generation!

"The authors of 'The Work of the Rural School,'" runs an interesting paragraph, "are firm believers in the value of the school garden. They call it a signboard that says to the children, 'Come and Do!' in striking contrast to the usual one that says, 'Don't!' It is a relaxation from indoor studies; it provides material for lessons in botany, language, arithmetic, physics, biology, spelling and reading." This is splendid, ideal, even from the poet's standpoint. Real poetry never was afraid of a kitchen garden, any more than it should be of dish-washing and a well-cooked dinner.

Another nature book is "Joe, the Book Farmer," the champion corn-raiser of his State, the story being told by Gerrard Harris. To duplicate "Joe" many times in real life, Ohio is giving a trip to Washington to 2000 of her juvenile farmers. "Joe" made the trip—in the book—and was honored by having the Capital and the Treasury pointed out to him by the President, who tells him that it is the farmer who has made them possible. "The whole structure of the government," he tells Joe, "is founded on him, for people must eat before they are governed. Remember that a real good farmer and an honest man is just as useful as President, Senator, or Congressman." Practical nature books such as these are good for us—writers and non-writers; to rub our noses in the earth, and compel us to know just how to scratch it into shape before we can bury these same noses in the roses that spring from this same earth.

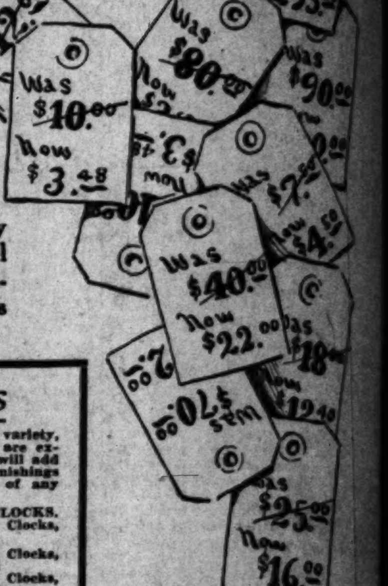
January's Greatest Clearance!

OVERPOWERING REDUCTIONS



The reason this great Clearance Sale at Brent's is going to be the greatest house furnishing event of the year is because we have reduced prices LOWER than any competitor. Our inventory of January 1st has brought to light thousands of articles that we have decided to close out at COST, and in a great many cases, even less than cost.

All odd pieces of furniture—all remnants of matting, linoleum, carpets—all odd rugs—heaters and stoves of all kinds—in fact, you can go right through the store and buy useful articles for spot cash that will save you more money than any sale you have ever attended in Los Angeles.

Bear in mind, we have not listed all the Bargains in this Advertisement. Sweeping reductions prevail straight through the store. We have determined to close out an enormous amount of our stock with extraordinary quickness.

Without making use of the old threadbare story of the "necessity for ready cash," let us remind you that cash is the thing that will count in this sale. And keep in mind that the Bargains listed below are a very few of the thousands you will find at Brent's this week.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, England, may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

REORGANIZATION SALE OF USED CARS.

We have opened a used car department Jan. 2d, under the management of Mr. F. B. Maynard. We believe that we have earned a reputation for truth, honesty and a square deal, and we most earnestly assure you that we will not jeopardize that asset, which we prize above a money value, by intentionally misleading in selling a used car.

We have many bargains in second-hand motor delivery wagons, and trucks of all carrying capacities, also a few bargains in touring cars.

We are about to file papers for incorporation, and to clear the decks for reorganization, we have cut values to the limit. A postal card or telephone will bring you the list, and whatever we claim we will make good.

MINING—

SPLENDID OFFER, FULL OF MERIT—

A leading mining engineer, while examining mining properties in Tuolumne county, California for some big operators, stumbled onto a large vein of rich gold ore over a mile in length, belonging to an old Italian. A careful examination disclosed such a wealth of gold that he secured a hidebound option, giving immediate possession and no payments to be made before January 1, 1915. Several samples from different parts of the vein assayed from $2000 to $12.80 per ton.

With a little development he believes that he can unearth 2 or 3 carloads of this high-grade quartz and sell it for enough to pay for the property and install a mill. To accomplish this about $5000 will be required. Will sell half interest in 5 equal parts at $1000 each, payable $200 a month, as work progresses. The value of this find cannot be exaggerated. Fullest investigation invited. References expected. Address K, box 23, TIMES OFFICE.

I WISH TO MEET GOOD SOUND BUSINESS MEN that want to get in on the control of an opened up, proven gold, silver and copper mine that is surrounded by going mills and high grade shippers. Have just returned with samples and the eminent mining engineer, C. Horton Hart of Denver, Colorado and Spokane, Washington, is now making reports after examining this mine. Samples of ore can be seen at 342 SOUTH HILL ST. Come to room No. 55.
GEO. W. MAGWOOD.

TO STUDY TUNA'S HABITS.

Nine Delegates to the California Packers' Association Discuss Future of the Industry.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nine delegates to the annual convention of the California Tuna Packers' Association met in executive session at a luncheon held at a downtown restaurant today for the purpose of discussing various questions relative to the tuna industry in the State and to formulate plans by which Congress can be induced to set aside a suitable appropriation for a thorough scientific study of the habits and early environments of the tuna, of which comparatively little is at present known.

After the luncheon various reports were made, including one relative to the growth of the tuna industry, which has been steadily increasing from the time of its inception eight years ago, the last year's pack having reached the proportion of 115,000 as against 80,000 of the year preceding.

Those present at the luncheon and meeting were as follows: L. J. Rice, president; W. V. Ambrose, secretary; W. C. King, A. J. Steele, H. J. Privett, N. J. Kughlis, Paul Eachus, C. E. Pierce and A. S. Kutner.

Friday night the delegates were entertained by the American Can Company at an elaborate banquet at the St. Francis, and during the coming week several luncheons and other affairs have been planned for the entertainment of the visiting delegates, the majority of whom are from Los Angeles and San Diego, where the canneries are located.

PRESTON SUCCEEDS M'NAB.

Ukiah Lawyer Assumes Office and Recalls Diggs-Caminetti Affair in Statement.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—John W. Preston of Ukiah assumed the office today of United States Attorney for the Northern District of California, succeeding John L. McNab, resigned.

When McNab gave up the office, he coupled his resignation with a criticism of Atty.-Gen. McReynolds for delaying the prosecution of the Diggs-Caminetti white slavery and the Western Fuel cases.

There was an echo of McNab's charges in a statement given out today by Preston after Judge Van Fleet had administered to him the oath of office. Preston said he had accepted the position "because he wanted to contribute to the support of President Wilson and to vindicate the Attorney-General of the United States, who as been misjudged by persons unfamiliar with the affairs of the Department of Justice."

ARRESTED AS INSANE.

Oakland Police Say They Then Discovered that Their Female Prisoner Had Passed Bad Checks.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND, Jan. 3.—Arrested today as an insane person, investigation showed that Helen Mar Bishop, alias Helen E. Zale, 65 years old, was wanted on numerous charges of having passed bad checks. From one firm of clothiers here she is alleged to have obtained $175. She has served two terms at San Quentin Prison for obtaining money under false pretenses.

The woman created a disturbance today in her apartment and was locked up on a charge of insanity. P. L. Sternberg, who has been acting as her guardian, mentioned to the police that she was well supplied with funds from various checks recently cashed. An inquiry uncovered the charges of having passed fictitious checks.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SYRACUSE (N. Y.) Jan. 3.—James E. Hubbell, former county clerk and one of the best known residents of Syracuse, died today following symptoms of hydrophobia. Mr. Hubell was bitten by a pet dog November 30. He went to a hospital where an antitoxin was injected. He left the hospital a week later. While he was around his friends joked him about the rabies and Mr. Hubbell began to read everything he could find about the disease. Last Tuesday he told his doctor he was nervous and fidgety. He was again taken to the hospital where he passed away.

Much of it, it was said, was posted by the men of the ships before Christmas.

Long Beach.

MAYOR-ELECT HAS TROUBLES.

Long Beach Council Not in Perfect Accord.

Last Southern Pacific Train Makes Its Exit.

Girl Who Practiced Fraud Taken to Jail.

LONG BEACH, Jan. 3.—Mayor-elect Luis N. Whealton will enter upon his new duties Monday with a City Council that opposes his pet measure, the appointment of James C. Beer as president of the Board of Public Works. The Council now stands five to two in opposing the proposed nominee, and the only reason so far given for the stand taken by the majority is that Mr. Beer s temperamentally unfit for the place.

Mr. Whealton said this afternoon that he wished the president of the Department of Public Works to be a city manager and assume entire responsibility for those under him. "Fully 90 per cent. of the city's money passes through the hands of this official," the Mayor-elect continued, "and he should be capable in every way."

The three members of the board receive a salary of $125 a month, and Whealton wished that raised. The City Council would not agree, and he proposed that the new president work for six months at the old salary, and at the end of that time the Council consider the advisability of an increase. Then another proposal was made, that Beer write his resignation, undated, and file it with the City Council, to become effective whenever the Council saw fit. This, too, was rejected, and it became plain that five members of the City Council did not wish Beer as president of the Board of Public Works under any consideration.

The names of the other two members of the board have not been revealed, Mayor-elect Whealton stating that he had not made up his mind who to appoint. For days Whealton's office at 225 First National Bank building hase been besieged by office-seekers. "I have three places to fill and there have been hundreds of applicants," said the Mayor-to-be.

The New Administration Club held a meeting at room 226 in the same building this afternoon, decided upon ways and means for supporting Mayor-elect Whealton and adopted resolutions indorsing his course. Members of the club pledged themselves to work hard to aid the new administration in carrying out its policies.

A meeting of laboring men was also held this afternoon and the appointment of Beer was indorsed.

LAST ESPEE TRAIN.

The last train of the Southern Pacific Railway left Long Beach today, never to return, and there will be less smoke and noise on Broadway. However, Long Beach will lose nothing by the change, as the Espee ticket office will sell transportation to all parts of the world, except Greater Los Angeles, as heretofore. Those wishing to leave Long Beach will be supplied with two Pacific Electric Railway tickets the first good to the Sixth-street station in Los Angeles, and the second from that station to the Southern Pacific Depot. There will be four baggage cars a day to and from Long Beach instead of the two that have been in service. It may also mean that the Pacific Electric will increase the number of its passenger trains.

The removal of steam train service from the heart of the city will be of much benefit to not only those living along the right of way, but also to all who live west of Pacific avenue and north of First street.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Bernice Nelson, the 17-year-old girl who had secured a lot of fine clothing from the local stores by representing herself as a messenger from well-known residents of Long Beach, was taken to Los Angeles this morning by Deputy Constable R. A. Newell and turned over to the Juvenile Court. The police have recovered so far a pair of shoes, a corset, a pair of opera-length gloves and a handsome set of furs. However the officials do not know how long Bernice had been at work and it is thought that more wearing apparel may be discovered that she may have hid away from her home.

At the dinner given last night by the boosters for the harbor bonds, Robert L. Bisby, secretary of the Chamber of Comerce stated he had been informed by engineers that if the Long Beach harbor was properly opened the tides flowing through from San Pedro would scour the channel and make but little future dredging necessary. And also that the tides would be so nullified that the surge in the outer harbor at San Pedro would be greatly lessened.

The local police were informed today that Ross Austin had escaped from the Juvenile Hall at Los Angeles. Ross, who is a boy 15 years of age, has given the local police much trouble. He is classed as an incorrigible and has been found guilty of a number of petty thefts and even housebreaking. The officers here do not believe he will return as he is well known to every member of the force.

F. D. Warner, 40 years old, was instantly killed by a Pacific Electric train near Latin station last night. Warner is said to have been a preacher at the Nazarene University of Pasadena. Motorman Wilson, who was driving the train, stated that he ran directly in front of the train in an effort to cross the four tracks of the line.

The police have received a letter from H. A. Thornton of San Francisco requesting them to find Miss Enila Herder. Miss Herder left her brother's home at No. 231 West Third street two weeks ago and it was understood that she had gone to San Francisco. Nothing has been heard from her since that time.

Frank S. Craig retires from membership of the Board of Public Works at 12 o'clock tomorrow night. He has served upon the board for six years, been present at 400 meetings and voted about 4000 times. Hundreds of thousands of the public money has been expended, and the minutes of the meetings show that during all that time only two dissenting votes have been cast, the board voting unanimously in favor or against every other proposal offered.

VICTIM HAD MONEY.

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George L. Burke, who was killed in the Hill-street tunnel today by a street car, left his home in East Highland Wednesday with $600 in his pockets and nothing had been heard of him since. He said he was coming to San Bernardino, but Sheriff Ralphs here had been unable to locate or get a trace of him. His wife will go to Los Angeles in the morning to investigate his death. She believes he has been drugged by thieves and robbed of his money, then turned loose in the city, when he was struck by the car. He came from Chico here two months ago. He had a position in an East Highland packing-house where he had been employed for several weeks.

SELLS HIS BIG TRACT.

Lancaster Man Disposes of Valuable Antelope Valley Property to an Angeleno—Short News Stories.

LANCASTER, Jan. 3.—H. W. Brown, a well known resident of the east side, recently sold the relinquishment to his 160 acres and has moved to Los Angeles, where he will reside in the future. C. Horn of the southern metropolis has purchased this property.

NEWS BRIEFS.

During the week A. N. Lawrence, a rancher living eight miles southeast of Lancaster, appeared before Judge Bulkley and swore out a warrant for the arrest of his neighbor, Juan Vauzenski on the charge of malicious mischief. Lawrence alleged that Vauzenski had been cutting his fence and deemed it best to settle the trouble in court. A jury rendered a verdict of "not guilty" as the evidence introduced by the plaintiff was not deemed sufficient to convict.

An interesting coincidence has just been brought to light here. Nearly forty years ago four now well known citizens of Lancaster rode the range together in Wyoming, performing the various duties that make up the routine of the life of the cowboy. The spirit of adventure lured two members of this quartette to other climes while the rest elected to follow business pursuits in other States. States. After the party dispersed the men lost track of each other entirely and their re-union here was not contemplated, being purely accidental.

A large and enthusiastic crowd witnessed the automobile races on Dry Lake on New Year's Day. This natural race course is but a few miles north of Lancaster and the bed of dry lake provides a speedway that is hard to equal. C. E. Henderson, R. R. Trusty of Lancaster, and H. M. Pardee of Saugus, were the contestants, the honors in the twelve-mile race going to the latter.

Several years ago an organization known as the Antelope Valley Horse Association was formed and a large stallion which cost, it is alleged, in the neighborhood of $3000, was purchased. Past events indicate that t be chased. Past events indicate that the association has had a stormy career and the horse has been the source of much litigation. Early last month E. A. Ward instituted proceedings in the local court, asking for the settlement of certain bills. By a decree of the judge a sale was ordered and a few weeks ago the animal found a new owner in E. A. Ward, who was the highest bidder at the public auction.

William Oliver, Jr., met with a serious accident while driving from Los Angeles with a new team of spirited horses. The accident occurred between Lancaster and Palmdale, where an exceptionally bad stretch of road was encountered with several deep washouts. The horses followed by the wagon and driver plunged into one of these, breaking the tongue to the ground with whiffle tree. Oliver was thrown to the ground with such fore eas to render him unconscious. When he recovered, he made his way to Lancaster in a dazed condition, where medical aid was summoned. It was found that no bones were broken, but the violence of the fall was attested by the many facial bruises and bodily injuries sustained.

One of the most successful dances of the year was given New Year's Eve by the Lancaster band. The local hall was crowded to its capacity by a large number of people from all sections of the valley.

The Lancaster Hotel has been leased for a period of three years to Mrs. H. W. Searing and Mrs. M. J. Fischer. These ladies have assumed charge of the hostelry the first of the year and contemplate many improvements.

The application of O. F. Goodrich, manager of the local telephone company, for an increase in rates will be heard before Commissioner Gordon of the State Railroad Commission in Los Angeles Thursday, January 8. It is understood that several of Lancaster's citizens will be on hand to oppose the proposition unless an improved service is promised.

BREAKWATER IS BLAMED.

Mass Meeting Held at Venice at Which Radical Speeches Were Made by Property Owners.

VENICE, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was the unanimous opinion of 200 beach property holders at a meeting tonight that Abbot Kinney's breakwater was largely responsible for the loss of the new bulkhead and the washing away of the sand lots. J. M. Herdon, chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee, which will find out whether or not the property owners have redress.

Attorney W. H. Anderson and others declared it was plain that Kinney's breakwater caused a swirl in the current that ate away the beach at every extraordinary high tide. Another committee was appointed to act with the City Trustees, the State and national government in getting a competent engineer to devise a bulkhead somewhat along the lines of the Galveston sea wall. City Attorney Hanna and Trustee Gerety assured the beach owners of their co-operation.

WET MEN ARE ENERGETIC.

Visalians Sign Petition for Resubmission of the Question of Licensing Saloons—News Briefs.

VISALIA, Jan. 3.—Those in charge of the petitions calling for the submission at a referendum election upon a proposed ordinance permitting saloons to open up again in Visalia claim to have secured in the neighborhood of 400 signers to date. Only 211 names would be necessary to compel an election. A threat of the "dry" forces to publish as an advertisement the names of all signers of the petition in the seventeen newspapers of the county has added a little spice to the present stage of the proceedings.

NEWS BRIEFS.

R. O. Morrison and Jose Acedas were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Bagby today on a charge of stealing copper wire and pleaded not guilty. Morrison is accused of the theft of wire from the Mt. Whitney Power and Electric Company, and Acedas of cutting copper bonds from the track of the Visalia Electric. Each man has been detained in the County Jail more than a month without a hearing in the justice court. The authorities explain this by saying that the District Attorney has been too busy to consider their cases.

The annual meeting of the Visalia Board of Trade will be held Monday evening, at which time officers for the coming year will be elected. The Board of Trade has been a busy organization for the past year and will map out an active course of action for 1914. Los Angeles merchants who plan to visit the San Joaquin Valley in February have been wired an invitation to be the guests of the Board of Trade in Visalia.

W. G. Pennebaker, a Civil War veteran, Tulare county pioneer and wealthy property owner, was buried in Visalia this afternoon, having passed away at his home in this city on New Year's Eve. He was 77 years of age, and has been a resident of Tulare county since 1868. He leaves a number of relatives in this city and in other parts of the State. For several terms Pennebaker was commander of Gen. George Wright Post, G.A.R., declining re-election at the last election of the post on the ground of failing health.

CONTRACT IS FINALLY LET.

Santa Monica Council Opens Bids. Awards Work to Beach Contractors for Fremont-avenue Work.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 3.—Unless the contractors who filed bonds to complete the job fall down, Fremont avenue will at last be paved. Last night the City Council awarded the contract for paving the thoroughfare from Eighth street to Ocean avenue with asphalt, with curbing and sidewalks, to the J. D. Kneen Company. The Woodill-Hulse Company received the contract for the erection of ornamental light posts on this part of the work. The S. C. Contracting Company was awarded the job of improving Fremont from Eighth street to the city limits with oil macadam and curbing.

The letting of these three contracts was a source of great satisfaction to the retiring Council, which has found it the greatest stumbling block of this administration. It is predicted that work will be started on this important street improvement within the next two weeks, thus proving a beach outlet for a magnificent boulevard from the end of Pico street, Los Angeles, to the sea. The County Supervisors have paved the way for the remainder of the work.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The crew of a local Westgate car on the Pacific Electric system reported to the police today that three ties were found on the tracks at San Vicente boulevard and Twenty-first street at 7:30 o'clock this morning. A heavy fog obscured the motorman's view, but as he was running slowly, he saw the obstruction in time to prevent a derailment. Pacific Electric detectives are scouring the country for the intended wreckers.

Street Superintendent Carter found a newly-made grave, with a cross bearing the letters "P. E. Y. P." at its head, at the foot of the bluff between California and Washington streets, today. He hastened away to tell the police, whose officials were mystified and were at a loss how to proceed until a woman resident of Fifth street telephoned and stated that her two sons had buried a pet dog there this morning, having gained permission of the Board of Health.

The present City Council held its last session this afternoon. It will meet again Monday to induct the new members into office. At the close of the meeting today a vote of thanks was tendered President Berkley, who, in a short speech, stated that he believed the retiring Council to be one of the best.

MURDERED BODIES FOUND.

Owner of a Los Angeles Restaurant Is Slain by Federal Soldiers in Mexico.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL CENTRO, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The bodies of the American-born Mexicans reported to have been murdered by the Mexican Federal troops of Mexicali New Year's Eve, were recovered at a late hour last night by a party headed by Immigration Inspector George Webb.

The bodies were found about thirty feet from the scene of the murder, where they had beeen concealed on the morning of the 1st by the murderers, who attempted to obliterate all evidence of the crime by dragging brush over their tracks.

Sanchez, owner of a restaurant on North Broadway, Los Angeles, had been shot three times, one bullet entering the right ear, and out the left, another pierced his heart, while the third struck him in the back of the neck, passing out the mouth. Jose Valenchez was shot once in the head from behind and again through the heart.

The bodies had been carried thirty feet from the scene of the murder and thrown over a small embankment. They were then placed against this like logs and a portion of the dirt at the top was loosened, covering them completely. Their discovery was accidental and was made by Webb, who uncovered the foot of Sanchez while prodding in the dirt.

A. D. Gibb, an assistant of Webb's, started out to join his party when he accidentally stumbled onto a band of Mexican Federals, who to all intents and purposes were watching the actions of the searching party. No attempt was made to interfere, however.

An effort was made by Webb today to get the Federals under suspicion to line up on their side of the border for identification by Florez, the sole survivor of the ill-fated trio, who went to Mexicali in search of Sanchez's daughter, who is thought to be in one of the dives of that town.

The Federals studiously avoided such an ordeal, however, pleading as their reason the danger of a rebel attack. This action itself brands them as guilty in the eyes of the Calexico citizens, who are very indignant over the affair.

TEACHERS' PENSION LAW.

More Than Half of the Orange County Teachers Avail Themselves of Legal Privileges.

SANTA ANA, Jan. 3.—Out of 340 school teachers in Orange county, 182 have come under the provisions of the teachers' pension law. Thirty-seven are there because they had no choice in the matter. Any person who has commenced teaching since the law went into effect is under the law, and $1 a month is taken from his or her warrant to be applied to the State pension fund. Those who had been teaching before the law went into effect, had a choice. If they wanted to pay $1 a month, they became listed for a pension after thirty years of teaching, previous service being counted. Of 303 teachers in this county who had their choice, 145 decided to put themselves in line for pensions, and 159 concluded not to sacrifice the $1 a month on a possibility of being teachers for thirty years.

Under the law disability after fifteen years of teaching entitles the teacher working under the law to a pension of $250 a year. Those who have taught thirty years get a pension of $560 a year.

County Superintendent of Schools R. P. Mitchell accepted the provisions for himself.

HIGHWAY OFFICIALS.

Today S. C. Evans, W. B. Clancey and A. P. Campbell, highway commissioners of Riverside county, and County Surveyor G. M. Orange county voted $1,270,000 bonds fifteen months ago and has forty miles of its 107 miles of good roads under construction. Recently Riverside county voted $1,125,000. Next Monday the bond issue will be advertised for sale.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Today State Controller J. S. Chambers, through the district attorney's office, filed a petition asking for a special hearing in regard to an inheritance tax in the estate of J. C. Thomas, who died on November 18. It is alleged that contemplating death, Thomas deeded all his property, which was worth probably $40,000, to his wife and three children. They have been cited to show cause why an inheritance tax should not be paid.

Joseph Ferguson, a land owner of Balboa, has brought suit for divorce against Edna Ross Ferguson.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

Smartly-Dressed Youth Caught in Motion Picture Theater for Two-Year-Old Offense.

Neville Cavanaugh, a smartly-dressed young man, was arrested in a motion picture theater last night by Detective McCann upon complaint of Ira A. Marshall, a local realty man, who charged the youth with passing a worthless check upon him nearly two years ago.

Cavanaugh is a brother-in-law of Melville Thompson, a prominent San Diego business man, whose name he is charged with having forged on two checks for $50 each. Tompson, over the long-distance telephone last night, said he would not prosecute his relative. His wife, Cavanaugh's sister, said she would have nothing further to do with her brother.

McCann let the young man go on his own recognizance. Marshall and McCann will consult with the District Attorney's office to ascertain if he can be prosecuted. Marshall recognized Cavanaugh while in the motion picture theater. He repaired to the Hotel Alexandria and there met Detective McCann, who went to the place and took him into custody.

She wore a gray alpaca dress and white straw bonnet and seemed dazed from fatigue. Further information could not be secured.

The warrant was sent to Venice for service and the case will be heard by Justice Rennie.

Fred Kaiser of the N.Y.A.C. won the national A. A.U. seven-mile walk in 56:00 4-5.

November 22—Howard Drew of Springfield, Mass., equaled the world's indoor record for the 130-yard run of 0:12 4-5 at Brooklyn.

December 4—Perry McGillivray of the I.A.C. established a new American indoor record for the 880-yard swim of 11:29 1-5 in the fourth annual I.A.C. interscholastic tank meet. Max Mott of Oak Park High School and the I.A.C. set a new world's interscholastic record for the 100-yard back stroke of 1:18 in the I.A.C. High School swimming meet.

December 9—Willie Hoppe accepted the challenge of George Sutton of Chicago for an 18-2 championship match to be played in New York.

December 10—Jack Johnson, the negro world's champion, sustained a broken arm in a fight with Jim Johnson of Galveston, Tex., in a prize fight at Paris, which was declared a draw.

December 20—Alfredo de Oro accepted the challenge of Charley Morin for a three-cushion billiards championship match at Chicago on January 5, 6 and 7.

December 13—Walter Camp included two western football players on his All-American eleven, the honored men being Half-Back Craig of Michigan and Center des Jardiens of Chicago.

MANY "LAWS" THAT ARE NOT.

Forms of Legislation that Are Misunderstood.

Ideas Follow Wishes of Unlucky Travelers

Who Believe Laws Follow Moral Standards.

[Boston Globe:] Many people have the idea that if one owes a bill and goes to his debtor and tells him that he is willing to pay, and then offers some trifling sum on account, say $1, or even less per week or month, the creditor is obliged to take it, utterly regardless of the fact that if creditors were obliged to receive payment in that way it would put most of them out of business in a very short period.

There is no such law.

The nearest approach to such a law is the so-called "Dubuque law," named after the genial gentleman who was its author. Under this law, after an execution has been obtained against a person on a bill for necessaries, he may apply to a justice of a police or district court or to a trial justice, to be examined as to his earnings and expenses and to have the judge decide how much, if anything he must pay his creditor weekly, monthly, or otherwise, on account of the execution. Generally, however, in nine cases out of ten it is the creditor who makes the application, because he is more anxious to get his money than the debtor is to pay it.

It is firmly fixed in the minds of a great many people that 75 cents is all that can be collected for a broken window, whether it is a plate glass, worth dollars per foot, or a little 7x9 pane of the cheapest glass procurable. From whence this delusion sprung the writer has been unable to ascertain, but

There is no such law.

In the minds of very many people, especially in the country districts, there is another firmly fixed idea, that if one person strikes another first the person assaulted may then all but pound the other to death.

There is no such law.

A person assaulted has the right to defend himself, but he may not use any more force than necessary to do that; to use more than necessary force completely turns the tables and the assaulted becomes the aggressor, and liable for his excess of zeal in damages commensurate with the damage done. A person has the right to order an undesirable person from his premises, and to use sufficient force to eject him if he does not go when so ordered, but he has no right to accelerate his movements with one or more well-placed kicks.

Many people who owe bills labor under a strong impression that it is the duty of their creditors to come to them for their money.

There is no such law.

There is a proverb which says: "The borrower is servant to the lender." The bank will not come to you if you owe a note which it holds for collection; out of courtesy it will send you a notice that your note is due (it is not compelled to do that,) but you must go to the bank to make payment.

The writer was told by the brother of the founder of a large bank, now absorbed by another bank, that in the old days when coaches were the only passenger conveyance between Roxbury and Boston, and it was a matter of hours to go out and back, a resident of Roxbury appeared at the bank to pay a note and lacked 10 cents of the amount necessary to pay in full. He asked the president of the bank to lend him that amount until the next day, but was curtly refused on the ground that the maker of a note should know how much he owed and have sufficient funds to pay and not bother the bank officials to lend him or wait for him. The man was obliged to lose some hours' time and pay fare to Roxbury and back to get his 10 cents.

Another illustration. Some years since the writer was employed to redeem a tax title upon the property of a client, and having ascertained the amount due, he asked the holder if he would call at the writer's office when he went to lunch, as he passed the door on his way, and was promptly told: 'No, if I owe you money I will call on you, but if you owe me you must come to me." The proverb might well be amended to read:

The debtor is servant of the creditor.

In the country frequently, and in the city sometimes, one is told that if a person dies leaving children and grandchildren, the children of a deceased child, the grandchildren, are not entitled to the share of the estate which their parent would have taken, as the father or mother having died there is no way whereby the inheritance can pass over from the deceased to the grandchildren; in other words the line is broken.

There is no such law.

The statutes expressly provide that the children of deceased heirs take the share that would have gone to their parent.

A person owns a fruit tree and its branches overhang the land of his neighbor. Many think because of that the neighbor is entitled to the fruit on the overhanging branches.

There is no such law.

If the tree sat upon the line between the estates the neighbor would be entitled to one-half of the fruit, but being wholly on one side, the owner is entitled to all the fruit and may go upon his neighbor's land and gather it without being guilty of trespass. If the neighbor does not like this arrangement he may take his ax or saw and cut the limbs off at the line between the estates, but he must throw them on his neighbor's land, as the wood of the tree belongs to him. The owner of the tree may not like to have his tree treated thus, but he cannot help himself.

Two men own adjacent lots of land; one wishes to have a fence between them, the other does not. Many people think that one may build the fence and compel the other to pay for half of it.

There is no such law.

In such a case one owner may call in the fence viewers and have them ascertain the line and designate which part of the fence each shall build. Neither party, however, can compel the other to build any particular style of fence; the mover in the matter may want a fancy fence, but the other may build his half of any material satisfactory to himself, and so long as it is a legal fence he cannot be compelled to build any other.

The general public has an idea that anything growing inside the lines of a road, more especially in the country, is common property; that is fruit and hay, or stones or other useful articles to be found there.

There is no such law.

Except in some cities, the abutting owners own the land to the middle of the road, together with all the hay, fruit and other things thereon, and a person who goes upon said premises and removes anything thereon without permission from the abutting owner is just as guilty of theft as if he had gone over into the abuttor's field.

The general public has an idea that ownership of wild berries and fruit is in the person who can first gather them, and that they may go upon any person's land to gather them without being guilty of trespass.

There is no such law.

The owner of a parcel of land owns everything thereon, whether it is rocks, turf, trees, berries or fruit. Many years ago "Down East people" would organize parties to go to the "Blueberry Plains," many hundreds acres in extent in the eastern part of Maine. They would camp there for a week and come home with bushels of berries. For many years the owners of the land permitted this to be done without making objection, but finally took measures to get an income from the land by putting on watchmen and compelling the pickers to pay a small price per quart for the privilege of picking. Naturally there was quite a kick, and the owners were denounced as interfering with ancient "rights," but finally all had to acquiesce.

A man owns the land around a pond and stream and stocks the waters with fish, has "no trespassing" signs posted about, but some people think that if they follow a road to the middle of a bridge over the stream they may jump from the bridge to the middle of the stream and fish as much as they please.

There is no such law.

The person who owns the land adjoining the stream owns to the middle of it, and a man wading in the middle of the brook is a trespasser just as much as if he walked along the bank.

Many snopkeepers demand that finders of lost money or valuables in their stores shall deliver them over to them, as they own the articles because they were found on their premises.

There is no such law.

The finder of money or other valuables on the floor, outside the counter in a store, is the owner of the same against the whole world except the loser, but it has been held that if the owner left the money or goods upon the counter or on a table in the store they were practically in the care of the storekeeper and he had the right to their custody, while he could not make such a claim to goods which were found on the floor.

Some people, especially in these strenuous days, think that if they enter a railroad or an electric car and there is no vacant seat therein, they are not obliged to pay a fare and can ride free.

There is no such law.

This matter has been threshed out in the courts several times. If a person enters a crowded conveyance and remains therein he must pay the regular price for transportation. It often seems as if more cars might be put on. On a recent afternoon the writer was in the Scollay square subway, waiting for a Clarendon Hill car; most of these cars start from the junction of Pleasant st. and Shawmut avenue. Many of the Harvard Square cars start from the same point. Five cars marked "Harvard Square" passed with less than twenty passengers in any one of them, then came one Clarendon Hill car with passengers packed in like sardines, yet full fare was collected and there was no redress.

Big Contract.

JEFFERY CARS TO MOVE WORLD'S FAIR WEALTH.

AFTER an extensive study of the problem of passenger and freight transportation in various sections of the United States, the Transportation Committee of the Panama-Pacific Exposition has made the award covering these privileges during the period of the Fair. The Jeffery Auto Sales Company of San Francisco has contracted to equip and operate the most modern system of passenger and freight transportation that has been attempted anywhere in America.

This concession, involving the handling of millions of people and billions of dollars' worth of exhibits, freight and express, becomes effective at once and continues until the close of the Fair in December, 1915. The concession covers as well the delivery of all exhibits to the buildings and their return to the railroads after the Fair is over. The passenger service will operate between the ferries, railroad stations, principal hotels and the fair grounds. Provision is made that none but Jeffery motor cars are to be allowed within the grounds.

Negotiations covering the manufacture of all necessary passenger and freight-carrying equipment have been under way for some time, with the result that the Thomas B. Jeffery Company is in a position to provide trucks and passenger-carrying vehicles almost immediately. The chasses will be of a special Jeffery design, while the bodies will be built to carry from thirty to forty passengers in the most modern and comfortable way.

Before this award was made, a special investigation of the problem of freight and passenger traffic in large cities was made by L. S. Greenbaum, vice-president of the Jeffery Auto Sales Company of San Francisco. In this connection Mr. Greenbaum spent considerable time in New York and other large American cities, investigating the merits of different systems of handing passengers and freight. The result is that the transportation system at the Fair will set a high-water mark in what has come to be the greatest problem of modern cities, both from the standpoint of efficiency and economy.

Charles T. Jeffery, president of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, Kenosha, Wis., in talking of the concessions said: "This matter has been under negotiation for some time and the final decision relative to the selection of the company to handle it and the manufacturer to build the necessary equipment was made by the Concession and Transportation Committees of the exposition. I have been impressed particularly with the fact that the exposition authorities seem to give first consideration to the necessity of capital and experience in handling the concession and providing the equpment. They approached our company, giving those reasons for doing so, and I am particularly gratified that we are in a position to participate in the building up of what will be perhaps the most modern transportation system attempted in the country."

Tinker's Story.

SOME INSIDE HISTORY OF THE CINCINNATI REDS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The Cincinnati club of the National League is not owned by August Herrmann, otherwise known as Garry, and Joe Tinker was not fired from the managerial job by Herrmann. The inside history of the Reds during the last few months has been learned from one of the trusted attaches of the club who attended the annual meeting of the National League in New York last week, and some of the facts he disgorges will upset a lot of opinions held by Cincinnati fans.

The present owners of the Reds are Julius Fleischmann and his brother, Max. Julius is a former Mayor of Cincinnati. They had been interested financially in the Reds for several years past, but the deal by which they obtained absolute control of the club was not put through until the last few weeks of the past season.

Herrmann, who still is president of the club, will remain in that office as long as he wishes—unless he refuses to do the bidding of his bosses. He now is only a figurehead, being retained in the position of president largely because of his prominent reputation in baseball affairs and his long service rendered to organized ball as chairman of the national commission—a job he has held so long that it would be hard to think of anybody else holding it.

As soon as the Fleischmanns obtained the full control of the club last summer, Max Fleischmann insisted that Harry Stephens, a friend of his and associated in certain affairs in Cincinnati, be made secretary of the club, a position that he, Max, once held. Stephens not only was secretary in the usual sense of the term as applied to a baseball club, but he was instructed to act as a sleuth or "spotter," a job that never existed on any other big league club.

Stephens was ordered to gumshoe around and keep his ears open for gossip and to report everything he saw or heard to the Fleischmanns. When Joe Tinker finally learned of this through friends who had been tipped off about it, he waxed hot under the collar, but said nothing in particular.

In the last weeks of the season a story came out of Cincinnati about a rupture between Tinker and the Reds' business management, which caused the prediction that he was to be let out. The details of that trouble have not been told yet. The mixup was caused by Brother Max Fleischmann "bawling out" Tinker at Redland Park one day because Tinker made some managerial move in the game that did not suit Max's idea of how baseball should be played. Tinker told Max to "go to, etc.," not knowing that Max was one of his secret bosses. Fleischmann was incensed and swore to himself that he would "get Tinker." And, as every fan knows now, he "got Tinker." It was Max's ire entirely that caused the dismissal of the manager.

The new owners of the Reds are a queer pair. Max Fleischmann is a baseball "fiend" and thinks he knows as much about baseball as any man alive, in addition to believing that he has uncanny ability to size up a baseball situation and apply the remedy. For several years past he has gone East during midsummer to run a baseball club in the Adirondack Mountains in New York State. He lines up a bunch of professional players under assumed names and turns them loose against the semi-professional or amateur nines of the other hotels of rivals, who are outclassed. Then Max smiles around, accepting "modestly," the compliments of those who declare him a wonderful manager.

Julius Fleischmann is a "sport" of the dyed-in-the-wool variety, and particularly a race horse sport. During the good old days of the game in New York he and Frank Farrell, now owner of the New York American League baseball club, were partners in the ownership of several first-class thoroughbreds, and most famous of which was Blues, by Sir Dixon out of Bonnie Blue II.

Speaking of the Fleischmanns and racing recalls the notoriety acquired by William R. Fleischmann, a cousin of the brothers, at the Saratoga track in 1906, when he "ran out" on the bookmakers for $4000, finally settling, with the aid of his relatives, at a rate of 25 cents on the dollar.

The Cincinnati club has had a rocky history. It was a charter member of the National League in 1876, with J. L. Keck as its president. He served two years and was succeeded by J. M. W. Neff, who was president in 1878 and 1879, when Justus Thorner became the head of the club. On October 6 of this year, 1880, the club was expelled from the league for failure to observe the rules, agreements and requirements of the league.

During the ensuing decade Cincinnati was without National League ball. But in 1890 a new Cincinnati club was organized, with A. S. Stern as its president, and elected to membership in the league. The following year John T. Brush of Indianapolis was made president, serving for twelve years, ending in 1902, when he became president of the New York Giants, which position he occupied at the time of his death last year. When Brush left Cincinnati August Herrmann, the present figurehead, was made president of the club, serving from 1903 to the present time.

BITS OF HISTORY.

Wages in England Five Hundred Years Ago Resulted in the Enactment of a Maximum Law.

[Chicago News:] England knew the maximum wage long before the minimum was thought of. It came about after the plague of 1348 had swept away half the population. Work was at a standstill for want of workers and wages went up so enormously that the state thought it necessary to fix a limit. The state ordered that the laborer should not merely accept gratefully what was offered him, but that he must not leave his parish in search of another master on pain of having the letter "F" (for fugitive) branded upon his forehead. Statutes of this kind were popular up to Queen Elizabeth's time, when the last of the series was passed, "in the hope that it should banish idleness, advance husbandry and yield unto the hired person, both in the time of scarcity and in the time of plenty, a convenient proportion of wages."

Although English investigators find that the habit of smoking is on the increase among women, it is not so prevalent among children as it used to be. According to John Ashton, under King Charles II "it was not only usual for the women to join the men in smoking, but in Worcestershire the children were sent to school with pipes in their satchels, and the schoolmaster called a halt in their studies while they all smoked—he teaching the neophyte." Thomas Hearne records that at the time of the plague of London in 1665 "children were obliged to smoak. I heard Tom Rogers, who was yeoman beadle, say that when he was a schoolboy at Eaton all the boys were obliged to smoak in the school every morning, and that he was never whipped so much in his life as he was one morning for not smoaking."

On feast days the life of the Czar of the seventeenth century was enlivened by such amusements as a battle to the death between a well-baited bear and a spearman, in which, it is said, frequently the man lost his life. In the event of a successful issue the spearman was rewarded by being taken to the royal cellar, where he was allowed to drink to his capacity.

AND COMMENT.

[illegible] year has ended. Old [illegible] strange and paradoxical [illegible] wonderful achievement and [illegible] financial vicissitudes, is [illegible] past. The superstitious, or [illegible] the near-superstitious—for, [illegible] concerned, scarcely any of us [illegible] admit that we really feared [illegible] combinations of numerals—may [illegible] draw a long sigh of relief. The jinx is no longer "in our midst."

Seriously, when all has been said that can be said on the subject of conditions in the year that has just been relegated to history, it must be admitted that 1914 will have to be a prosperous year, indeed, to roll up a record of material progress exceeding that of 1913. As has been pointed out many times before in these columns, the stringency characterizing the general money market in the last half of 1913 did not, in Southern California, at least, particularly affect the attitude of that kind of "capital" that is spelled with a big "C" toward investment and development possibilities in this city and section. The editor of this department, in fact, has more than once urged this significant truth before the timid ones who were withholding real cash from legitimate and perfectly safe fields of investment, in a groundless and half-formed dread that the bottom was in danger of dropping out of things.

In spite of all this uncalled-for retrenchment, and in the face of the really large loss to the prosperity record due to the undeniable fact that money for loans has not been forthcoming to any encouraging degree for many months, the very momentum gained during more than a decade of hurtling progress served to carry Los Angeles through the past year, the "13" and the general business lull notwithstanding, with colors flying and with new laurels won in almost every line of material advancement. It is to be hoped that the achievements of the "unlucky" year have been both a lesson and an inspiration to the pessimists.

Harm Has Been Done.

Every one should be talking prosperity, not only because there is no excuse for gloom, but because such optimistic comment has a beneficial effect. The man who has confidence in the future of his city and section should not for a moment hesitate to say so. It is time the knocker was being driven to cover. Exaggerated reports about unemployment and false statements concerning business and financial conditions supposed to exist here have been given nationwide circulation by malicious agencies at work right here in Los Angeles. All any one asks is that the rest of the world know the truth. Every well-meaning individual in the city can constitute himself or herself a publicity bureau of one to put the facts before people in the East and Middle West. So far as that goes, there is room for missionary work here in the Southland, for the spreaders of discontent do not limit their efforts by any means to outside fields.

It isn't that any hurrah is essential to the bringing about of better conditions. Every reason exists for a solid and permanent prosperity throughout Southern California. The future was never so bright with tangible golden prospects. Bankers and financiers, the very men who may be relied upon to know what they are talking about, are predicting a gradual but sure return of the real Los Angeles brand of prosperity. They say that the best times in the local annals of progress are bound to dawn before 1914 has joined the so-called jinx year in that classification of time known as the past. What the Fact and Comment man is trying to drive home is the idea of hurrying things along. There has been altogether too much "waiting" upon the part of those who might even now be helping to clear the financial atmosphere.

Eyes to the Front.

It will be a century yet before we need worry about another "13," and unless science should discover some way of halting the ravages of the years, none of us need fret concerning the possible calamities in store for the world in that remote period of unluckiness. What we are concerned about now, the believers in jinxes and all of us, is in raising the prosperity of Los Angeles and Southern California from its present slightly-below-normal condition to a status unprecedented in the glorious history of the Southland.

This is a consummation in which one and all may participate. Biding the time when money conditions, now growng appreciably easier east of the Missouri and already showing signs of general improvement, shall have become all that may be consistently desired, those with cash on hand may with particular advantage to themselves and with benefit to those who

Of a Total of 412, Only 30 Offices Are Left!

Public appreciation of the magnificence, the surpassing advantages and the strategic position occupied by the Marsh-Strong Building resulted in the closing last week of one of the most spectacularly successful tenant-securing campaigns ever conducted within the history of the modern skyscraper.

Its twelve spacious floors filled almost to capacity with occupants of a highly desirable character and with the date of its formal opening still several weeks distant, the mark set by this new structure reflects not only the trend of the city's business growth but manifests the desire of business and professional men for all that is best in office building construction.

Finished throughout in marble, mahogany and bronze—equipped with four fast elevators—perfectly lighted, ventilated and heated—vacuum cleaned daily—the pivotal point of business for the next 20 years—reached directly by seventeen car lines—these are some of the reasons standing back of its phenomenal popularity.

Before the week ends, we predict the closing of leases on practically every remaining office. Your opportunity of identifying yourself with a success like ours is limited to the next few days. If you are contemplating a change in your base of operations, quick action is imperative.

PALOS VERDES RANCH TO BE A SECOND NEWPORT.

Engineers Instructed by New Owners of Former Bixby Holdings to Make Foundation Survey for Extensive Landscaping Operations—Broker Urges Effort to Secure Public Highway Through Property.

APPARENTLY confirming the prediction in The Times that the eastern financiers who recently purchased the 16,000-acre Palos Verdes ranch had in mind the establishment on the sightly ocean bluffs between San Pedro and Redondo Beach of a Pacific Coast Newport, comes the announcement that Carl F. Schader, representing the syndicate now owning the former Bixby holdings, and the man who negotiated the sale of the great shore line property to Frank A. Vanderlip and his associates, has instructed the engineering firm of Koebig & Koebig of this city to immediately begin a survey of the entire tract.

The engineers will plat the property in ten-foot contours, accurately establishing the various elevations and mapping the whole. After this foundation survey, Olmstead Bros., of Brookline, Mass., will assume charge of extensive landscaping operations covering a portion of the ranch lying in a strip of land fourteen miles long and three-quarters of a mile in width and extending along the shore edge of the property.

Schader states that the landscaping plans call for the laying out of more than fifty miles of boulevards and roadways in the strip in question. He declared yesterday that although the plans for the tract had been only partially matured, close to $2,000,000 would in all probability be expended by the Vanderlip interests in the perfection of the ocean side of the property for high-class residential purposes. Asked as to the probability that the new owners of the Palos Verdes ranch expected to create so near to Los Angeles a great colony of eastern millionaires, Schader parried by avowing that "some such plan seems to be in the air."

"One thing I would like to emphasize," said the realty broker, "and that is the necessity for action upon the part of the public of Southern California if they ever expect to secure the right of way for a highway through the Palos Verdes ranch from Redondo to San Pedro. I can state with authority that no plan for such a highway has been included in the development scheme for the ranch as thus far worked out. I am satisfied, too, that Mr. Vanderlip and his associates are public-spirited enough to make concessions in this respect, if properly approached and given to understand that such a highway is really desired by Southern Californians. If no steps are taken by Southern Californians themselves, I am satisfied that the ranch, or at least that part of it lying along the ocean, will forever be a walled-in private preserve.

"Los Angeles county hasn't a single mile of ocean-front boulevard worthy of the name, although both Santa Barbara and San Diego counties boast such drives. The bluffs along the shore line of the old Bixby ranch afford an opportunity for the creation of one of the most scenically beautiful ocean highways in the world, a drive that would be one of the peerless attractions for the visitors to this section during the exposition year. Here is an improvement worthy the best efforts of such organizations as the Automobile Association of Southern California, the Hotel Men's Association and the Chamber of Commerce."

Plans Completed for Fine Association Building—Architect of Structure Designer of Local "Y.M."

Plans for the modern and attractive structure to be erected at the southeast corner of East Ninth and Hemlock streets for the Colored Branch of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. were completed late in the past week by Arthur B. Benton and construction bids are now being taken. The new "Y" building, a perspective and complete description of which were published exclusively in the New Year edition of The Times, will be five stories in height and of steel frame and brick construction. It will cost in excess of $100,000.

Benton was the architect for the great eleven-story general Y.M.C.A. building on South Hope street and planned both the Young Women's Christian Association building on Hill street and the magnificent Mary Andrews Clark Memorial Home for Girls, which is conducted under the Y.W.C.A. auspices and which was recently completed on Loma drive. The first-named structure is one of the largest and finest association buildings in the world and the Hill-street building stands in a class by itself among the edifices erected by the Y.W.C.A. The girls' home is a splendid structure erected by former United States Senator W. A. Clark as a memorial to his mother and cost approximately $350,000.

The projected new home of the colored young men of the Y.M.C.A. will be one of the finest yet erected in the country for this branch of the association work. The construction of the building, it was announced yesterday, will probably be begun within the next ninety days.

LEASE ENTIRE BUILDING.

Jobbers of Clothing and Furnishings to Occupy Modern Quarters on Los Angeles Near Eighth.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through its leasing department, has just closed a ten-year lease for Emil Olcovich, as owner, to the firm of Norton Bros. & Morris, jobbers of men's clothing and furnishings, as lessee, and covering the whole of the five-story and basement fireproof building now being erected by the former on South Los Angeles street between Seventh and Eighth. The lessees have for a number of years been located on Los Angeles between Third and Fourth, in a two-story building. The move to larger quarters is necessitated by business expansion.

The new building contains approximately 54,000 square feet of floor space. It is equipped with freight and passenger elevators, dumb waiters and other modern appliances. The front of the structure will be unusually ornate for a wholesale building. The total rental consideration in the deal is not reported.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Hermosa Beach and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charge for our Architectural services if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

FOR SALE—
Do you know that good ranch property tributary to San Diego can be purchased right now at about one-third the price you would pay around Los Angeles. Such property is cheaper now than it ever will be again, at least such is my opinion and I believe an investigation will confirm my judgment and my statement. I am willing to show you the property if you will do the rest. If the property suited, you would want to buy it. If it did not fulfill your requirements, you would not want it and I would not expect you to purchase it. San Diego has a population of about eighty thousand and it will be a much larger city. I do not believe the climate is surpassed in all the world. I handle large tracts, and small ones, improved and unimproved, near San Diego and more remote. Here are a few samples:

No. 1.—Four hundred and ten acres, thirty-four miles from San Diego, with a good road all the way, for $6000 or less than $17 an acre. House not pretentious but comfortable, with good barn and silo. Soil suited for growing corn, grain, fruits, in fact, everything. Perhaps one hundred acres now in cultivation and nearly all of it suited for that purpose. Three miles from good town. Good family orchard of peaches, pears, grapes and other fruits, with a great abundance of water developed and available. Wonderful climate. Favorable terms. This is really a wonderful opportunity.

No. 2.—Three hundred and twenty acres, twenty-two miles from San Diego. Price $1700 or less than $5.50 an acre, with easy terms. At least one hundred and twenty-five acres suitable for cultivation, and adapted to the raising of fruits, grain, in fact, about everything. Fine grove of live oaks and sycamores, and five acres in eucalyptus. Small house and unpretentious outbuildings. Ten miles to nearest railroad station. Abundance of water, fertile soil, and a delightful place to live.

No. 3.—Two thousand acres about fifty miles north of San Diego, for $60,000 or $30 an acre. This is a fine ranch for all purposes. Owner estimates twelve hundred acres suitable for cultivation. Good house and outbuildings and soil of unsurpassed fertility. Near inland boulevard between San Diego and Los Angeles. Groves of live oaks and sycamores disposed conveniently over the land. The place is ready for immediate occupancy and is one of the finest ranches in the county. I do not know where there is similar property available at twice the price. Easy terms.

NORTH WHITTIER HEIGHTS.

ORANGE, LEMON, AVOCADO AND WALNUT LANDS ARE BEST,

THEREFORE THE CHEAPEST.

In the purchase of land for orange or lemon culture one should investigate conditions thoroughly to avoid the possibility of future disappointment. Soil, water conditions and relative elevations all are important. Unplanted proven citrus land is becoming scarcer and more valuable each day. By "proven citrus land" we mean land in districts were the crop and the young trees are practically immune from serious injury by frost or freeze.

Successful orange and lemon growers of California are investing in our North Whittier Heights property, which indicates that we undoubtedly have the soil, water and climatic conditions necessary for growing "citrus groves that pay," and that the prices at which the property is being sold are right. North Whittier Heights is being sold in planted and unplanted tracts of 5 acres and up and on easy terms if desired.

Come in and let us take you out by auto to see this choice property. Call, phone or write for descriptive folder and map of Southern California.

ALFALFA LAND.

with perpetual first water right on one of the best irrigating systems in California—over 4000 miles of canals through land, and greater part lies within two miles of the railroad, thus giving excellent shipping facilities. Two thriving towns are already established on this tract, and have banks, stores and churches. The soil is a rich alluvial loam, is level, no alkali, no hardpan and is especially adapted to growing all deciduous fruits, vegetables, alfalfa; the home of stock, dairy and hog raising.

8000 FARMERS

have purchased lands in this district within the past few years. All have succeeded, and many are wealthy. The income from 40 acres will make you independent. One Fresno-county creamery produced nearly a million pounds of butter in 1912, all from butter fat from this land. In addition to this the skimmed milk brought a large amount. Skimmed milk and one acre of alfalfa will fatten 15 hogs in six months. Health conditions are good and educational facilities are first class. A farm here will make you.

AN INCOME FOR LIFE.

The price is $125 per acre, with eight years to pay for it. This is not a pioneering proposition, but is a thickly-settled district where every man is a producer and is doing real things, and we can say that this land, which is the "Kingdom of the Kings River," is the cream of the San Joaquin Valley. If you have $55,000 and will consider a fine land colonization proposition on a railroad in Idaho, where investment would be absolutely secured, and earn very large returns, we would be pleased to submit particulars.

This is an ideal project for Swedes, Norwegians or others wishing good land, plenty of water and timber, and a cold, yet healthy climate, where settlers of small means can certainly make good.

Present owners are scattered non-residents, and unable to give it personal attention. A rigid investigation is courted.

Superintendent of Circulation, The Times.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2d day of January, 1914.

[Seal] T. L. CHAPIN,
Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of permitting agents, newsboys and dealers to return unsold copies of its issue. Neither does it misbrand or predate its editions, or inflate its circulation by printing more copies than are actually necessary to supply its patrons.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and superior in every respect to that of any other newspaper.

The Midwinter Number of "The Times."

On sale at The Times Building, Times Branch Office, 617 South Spring street, and by all news dealers and agents.

Price 10 cents; postpaid 15 cents. When mailed by individuals the postage is 9 cents.

Do not fail to send this wonderful encyclopedia of Southern California to out-of-town friends.

In 1913

The Times printed approximately 3,000,000 more lines of paid advertising than any other American newspaper, and almost twice as many separate "Want ads" or "Liners" as its nearest local contemporary. Circulation Superiority Means Advertising Supremacy.

SHOULD SAVE MEN.

They Are of Vastly More Value to the World Than Babies, Says Prof. Sedgwick of Boston.

[New York Sun:] Life insurance presidents' meeting at the Hotel Astor were told by Prof. W. T. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that a great movement is now afoot to advance, through a central agency, real "life extension" or the prolongation of life, particularly above the age of 40. We have made great strides, he said, in the reduction of infant mortality, but have neglected humanity in its later years. He urged that it was vastly more important to the world to conserve the trained worker of 40 and above than the baby, which was at best only raw material.

Prof. Sedgwick's subject was "Public Health Movement in America—Today and Tomorrow." Before taking up the interest of insurance companies in all public health propaganda he contrasted the attitude of the world in the past, when ill health was regarded as a visitation of Providence, with the more advanced views of today. Much preliminary work had to be done in the way of popular education to prepare the wheat for the harvest, but now the harvest is at hand. I am told there is a movement afoot, about which I am not at liberty to speak publicly, to secure through a central agency an attempt to get real life extension or the prolongation of life.

"It is one of the sad things that so far we have succeeded chiefly in saving life at the lower end—baby life. We have prolonged infant life and diminished infant mortality; we have been much slower in securing any prolongation of life above the age of 40. That is where we want extension. A baby is a very useful thing, but it certainly is not of any use compared with a life at 40, which has been well prepared at great expense and which ought to be efficient and which we ought to prolong just as much as we possibly can."

Women in Business.

[Chicago Journal:] Five thousand women in Chicago own their own business. Nearly three times that number are managers of the industries in which they are engaged. These figures have nothing to do with the home—some woman is always manager there.

If women are competent to manage their own business and that of exacting private employers, it is not easy to say why they should not have a hand in managing public matters through the ballot. Chicago women already have partial suffrage, which is sure to be made complete at no distant day. But there are still thirty-eight States in which women are classed politically with children, idiots, insane persons and convicted felons.

So long as this condition prevails even in a single commonwealth, there will be ample room and justification for suffrage propaganda.

The Plates of the Tuckabatches.

[Tallequah Democrat:] When the Creek or Muskogee Indians adopted into their tribe the remnants of other tribes which were nearly extinct many superstitions were found among them. One of these tribes was the Tuckabatches. The legends of the Creeks state that the Tuckabatches brought with them seven plates, the origin and object of which have puzzled scientific men for centuries. The Tuckabatches claim that these plates were given them by their ancestors. They were not to be handled by all persons, only by particular men, and those chosen by the chief or Micco of the tribe. Five of the plates were of copper and two of brass. The copper plates were about eighteen inches long and seven inches wide; the brass ones being round and eighteen inches in diameter, having two characters on them similar to the letters A and E connected. The plates were kept buried under the house of the chief and are believed to be still in existence.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

National Pacific Stock Active and Up on Heavy Sales—Associated Oil Continues to Advance.

The heaviest sale of oil stocks, as far as the number of shares go, was that of National Pacific yesterday morning. A total of 61,000 shares were sold and the price beginning at 4⅛ ran up to 4⅝. There was a rumor to the effect that some of the National property is developing better than has been expected and a producer is being looked forward to in a short time.

Associated Oil continued on the jump, selling at close to $42.50, an advance of $1.50 over the close of the day previous. As already stated, this advance is caused by the new contracts for oil being signed up by the company and the discontinuance of the almost ridiculously low prices that were received for several years from several purchasing corporations which were paying about 15 cents a barrel.

Union Oil showed some strength, selling up to $58, and there was some demand for Amalgamated at $74.25. Maricopa Northern sold to 7⅝ and was in good call.

Los Angeles Investment stock to the extent of 1100 shares was traded. The price ranged from 1.02½ to 1.04½, showing its best strength at the close of the session. There was a fair call for Consolidated mines which was the only active stock on the list.

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—We opened around last night's closing prices, with brokers who usually act for the big spot house the best buyer, but offerings proved too heavy and under scattered selling induced no doubt by the turner figures showing 474,000 bales ginned for the last period, against 468,000 last year, a decline of 10 to 12 points was scored. Good trade buying was again encountered on this break and this with local shorts covering carried closing prices back to about last night's figures. With over 14,500,000 crop views gaining ground daily the prospect of a record acreage taking hold of the trade and the South apparently a more willing seller, we can see little at the moment to encourage operations on the long side of cotton.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The oil issues were the features of the curb. They opened at the low price of the day and improved right up to the close, with Standard Oil of California very strong. Mining stocks were quiet. Boston coppers opened a shade lower and lost fractions during the first hour, principally in sympathy with the New York market. Butte and Superior was fairly active and lost large fractions. The market continued slow and inclined to shade toward the close.

Abrupt Depression Follows a Quiet Opening on the New York Exchange That Gave No Indication of the Impending Decline — Selling Leads Up to a Partialy Recovery.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Stocks were depressed abruptly today after a quiet opening which gave no hint of the impending decline. Although various adverse influences were brought to bear upon the market they were not of sufficient importance to explain the sudden unloading of stocks in the first hour, during which leading issues were sold in blocks of several thousand shares. The selling apparently was professional. Toward the close a partial recovery was made.

Activities on the long side were curtailed by the tightness of money at the year-end period, although the bank statement gave promise of an improvement. An actual cash gain of $11,788,000 was shown and although there was an increase in loans of over $16,000,000 reflecting operations in connection with January first payments, a gain of nearly $3,000,000 in surplus was reported.

A large increase in business failures and further railroad reports for November which showed severe declines in earnings influenced sentiment unfavorably. Bears sought to make capital from the withdrawal of the Morgan firm from various directorates on the ground that this step with similar action to come on the part of other large financial interests, indicated a period of transition which would bring unsettlement in the securities market.

The street was inclined, however, to take the opposite view, holding that such changes were in line with the trend of the times and ultimately would improve the position of the financial community.

Bonds were under pressure. Total sales par values, $11,236,000.

U. S. 3's were unchanged on call on the week. All other government bonds and the Panama issues advanced 1-4 to 3-4.

HUMPTY DUMPTY IN THE CORN PIT.

RECORD BREAKING YIELD IS PROMISED BY ARGENTINA.

With an Immense Stock Already on Hand the Cereal Suffers a Sensational Tumble on Chicago Board of Trade—Market Shows a Loss Up to Two and an Eighth.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Corn today underwent a sensational tumble in value. The immense stock here and the promise of a record-breaking yield in Argentina formed too heavy a burden to withstand. Although final prices were steady at a considerable reaction, the market showed a loss of ⅝ @ ½c to 2⅛c net.

Wheat finished ⅛ to ⅝ up, oats finished unchanged and provisions varying from 15c decline to an advance of 2½.

The rains, which had been of benefit to Argentine corn, led to worry on the part of wheat speculators lest damage might be done to stacked wheat in Argentina. Bulls were further encouraged by reports of better flour trade.

Oats were in demand from commission houses sufficiently to overcome an early decline, which resulted from sympathy with the weakness in corn.

Strength of hog prices put firmness into the provision market.

Local Stock Market Activities

By Jno. O. Knight.

Trading maintained a firm tone throughout the week. Price changes were slight, but such changes as did occur were for the most part in the way of a betterment. Indications that the long period of liquidation is about over continue to multiply, and holders of idle money are showing a keener interest in getting their funds employed while they may still take advantage of the unusually attractive prices at which the very best investment securities may be had.

Local bank stocks are experiencing a better inquiry than for months, and it looks as if the decline in this quarter may have run its course. Bids for German American Savings and Farmers' and Merchants' National have lately been at higher figures. Both First National and Citizens' National have also shown a firmer tone.

Accumulation of bonds has been quietly going on. Several municipal issues now rule at slightly higher prices than prevailed a few months back. Los Angeles Home Telephone issues are up from two to three points and Union Oil 5's continue their advance. Trading in the latter has been in larger volume than usual and their gain for the last few weeks amounts to nearly six points.

A pretty fair index to market conditions may be gained from the fact local brokers generally report a decided excess of buying inquiries over selling orders. Up to the last week or two, just the reverse condition obtained in a very marked degree.

The date on which opportunity closes for transfer of General Petroleum stock and bonds for shares of the British syndicate headed by Andrew Weir that is taking over this property is set for January 7. Any stock or bond holders who do not thoroughly understand the plan of transfer may secure information and the proper blanks at the office of John O. Knight & Co.

Associated Oil sprang into activity late in the week and easily assumed leadership among the petroleum issues. The buying movement originated in New York, where Standard Oil of California has lately been the center of much trading interest in a spectacular advance. Easterners are undoubtedly becoming more seriously interested in the California Oil situation, and many believe that better buying from that quarter may be looked for before long.

Subject to confirmation and acceptance, we offer the following:

Intelligent machine.
Imperial Valley man has perfected a cotton picker which displays human acumen.

Experimental.

SUCTION COTTON PICKER ON TRIAL AT EL CENTRO.

EL CENTRO, Jan. 3.—A number of cotton-picking machines have been exhibited in the valley of late, most prominent of which are those operated by gasoline and electricity.

The gasoline machine shown in the illustration is mounted on a truck which is supposed to enable it to clear the highest bushes, but special arrangements will have to be made for the Imperial Valley cotton since the Egyptian variety seldom grows shorter than from five and a half to seven feet. It is operated with a gasoline suction pump which draws the cotton through a nozzle that is equipped with hook-shaped apparatus to loosen the more obstinate bolls.

The cotton is then forced into a wire cage, thereby eliminating all dirt and foreign matter which it might have gathered and is kept from blowing out by two cone-shaped drums. After the cage is full a top is placed on it and the whole compressed into a convenient 200-pound bale for handling to the gin.

The machine is operated by one man who can pick a whole plant by merely brushing the nozzle over it, taking care at the same time not to injure the green bolls. In this manner one man has been known to pick 2000 pounds a day, or the equivalent of labor of six or seven experienced pickers.

The electric picker is invented by W. R. McCombs, in the valley at present, and is operated on the principle that electricity has a magnetic attraction for the cotton fibers. Two huge plates, charged with electricity pass over the rows of cotton. The first is calculated to loosen the fibers from the boll while the second attracts the cotton to it. From the electric plates the cotton fibers are then raked into a hood through which they are elevated and aerated by a fan, to clean the leaves and chaff from them. The cotton is then pressed into convenient sacks for the gin.

This method automatically eliminates all danger of picking unripe cotton, and should either or both of them prove a success, they will probably mean millions of dollars to the cotton growers in the solution of the picking problem, which is the one great question before them at present.

PLANT COMPLETED.

Glass Factory at Newport Heights Said to Have Advance Orders for All It Can Produce.

WEST NEWPORT, Jan. 3.—The new Branagan glass factory, located at the foot of the bluffs leading to Newport Heights, was opened on January 1 amid much rejoicing by the townspeople. The new industry is the first of its kind on the South Coast. The factory, which is to turn out art glass products of many kinds, already has advance orders for much of its ware. The pay roll, it is announced, will start out at the rate of from $700 to $1000 per week. Plans have been made whereby a $40,000 addition may be made to the plant in the near future.

The Orange county good roads lateral between Newport and Santa Ana will soon be a reality, as a large force of men has been gathered at Harper Station, near Newport Heights to carry out the work of macadamizing. This new boulevard leads directly through West Newport and Newport Heights.

BIG TREE SHIPMENT.

A carload of apple trees, consisting of Rome Beautys, Winesas, Delicious and Arkansas Blacks, arrived at Yucaipa on Christmas Day from Oregon. Or. There are 24,000 trees in the car, according to reports, and they will be planted on the South Mesa of the Redlands & Yucaipa Land Company. It is reported that another carload of trees will be shipped in to the valley from the same nursery the latter part of this month. J. Claussen, of Claussen Brothers, which firm has for the past four years handled Yucaipa Valley Apple Lands, has removed to Yucaipa, where he will look after his own orchard holdings as well as those of clients. E. M. Claussen will continue the selling agency for the land company in this city.

APARTMENTS SOLD.

E. W. Cason Co., associated hotel brokers, report the sale of the furniture and a seven-year lease of the Stratford apartments, Sixth and Burlington streets, for a consideration of $11,000. The lease transferred calls, it is said, for $50,000. The Stratford was built between three and four years ago and contains 125 rooms. The seller is H. C. Robinson and the purchaser is John P. Bradford of Pontiac, Ill., and a new comer to Los Angeles. Possession has been given.

BRINGS HIGH PRICE.

E. R. Boyden and James H. Balagh report the exchange of a new four-story brick apartment-house at No. 681 Burlington street, owned by Leon Figheria. The property has recently been leased for a term of ten years to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips, for a rental of $10,000 a year. It was sold by Figheria to a local investor, the consideration being given at $120,000.

RESUME MEETINGS.

The regular weekly meetings of the Los Angeles Realty Board will be resumed next Thursday. The ex-presidents of the board have been appointed chairmen of the day for the meetings beginning January 8, and ending February 5. The following men will preside on these occasions: January 8, W. M. Garland; January 15, Charles G. Andrews; January 22, Byron Erkenbrecher; January 29, Oscar E. Farish, and February 5, Leonard Merrill. Garland will have as his principal speaker next Thursday Stoddard Jess, first vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, who will speak on "Conditions as They Exist."

FIRM DISSOLVED.

The firm of Conklin & Mahoney has been dissolved, Mahoney retiring. Leon R. Conklin will continue the business at 812 Herman W. Hellman building. Conklin reports the following sales in conjunction with Bryan & Bradford & Co. Ralph C. Hamlin for J. F. Mahoney, property at No. 818 West Sixteenth street, 48x120 feet, $15,000; to Garagan & McCutchen for Carolina Stopfer, lot at No. 1341 Wall street, 50x100 feet, $5000; to Leon R. Conklin for R. Hamlin, house and lot at No. 2945 Kansas avenue, $4000, and to J. F. Mahoney for R. Hamlin, No. 6704 Figueroa street, house and lot, $2000.

PLANS ACADEMY.

Plans are being drawn by a local architect for a two-story brick dancing academy to be erected by Henry Laub on the south side of Orange street just east of Alvarado. The structure will adjoin at the rear the New De Luxe Theater now being built by Laub on Alvarado. Two dancing halls will be provided in the new building, one on each floor, and each 35x100 feet in dimensions. In conjunction, kitchens will be installed with the view to offering service for private functions of one kind and other that may be held in the building. An attached five-room flat will provide living accomodations for the lessee of the property.

VOTE SEWER BONDS.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Jan. 3.—Huntington Beach voted almost unanimously in favor of a bond issue of $35,000 for the main trunk sewer lines. All the surveys for the new system are complete and as soon as the bonds have been engraved, contracts will be let for construction. The Huntington Beach Company has ordered the survey and construction of a street near the west end of its properties running from Ocean avenue to the intersection with Garfield, one mile back.

In 1913

The Times printed approximately 3,000,000 more lines of paid advertising than any other American newspaper, and almost twice as many separate "Want ads" or "Liners" as its nearest local contemporary. Circulation Superiority Means Advertising Supremacy.

REAL ESTATE SELLING—SUCCESS OR FAILURE.

BY LOUIS HONIG.

On the Pacific Coast, the most flagrant offender today is the real estate promoter, who figures upon selling his land by an indulgence in loosely composed superlatives which he hopes to see published in the news columns. With an unbridled enthusiasm he either writes or dictates a glowing tribute to his own land, sure that a palpitating public awaits his utterance with suspended breath. Then, with pure magnanimity actuating his motives, he dashes off a ten-inch advertisement. This he thinks is a sufficient sop to the publisher for the many free columns of reading gush which he or his press agent has so generously presented to the newspaper. When the free publicity in typewritten form is waste-basketed, the promoter wants to know the reason why the newspaper is trying to hold back the development of the community. The trouble in many instances lies with the ignorance of the promoter, who fails to distinguish the difference between community interests and his own interests. He likewise is thoroughly unfamiliar with what real advertising is and what it will do when founded on a basis of business facts.

Making due allowance for certain well-established differences existing between real estate advertising and ordinary commercial advertising, the sooner the former is put upon the basis of the latter, the better it will be for the interests of all advertisers. The newspaper itself through its departments should be the judge of what involves the interest of the community and what is news to its own subscribers. The moment the news element is lacking or the general interest lost sight of, such publicity becomes as harmful as it is good.

The day is rapidly approaching when real estate and community advertising will be viewed exactly as the advertising of a food product, wearing apparel, or any other article of merchandise. It will be based upon a thorough study of every important condition involving its selling. It is generally conceded that unless a product is meritorious, it should not be advertised—and this not so much on ethical as on practical business grounds. Secondly, a sales organization must be built up and scientifically adjusted to sales policies. The use of advertising in real estate selling, as in everything else, must be put on a reduction-of-sales-cost foundation. The only advertising that is worth anything at all is that which is basically sound along these lines.

These are primer lessons, but most important. Their neglect is outsticking in the operations of every real estate failure this section of the country has recorded.

The sum and substance of business is intertwined with confidence and belief. There is no great strain on a man's future when he invests in a package of breakfast food or a suit of clothes, but he rarely does either unless there has been instilled in him a feeling that the food or the clothes is worthy of his purchase. How much more so, then, is it necessary to secure this confidence and belief when a man is called upon to purchase land, either for a residence or a farm. The advertising that does not ring true is bound to lose itself in effectiveness. There was a time when shout and noise, the get-in-before-twelve-today-or-this-opportunity-will-ever-pass-away spasm brought what seemed to be abundant success. But that day has gone forever. It is only believable advertising that counts now. The other kind increases the cost-per-inquiry and makes the cost-per-sale prohibitive. It is always well to pivot advertising on sales-cost percentage.

Belief and confidence will not come with mere statement. There must be a reason why. And if there is a reason why, or reasons why, the public will respond, the basic selling conditions being favorable. A riot of superlatives published in the real estate section as news will no longer bring response, but honest, well-balanced, forcefully-presented facts, put forth without equivocation by the man who has property to sell, will accomplish their purpose. The statement of the seller with the seller's own name attached is the important thing to the buyer. But there must be sincerity and real compelling reasons buttressed in with such statement. These are the things that fortify, that help to secure conviction and belief, without which there can be no prospect. This is the right way, the way that successful manufacturers and merchants utilize for the development of business.

HARBOR ITEMS.

Three passenger steamers were included in the movements today. The Yale arrived from San Francisco and proceeded to San Diego on her last Saturday trip before her annual overhauling. Until she comes off the dry dock after the overhauling of the Harvard there will be a sailing to San Diego on Thursday only. The Queen arrived from San Francisco and will proceed to San Diego tomorrow. The recent change in the schedule of the Queen to give a Sunday sailing to San Diego instead of Saturday has given the Pacific Coast line an advantage inasmuch as the business on Saturday heretofore has been divided with the Pacific Navigation Company, which also has had a Saturday sailing. The Beaver sailed for San Francisco and Portland with a big list of passengers.

Six steam schooners completed discharge of lumber cargo today and sailed for northern ports. The Saginaw and General Hubbard will go into dry dock at San Francisco for overhauling. The F. S. Loop will go to Puget Sound to reload and the Tiverton, and Saginaw sailed for San Francisco for orders. The Shoshone will reload at Portland.

The heavy swell running along the coast has delayed several vessels due here that have been bar-bound at San Francisco. The steamer William H. Murphy was the only lumber carrier that arrived today. She came from Eureka direct with a cargo of redwood for the Pacific Lumber Company. The steamer Yale on her voyage down the coast from San Francisco last night shipped a heavy sea and had several windows broken but the damage was not serious.

On account of the heavy ground swell the surge of the sea in the outer harbor snapped several lines on the new Danish motor ship Siam, which was compelled to go to anchorage in the outer harbor until arrangements were made to berth her at the Crescent wharf. While the steamer was at anchor about 200 prominent members of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and city officials were guests of Andrew Weir, the London ship owner and Capt. John Barneson, who are in Southern California investigating the properties of the Union Oil Company, included in which is the 157-acre reclamation project known as the Miner fill where the Siam docked.

The Luckenback steamer Lyra arrived this morning from San Francisco and after loading 350 tons of wine, canned goods and rubber junk at the Pacific slip for New York, proceeded to Balboa.

labor with their hands, "loosen up." In the offices of the architects of Los Angeles, tucked in cabinets and laid out on draughting boards, are plans for many a building, the prospective owner of which could well afford to begin immediately upon construction operations. If such men want to aid in putting a stop to what they bewail as the present "tight times," they should get these plans into the hands of contractors. The moment the fellows who must borrow before they can build, find money available, things will go on with a rush and the men with the cash will find the prices of materials, now so near rock-bottom quotations, back where they always are when times are flourishing and everyone is spending.

It is needless to say that the bankers themselves could help if they would develop a little more liberality toward investors seeking loans on good security. It is altogether likely, of course, that these custodians of the public's money savings know quite well what they are doing, but a large part of that same public, in Los Angeles at least, with difficulty restrains its curiosity as to just what is "los" in financial circles. One thing is sure and that is that the private money lenders could bring about an immediate improvement in conditions if they would quit following the lead of the banks. Good loans are plentiful in Los Angeles for those with the cash on hand or readily available and once things are back on the crest, some of these overly-cautious or overly-greedy lenders will be more than willing to get their money out on terms that would now be scorned.

OF HOLDINGS.

from London say that Garden estate which the ford sold is but the third value of his holdings in that city. Greater value by a considerable figure would have to be found for his properties before they would nearly equal the values firmly established here. There is in New York, for instance, a tract of just about five acres which as it stands today would bring more than $50,000,000 if it could be sold. The area embraces the four small blocks bounded by Broadway, Hanover place, Wall street and Exchange place. Here are to be found such structures as the great New York Stock Exchange; the site, called the most valuable for its size in the world, at the corner of Broad and Wall streets, on which the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. are erecting their $2,000,000 banking house; the square block occupied by the home of the National City Bank, once the United States customhouse, and a few dozen more buildings whose names and locations are associated with the great development of the country during the last half century and with the financial power of the world.

Probably there is no section in the world of equal size that can boast of values nearly equalling those in this golden five acres of Wall street. The city bank alone is valued at around $6,000,000, while the value of the Stock Exchange property runs to considerably over $5,000,000. The Morgan office building when completed will represent a valuation of nearly $4,000,000, while many other structures in the area would bring considerably more than $1,000,000 each.

RECORD VALUES.

London is not to be despised, however, for while New York is its leader in this respect, the older city has a few acres itself of which to boast. The three and one-quarter acres embraced in the Bank of England site is probably the most valuable large plot of real estate outside of New York City. It is estimated to be worth £6,524,000, or about $32,000,000. Its square foot value, however, is only $243, which by comparison with some of the land values in New York is a mere trifle. An average of $600 a square foot was paid several years ago for the corner of Wall street and Broadway and at the time the Bankers' Trust Company purchased the Gillender building at the northwest corner of Wall and Nassau it was said to have paid $675 a square foot for the property. Forty years ago Anthony Drexel, in buying a part of the present site of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s building, paid $348 a square foot, and in the recent sale of the property as high as $700 a square foot was reported to have been paid.

According to reports from London the highest price ever paid for property there was at the rate of $15,000,000 an acre, or about $375 a square foot, and that was for only a small property.

It is for the very reason that large areas of property on Manhattan Island are not held under single ownerships that the city has progressed at the rate and to the extent it has. In all the borough of Manhattan there is no single estate holding which can be compared in size with that of the Duke of Bedford, but it seems to have followed that wherever a considerable number of properties have been gathered under one ownership that immediate neighborhood has suffered from stagnation and has not prospered with the rest of the city.

One of the best examples of this is the Sailors' Snug Harbor property, bordering on lower Fifth avenue, and extending east across Broadway to Fourth avenue, in the vicinity of Astor place. Under individual owners this property very likely would be worth today several times its value. It grew from vacant lands to considerable importance when the business district moved up there many years ago and individuals leased the property and erected buildings. But when the buildings grew old and needed to be replaced the Snug Harbor trustees did not have the money to rebuild them. The result was that rents declined and the big firms that would have maintained the district as one of the best moved to more modern structures in other sections.

BUILDING AND SELLING.

Local Firm Reports Sale of Bungalows and Lots—Has Plans Out for Fifty New Houses.

O. F. Scherer and Henry Scheer report the following sales: Six-room bungalow, No. 207 North Kingsley drive, to Mary A. Fleming, $4000; six-room bungalow, No. 211 North Kingsley drive, to R. E. Burkett, $4250; six-room bungalow, No. 214 North Kingsley drive, to B. M. Tuttle, $4350. The same firm is now building fifteen bungalows between First and Temple streets on Kingsley drive.

A recent sale reported by O. F. Scherer is that of a tract of thirty-five lots on Florence avenue, just off Main street, for $20,000, Cecile L. Simmons being the buyer. A contract has been let by Scherer for the erection of thirty-five bungalows in the same vicinity. These will be placed upon the market as soon as completed.

BIG HOTEL TO OPEN THURSDAY.

OAK KNOLL CARAVANSARY IS READY FOR GUESTS.

Magnificent Fireproof Hostelry, Evolved from Unsightly Bulk of Unfinished Wentworth, Hardly Recognizable as One-Time Eyesore of Crown City.

PASADENA, Jan. 3.—The Huntington, the magnificent hotel which H. E. Huntington recently finished at Oak Knoll, in Pasadena, will open next Thursday. Special trains from New York and Chicago will arrive on Wednesday night carrying the first of the guests for the new caravansary, which will be under the management of D. M. Linnard, formerly in charge of the Maryland, in the same city.

Huntington, tired of seeing the unsightly bulk of the old unfinished Wentworth Hotel looming up on the property adjoining his estate, last winter bought the place and announced his intention of completing the structure. He has done decidedly more. Employing Myron Hunt for his architect, he has practically rebuilt it. The addition of the sixth story and a roof are the smallest of the features in the improvement. The big hostelry has been completely remodeled inside and out.

The whole interior of the main floor has been changed about. What were the walls and the windows are now the interior arches, while new walls have been built further out, in which are immense windows commanding views of the valley. From the most unwelcome structure in Oak Knoll the old Wentworth has been made into the most lavishly built and furnished building in the district.

The grounds will be elaborately laid out. Many shrubs and plants are being taken from the Huntington estate. The gardens will be equal to any in the Southland. In one pansy bed, 15,000 flowers are being set out. The landscaping plans call for three-quarters of a mile of pergola, all covered with roses.

As adjuncts to the hotel are a garage which will be the largest on the Pacific Coast, and a hotel of itself for the employees of the place, who number 250. There will also be a gymnasium, and golf links for the use of the guests are now being laid out on the Huntington estate adjoining the hotel.

FORTY NEW HOUSES.

Extensive Building Operations in Hollenbeck Heights Tract to Transform Part of District.

The delivery of lumber for forty new houses on Hollenbeck Heights during the holiday weeks marked the start of another large subdivision improvement project. The tract, already well dotted with small bungalows and cottages, is to have in addition to these forty new houses, still others for which designs are now under way.

Hollenbeck Heights, which is being handled by the Braly-Janss Investment Company, fronts on Stephenson avenue, which, since it has been paved and has become a busy thoroughfare. It is just beyond the new Y.M.C.A., athletic field. Several new apartment-houses and a number of small stores have risen in the district in the past few months.

TRUE TO TYPE.

New West Adams-Street Mansion Is Thoroughly French, Both in Exterior Design and Interior Finish.

One of the handsomest houses completed in this city in the past year is the beautiful new home of Louise F. Denker on West Adams street, just opposite Eighth avenue. The dwelling, planned by B. Cooper Corbett, is a notable example of the French renaissance architecture of the eighteenth century as adapted to modern purposes, and is of the most substantial construction, being of brick, with plastered exterior and clay tile roof.

The finish and arrangement of the interior are in strict keeping with the architectural style of the exterior. The locks of the French doors are of special design and imported from France. The entrance hall is 20x30 feet in size and contains a circular stairway, the whole being in mahogany. Fabrics and panel decorations of the Louis XV period give character to the living and dining-rooms, the former of which is in mahogany and the latter in oak. The ceilings are of the cornice type and are worked out in ornamental plaster designs. The main rooms, with the hall, are connected with wide openings, extending to the height of the ceilings, and constitute practically one large room.

FEW HOUSES FOR RENT.

Practically no Vacant Dwellings in South Pasadena—New Subdivision on the Market.

SOUTH PASADENA, Jan. 3.—A sure index of the prosperity of a community is the number of houses for rent. If there are many vacant dwellings it is indicative that the people are either leaving the place, or not coming in as fast as expected. On the other hand a scarcity of houses means a constantly growing town. In South Pasadena there is practically not a vacant house, and as soon as any are vacated, there is always some one waiting. In addition there are dwellings going up in all parts of the city.

The Board of Trustees has given approval to a plat of a subdivision belonging to Miss Mabel Wilson, located between Magnolia and Hope streets, and extending from the Santa Fe tracks westward to an alley. The center of the subdivision provides for a court off Hope street. The tract will be subdivided into building lots and placed on the market.

Milton Aldridge has exchanged his house on El Centro street and another house at No. 322 Hawthorne street for a thirty-acre ranch at Ontario. The property was purchased for an investment.

A six-room bungalow is nearing completion at the southwest corner of Marengo avenue and Mission street for P. J. Dolan, a local real estate broker.

JOINS PROMINENT FIRM.

Coincident with the beginning of the new year is the announcement of the formation of the Braly-Janss-Badger Company, real estate developers, builders and subdividers. H. Gordon Badger, formerly subdivision manager for Robert Marsh & Co., is the new member of the firm, which succeeds to the business of the Braly-Janss Company, composed of Arthur H. Braly and Her-man Janss. Braly and Janss are capitalists and developers, as well as real estate brokers. The Braly-Janss-Badger Company will continue to occupy for the present, at least, the quarters of the Braly-Janss Company, in the Pacific Electric building. Badger is to be sales manager of the new firm.

FINE HOSTELRY FOR SEA FRONT.

Building Completes Chain of New Improvements.

Plans of Owners Call for Future Enlargement.

Construction work has been started upon a five-story brick hotel and store building, projected for the southeast corner of Pier avenue and Ocean Front, in Santa Monica, by W. M. Gottschalk and A. Sieroty of this city.

The building will be the last link in a chain of handsome structures erected in the block fronting the ocean, between Marine avenue and Pier avenue since the disastrous Ocean Park fire.

The new building will, in harmony with the adjoining buildings, be faced with cream glazed brick and terra cotta, and will follow the Italian Renaissance style of architecture. It will be 50x85 feet in size.

The first floor will be subdivided into storerooms, and will contain the hotel lobby. The entrance to the hotel will be on Pier avenue.

The upper floors will contain sixty rooms and twenty baths. Provision is being made to increase the capacity to 100 rooms by annexing the adjoining property, owned by Michael Kelly, and raising the present one-story structure to conform with the corner building. This will give the building an ocean frontage of eighty-seven feet.

The new structure will contain an electric elevator and will have steam heat and hot water in every room. The basement is arranged for a cafe. The cost of the completed building will be $75,000. The architects are S. Tilden Norton and Frederick H. Wallis of Los Angeles.

BUSY VICINITY.

Several Attractive Improvements Under Way and Projected at Main, Spring and Ninth.

Construction work has been started on an attractive new building to supplant an unsightly frame structure which has long stood at the northeast corner of Ninth and Main. The improvement is being erected by Tom Mack, who owns the corner, and who will occupy the place with a buffet and cigar store. The building will be of blue brick, with tile trimmings; will be 40x60 feet in size and one story high. The interior will be finished in mahogany and tile. Building and fixtures, it is announced, will cost about $20,000.

Extensive alterations and improvements are now under way on the W. M. Garland building at Ninth and Spring, while the finishing touches are being put on the twelve-story Marsh-Strong building, directly across Ninth street. The new Bankers' Trust and Savings Bank is scheduled to open for business on the ground floor of the latter building about March 1.

Nearing completion is a three-story brick building, thirty feet west of the Marsh-Strong building, and which is being erected for the Hooker estate. Another three-story brick block is to be built immediately on the Williams property, adjoining the Marsh-Strong building to the south. In the same active center, at the intersection of Main and Spring streets, the city will, within a few days, begin work upon a new comfort station.

QUICK WORK OF IT.

Disposing of his interests in the Baldwin Equipment and Supply Company of Chicago, of which he was president and general manager, L. H. Baldwin arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago, last week bought property, and is now a full-fledged citizen of the southland. Baldwin has purchased, through C. E. Harshbarger, manager of the bungalow department of Robert Marsh & Co., an attractive bungalow at No. 3628 Arlington avenue. The consideration is given at $7500. The property was owned by Lee Laning, a contractor and builder, who built it for a home. The residence occupies a large corner lot.

According to reports from London the highest price ever paid for property there was at the rate of $15,000,000 an acre, or about $375 a square foot, and that was for only a small property.

If there are many vacant dwellings it is indicative that the people are either leaving the place, or not coming in as fast as expected. On the other hand a scarcity of houses means a constantly growing town. In South Pasadena there is practically not a vacant house, and as soon as any are vacated, there is always some one waiting. In addition there are dwellings going up in all parts of the city.

The Board of Trustees has given approval to a plat of a subdivision belonging to Miss Mabel Wilson, located between Magnolia and Hope streets, and extending from the Santa Fe tracks westward to an alley. The center of the subdivision provides for a court off Hope street. The tract will be subdivided into building lots and placed on the market.

Milton Aldridge has exchanged his house on El Centro street and another house at No. 322 Hawthorne street for a thirty-acre ranch at Ontario. The property was purchased for an investment.

A six-room bungalow is nearing completion at the southwest corner of Marengo avenue and Mission street for P. J. Dolan, a local real estate broker.

JOINS PROMINENT FIRM.

Coincident with the beginning of the new year is the announcement of the formation of the Braly-Janss-Badger Company, real estate developers, builders and subdividers. H. Gordon Badger, formerly subdivision manager for Robert Marsh & Co., is the new member of the firm, which succeeds to the business of the Braly-Janss Company, composed of Arthur H. Braly and Herman Janss. Braly and Janss are capitalists and developers, as well as real estate brokers. The Braly-Janss-Badger Company will continue to occupy for the present, at least, the quarters of the Braly-Janss Company, in the Pacific Electric building. Badger is to be sales manager of the new firm.

Building Completes Chain of New Improvements.

Plans of Owners Call for Future Enlargement.

Construction work has been started upon a five-story brick hotel and store building, projected for the southeast corner of Pier avenue and Ocean Front, in Santa Monica, by W. M. Gottschalk and A. Sieroty of this city.

The building will be the last link in a chain of handsome structures erected in the block fronting the ocean, between Marine avenue and Pier avenue since the disastrous Ocean Park fire.

The new building will, in harmony with the adjoining buildings, be faced with cream glazed brick and terra cotta, and will follow the Italian Renaissance style of architecture. It will be 50x85 feet in size.

The first floor will be subdivided into storerooms, and will contain the hotel lobby. The entrance to the hotel will be on Pier avenue.

The upper floors will contain sixty rooms and twenty baths. Provision is being made to increase the capacity to 100 rooms by annexing the adjoining property, owned by Michael Kelly, and raising the present one-story structure to conform with the corner building. This will give the building an ocean frontage of eighty-seven feet.

The new structure will contain an electric elevator and will have steam heat and hot water in every room. The basement is arranged for a cafe. The cost of the completed building will be $75,000. The architects are S. Tilden Norton and Frederick H. Wallis of Los Angeles.

BUSY VICINITY.

Several Attractive Improvements Under Way and Projected at Main, Spring and Ninth.

Construction work has been started on an attractive new building to supplant an unsightly frame structure which has long stood at the northeast corner of Ninth and Main. The improvement is being erected by Tom Mack, who owns the corner, and who will occupy the place with a buffet and cigar store. The building will be of blue brick, with tile trimmings; will be 40x60 feet in size and one story high. The interior will be finished in mahogany and tile. Building and fixtures, it is announced, will cost about $30,000.

Extensive alterations and improvements are now under way on the W. M. Garland building at Ninth and Spring, while the finishing touches are being put on the twelve-story Marsh-Strong building, directly across Ninth street. The new Bankers' Trust and Savings Bank is scheduled to open for business on the ground floor of the latter building about March 1.

Nearing completion is a three-story brick building, thirty feet west of the Marsh-Strong building, and which is being erected for the Hooker estate. Another three-story brick block is to be built immediately on the Williams property, adjoining the Marsh-Strong building to the south. In the same active center, at the intersection of Main and Spring streets, the city will, within a few days, begin work upon a new comfort station.

QUICK WORK OF IT.

Disposing of his interests in the Baldwin Equipment and Supply Company of Chicago, of which he was president and general manager, L. H. Baldwin arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago, last week bought property, and is now a full-fledged citizen of the southland. Baldwin has purchased, through C. E. Harshbarger, manager of the bungalow department of Robert Marsh & Co., an attractive bungalow at No. 3628 Arlington avenue. The consideration is given at $7500. The property was owned by Lee Laning, a contractor and builder, who built it for a home. The residence occupies a large corner lot.

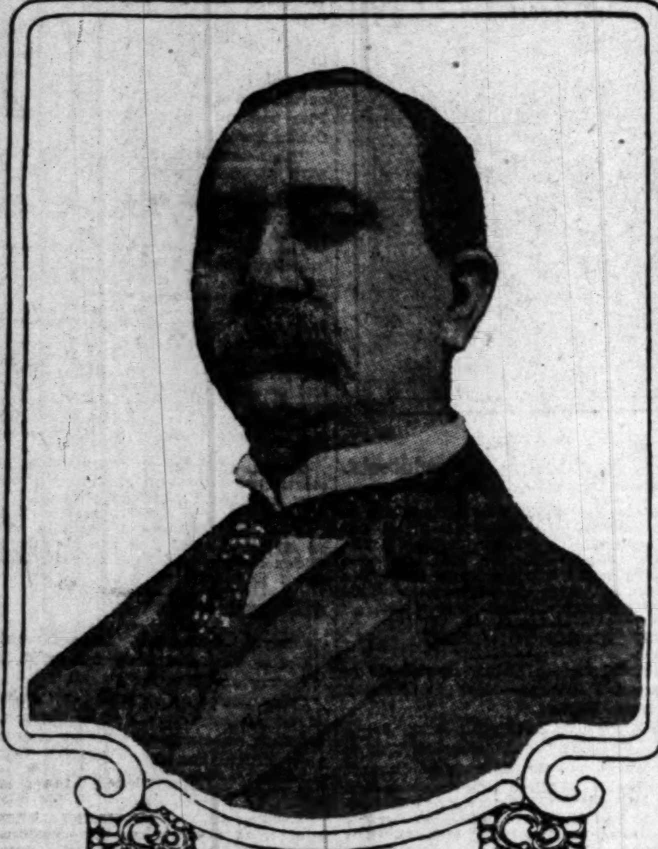
WHO CAUSED WRECK OF FRISCO RAILROAD.

Line that Prospered Under Benjamin Yoakum Brings Sensational Disclosures Before Public—Rock Island Saved and Strengthened by Copper Magnates—Bankers Deny They Made Millions Out of Stock Deals.

BY WILLIAM H. KNIGHT.



Benjamin F. Yoakum,

Promoter and financier of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN YOAKUM, the railway genius who developed the Frisco system, now in the hands fo receivers, is a stalwart six-footer in the very prime of life. Only thirty-five years ago he was handling a scraper on one of the new railroads being constructed in the wilds of Texas. The vigor and energy displayed by the earnest youth was noticed by Engineer Hayes, who saw that he was fit material for a brakeman. From this post he was soon advanced to conductor and he ran the first train into the embryo town of Palestine.

Then this fellow who could hustle was picked out to take a carload of local products to St. Louis and show the merchants and capitalists what the country he hailed from could produce. After that he went to the Atlantic exposition to persuade northern men and foreigners who were in search of locations that Texas and the Southwest was just the land of promise they were looking for. Then he was ordered to San Antonio to hustle for freight, and speaking of the occurrence lately, remarked, "and I've been in the freight more or less ever since."

From 1884 to 1892 he was successively traffic manager, assistant general manager and receiver of the San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railway. From 1893 to 1896 he was third vice-president and general manager of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe. In the latter year he became connected with the St. Louis and San Francisco, known as the Frisco, first as vice-president and general manager (1896-1900,) then as president (1900-1904,) after which he was chairman of the Executive Committee and of the board of directors. At the same time he became chairman of the board of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, of the Evansville and Indianapolis and of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas (the Kitty line.)

Of course the high official who had the disposition of the funds of these great railways was sought after by the banks, and he allied himself with two—the St. Louis Union Trust Company and the Third National Bank of St. Louis, and there he came in contact with other large capitalists. He removed to New York, having his home at Sixty-seventh street, and his office at No. 71 Broadway.

ROCK ISLAND-FRISCO COMBINE.

In the year 1903 it was given out that the Rock Island system, covering about 8000 miles, and the Frisco system, having 6000 miles of road, both needed to make extensions involving the expenditure of about $25,000,000, which large sum could be saved if they should unite and use each other's tracks. The scheme met with favor and a conference was held in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. There were present five persons—D. G. Reid and F. L. Stetson of the Rock Island, W. B. Leeds and B. F. Yoakum of the Frisco and George W. Perkins, promoter of the Morgan firm. But Yoakum was the inspiring force and active agent in producing the combine.

The two systems were not indissolubly merged, but the Morgans financed an arrangement by which the Rock Island bought a controlling interest in the Frisco stock. The combine was known as the Rock Island-Frisco system, but while they were empowered to use each other's tracks they were still operated independently, and Yoakum remained at the head of the Frisco road and was made director of the Rock Island.

Yet as the two systems had been developed independently there was much paralleling. Their roads crossed each other in a most surprising way, forming a very intricate maze of lines and the excessive duplication of lines from one important point to another must have made the routing of goods and passenger traffic a puzzle to the most experienced railroader.

The two systems continued to work together more or less harmoniously for several years, sustaining continual losses, till the Rock Island could stand the Union no longer, and at last, at the end of six years, in December, 1909, performed the somewhat arduous task of dissolving the unlucky partnership.

Meantime the Morgan firm, which had made a handsome profit as an intermediary in promoting the union of the two systems, soon found that the combine was laboring under pecuniary disadvantages, and with characteristic promptness withdrew its financial aid and moral support. Then Speyer & Co., a New York banking firm with large European connections, and interested to some extent in other southwestern roads, was induced to take a hand in the mixup. The Speyers financed the construction of some of the new roads and extensions of the Frisco, taking liberal commissions for their trouble, and were even accused of purchasing short connecting roads and turning them over to the combine at a handsome profit. But this was not an uncommon thing in those days, either with the Rock Island-Frisco system, or with other roads and financiers in the West and South.

When in 1909 the combine was unmerged, the Frisco system retained its entrance into Chicago via St. Louis, but had to take the unprofitable Chicago and Eastern Illinois, which proved, with other drawbacks, a greater burden than it could bear, hence it has been compelled to go into a receivership. The last annual statement of the Frisco, as of June 30, 1913, before it went into the hands of the receiver, showed a deficit of $817,138. This was a large excess over the deficit of the previous year, and as there was no way of providing for it the final step was inevitable.

DISCLOSURES ARE MADE.

And then came the revelations of the interstate commerce hearing in November, last. It was shown "that the St. Louis Union Trust Company (of which B. F. Yoakum was a director,) and Yoakum, engineered most of the syndicates which sold roads to the Frisco at big profits." In the bank examiner's report a few weeks ago, Speyer & Co.'s name was brought in in a way that displeased that firm, and their defense was attempted by C. W. Hillard, vice-president of the Frisco, and at the same time the railroad's New York agent. He said, "the statement, that approximately $32,000,000 of Frisco's $244,000,000 total indebtedness had been paid to the bankers as commissions, is unfair to the Frisco bankers. This $32,000,000 in reality represented discounts charged off on securities sold below par."

Thomas H. West, chairman of the board of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and one of Frisco's receivers, defended his action as above, although he was one of the syndicate which shared in the profits of the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico purchase. W. C. Nixon, another receiver, was one of the chief operating officers of the Frisco. A. S. Greig, formerly vice-president of the Frisco, is now assistant to the receivers.

But the man who bore the brunt of harsh criticisms was Benjamin F. Yoakum, former president of the road, and subsequently chairman of the board of directors and also of the Executive Committee, giving him practical control of all its financial operations. He admitted that he profited by the purchase and sale of subsidiaries to his company, but declared that the main cause of the road's bankruptcy was the failure of a land deal.

Yoakum gave three reasons for the Frisco receivership: First, failure of the road to sell New Mexico and Arizona lands for $6,000,000; second, loss sustained by investment in Texas and Louisiana pine lumber properties; third, a loss of more than $150,000 a year on the ownership of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad.

But there were other transactions. In connection with the St. Louis and Gulf road the records showed that Yoakum invested $75,000 and received $112,000. On the Oklahoma and Western the syndicate made $269,000 on an investment of $2,097,000, and on the Arkansas and Western a profit of $23,000 was made on an investment of $118,000. According to T. H. West, an insider, the profits accrueing to the syndicate from the sale of the Brownsville road were $1,629,928, but the cost to the Frisco was only $737,441, over the actual cost of the property. Then he naively remarks that "this Brownsville road was only one of several properties bought or constructed by the syndicate and turned over to the Frisco at a reasonable profit."

Five persons managed the syndicate, namely: B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the Frisco board; S. W. Fordyce, St. Louis capitalist; S. W. Brookings, president of trustees of Washington University; T. H. West, chairman of the board of St. Louis Union Trust Company, and Edward Whittaker, a broker. Among others who held shares were S. M. Felton of Chicago, David R. Francis of St. Louis, and the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis. According to evidence brought out at the hearing in November the syndicate profits made by the construction of subsidiary lines and their sale to the Frisco system now totals $7,038,000.

Mr. Yoakum asked the indulgence of the commission while he narrated his "dream of empire." He told of plans for a water level railroad from St. Louis to the Panama Canal, which had failed of materialization because of the Mexican revolution. Trains carrying a tonnage greater than any of the steamships leaving New Orleans could move easily and swiftly to the Canal Zone on the proposed road. If this line had been built and operated undisturbed, he said, the prosperity of the Frisco would have been unequaled.

The Wall Street Journal of November 27, not an unfriendly paper, commenting on these disclosures, remarked: "In degree the transaction was not as bad as the newspaper accounts of the evidence represented it, but the fact remains that directors and officers of the Frisco acted as buyers and sellers in the same transaction, with the bond and stockholders of their company footing the bill. That sort of thing has come to grief again and again, and is a thoroughly vicious and discredited method of conducting a corporation's affairs.

VIGOR OF THE ROCK ISLAND.

The Frisco having gone into the hands of the receiver, what has prevented its whilom twin—the Rock Island—from sharing the same fate? It was rescued by the powerful copper firm, Phelps, Dodge & Co., and is now amalgamated with their vigorous El Paso and Southwestern road, with nearly 1000 miles of mileage, destined to reach the Pacific Coast and become another transcontinental line. It looks as if they were aiming to connect with Spreckels's San Diego road, but in doing so they will have to cross the Southern Pacific, and that will give another direct access to Los Angeles.

The present head of the Rock Island system is Henry U. Mudge, who has been its able president since 1909. During the previous five years he was second vice-president of the Rock Island, and for five years prior to that was general manager of the Santa Fe road. He is 57 years of age, has had wide experience in railway matters, and is noted for his sound judgment in dealing with men of affairs.

SIX YEARS BEHIND.

Federal Architect Finds It Impossible to Handle Government Work on Time.

[Southwest Contractor:] Laments, loud and long, are from time to time heard issuing from the office of the United States Treasury Department at Washington because "the supervising architect's office is six years behind in its work." To bring daylight to the supervising architect's office, buried under constantly increasing work, it is said to be the plan of the treasury officials to suggest to the Public Buildings Committee of Congress a plan for adopting standard types of buildings to be erected in cities of similar size throughout the country. This plan is thus outlined in a recent press report:

"Treasury officials have been at work for several months on a preliminary report to the Public Building Committee created by Congress to work out and improve some system by which a standard could be formed for public buildings, so that cities of a certain size should get a prescribed size of buildings. By its adoption, it was argued, the necessity of drawing plans for every new building would be eliminated, the expense of the upkeep of the Supervising Architect's office would be lessened and the actual time consumed between the authorization of a building and its completion would be greatly diminished."

Are we then, in going from one end of the country to the other, to see the same postoffice and Federal building everywhere? Perhaps, if it were a really good type of architecture it would be more pleasing to see it duplicated occasionally, rather than to find abortions in the design of our public structures, through an attempt to originate something different.

But how much better would it be to follow the plan of the American Institute of Architects, expressed by resolution at the last convention, to relieve the congestion in the Treasury Department by the employment, through selection or by competition, of architects in private practice for the work in that department. As admirably expressed by the convention, what our public structures most need is "that some orderly system should be adopted by the United States government in the designing of its buildings, monuments, etc., in the purchase, selection and acceptance of sculpture, painting and other works of art, whereby the services of those architects, sculptors and painters best qualified for such work may be made available."

SPECIMEN SUITES.

Prospective Flat Tenants in Metropolis Are Shown Fully Furnished Apartments by Enterprising Agent.

[Ntaional Real Estate Journal:] A recent development of the apartment situation in New York City is the complete decorating and furnishing of a speciment suite in order that prospective tenants may obtain an approximate idea of the quantity and style of furnishings required and the appearance of their possible home.

This phase of apartment renting is a result of the co-operation practiced between department stores, furniture dealers and owners and agents and decorators, who frequently benefit from their part in the transaction by their receipt of an order for furnishings, for which reason they are willing to aid the agent in his efforts.

There is a vast difference between an apartment unfurnished and one that has been made into an attractive tastefully arranged home, "all ready to move into," and many a young married couple have been won over by the sight of a cosy home when bare floors and walls afforded but poor support for the argument of some earnest agent.

Millions in Mines

Fortunes that have been made in Stocks

Great fortunes have been made in the gold fields of the world, particularly in those of Australia, California, Alaska and Nevada, but the great proportion of fortunes have been gathered, not by the miners themselves, but by the men who held stocks in the gold mines. The discoverers have often sold their properties for a song.

Shortly after location, the Mohawk claim at Goldfield was traded for a mule. These shares first sold at 10 cents and later at $20.00. This mine was the great producer of the Goldfields Consolidated, which has since paid over fourteen million and a half dollars dividends on stock.

Le Roi went from 50 cents to $1140 a share.

Tonopah went from 60 cents to $22.50.

Dos Estrellas went from 60 cents to $155 a share.

Crown Reserve placed at 45 cents advanced to $60.00; Nipissing went at $4.00 and sold later for $35; Kerr Lake went from $1 to $11; Hudson Bay from 25 cents to $160.

Some Values Today.

Ten dollars invested in Swansea in 1890 became worth $4500 and has paid $3100 in the meantime. Calumet & Hecla has done better, returning early investors $1500 on every dollar's worth of stock. Shares are now worth $420 a share.

The Le Roi mine sold in 1890 for $1250; its market value today is $10,000,000, and shares are worth $50.00. One hundred dollars invested in this mine a few years ago is worth $250,000 and has drawn in the meantime $50,000 in dividends.

Marshall Field paid $625 for his share of a mine that brought him $60,000 when it was sold. A quarter interest in the celebrated Comstock sold for $6000. The mine produced $600,000,000, and the stock sold as high as $1875 a share.

American Mining Profits.

The Tom Boy mine at Telluride, Colorado, was bought in 1890 for $125,000. Nine years later it sold for $1,800,000. A three-quarter interest in the Independence at Cripple Creek was sold by the original locator four years after discovery for $10,000,000. The Dutan mine in the Rainy River District, Ontario, advanced from $100 as a prospect in 1892 to a million-dollar proposition in 1896. The Copper Queen was offered for $2000 in early days, and there were no takers for the Bonanza in Eastern Oregon, which now produces a million dollars a year.

Anaconda, that paid $55,000,000 in profits sold to the Rothchilds at $40,000,000. Idaho Gold Mining that paid 17½ times more than its entire capitalization. The Rand, in South Africa, for ten years before the Boer War produced more than $400,000,000.

Read the profits that have been made in shares of other mining ventures, then write or wire quick. Time is precious. Delays are dangerous and costly. The best time to become a partner with us is now. The coupons below are printed for your convenience—use them.

Some Individual Cases.

A well-known business man of St. Paul had his cheque written out for $5000 to pay for a one-fifth interest in the Le Roi. His friends persuaded him not to invest. A few months later it sold in London for $5,000,000. "Friendly advice" cost this man a million dollars.

Two men were offered shares in the Calumet & Hecla in 1871. One man bought $1000 worth, but the other deposited his $1000 in the bank at 5 per cent. interest, which compounded for 30 years netted him $4471. The other investment is today worth $470,000, and has in addition drawn $1,068,500 as dividends—a total of $1,538,500.

Professor Treadwell sold 100 shares of United Verde to his cousin, Mrs. F. H. Chase of Ranger, Maine, at $1.00 a share.

Later, he offered her 200 more shares at 50 cents, but her husband urged her not to buy, saying that she had already thrown away $100 into a hole in the ground.

When Clark began buying up the stock in 1889 he offered Mrs. Chase $5 a share and later advanced it to $7.50 a share, which she refused.

In 1900 Boston brokers offered her $35,000 for her investment of $100.

But for her husband's advice she would have taken the additional shares offered her by Treadwell, and would today be worth $105,000.

A tidy profit on an investment of $200!

THE boom is on. The discovery of gold in Shushanna electrified the whole world. It is repeating the history of the Klondyke and the Yukon. Thousands of old prospectors have joined the stampede to the new gold diggings. It is freely predicted that more men will stampede into Shushanna this coming spring than went into Dawson in '97. At that time over forty thousand men rushed into Dawson. Since then nearly two hundred million dollars in gold has been taken out.

Shushanna is the latest big gold discovery on the American continent. Single men have taken out $400 and $500 a day by hand. One property produced over $27,000 in gold in a few weeks. Men have found individual nuggets worth ten and twenty dollars apiece. Yet the possibilities if this wonderful gold discovery have been barely scratched. The discovery was made only a short time before winter set in. Operations had to stop. But thousands of men are preparing to rush into this new gold camp with the first dawn of spring.

The Shushanna Mining and Trading Co., Ltd., was the first big organization to get in on the ground floor of the new gold diggings. Already it has secured an interest in the very heart of the gold discovery. Plans are being made to send a large store of supplies into the new camp. Every dollar's worth can be sold at an immense profit as soon as it arrives.

The great fortunes from mines were made by the stockholders of the mines. In isolated cases the prospector made a fortune, but as a rule the really big money was made by the people who bought shares in mining companies when they were first organized. This is easily explained. The really valuable properties required considerable sums of money for their development and a systematic management to bring them to a paying basis. The prospector seldom has the means to develop the property he finds. He sells out to a company that can develop the property on a large scale.

The Shushanna Mining and Trading Co., Ltd., was organized for development of properties and doing a trading business in the new camp. It is not dealing in properties with a fictitious value. It will acquire or finance only those properties that will make money. But its biggest opportunity is in its trading operations. Men must eat and must be clothed. It costs money to bring supplies into Shushanna. Individual traders have made big money in the short time of the camp's existence. This company will take in a big supply of stores into Shushanna in its own steamers (the first steamer is now being rushed to completion in Vancouver) and sell them at its own stores, which will be in charge of experienced men. This will make an immediate big profit for the shareholders. The shareholders will share in every dollar's worth of profit. There are no preferred shares. All stockholders share alike.

If you know of the huge profits made in the early days of the other big gold camps, you will grasp this wonderful opportunity now. A small allotment is now offered at the low price of 14c a share. It will not last long. The stock is fully paid and non-assessable. The company is incorporated under the strict corporation laws of British Columbia.

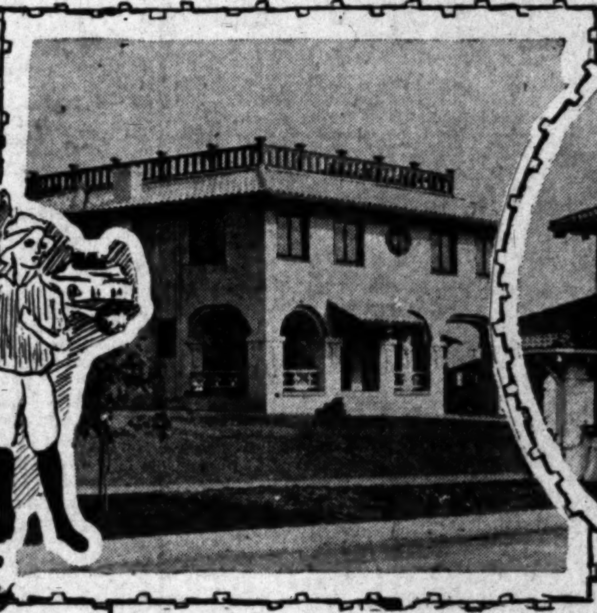
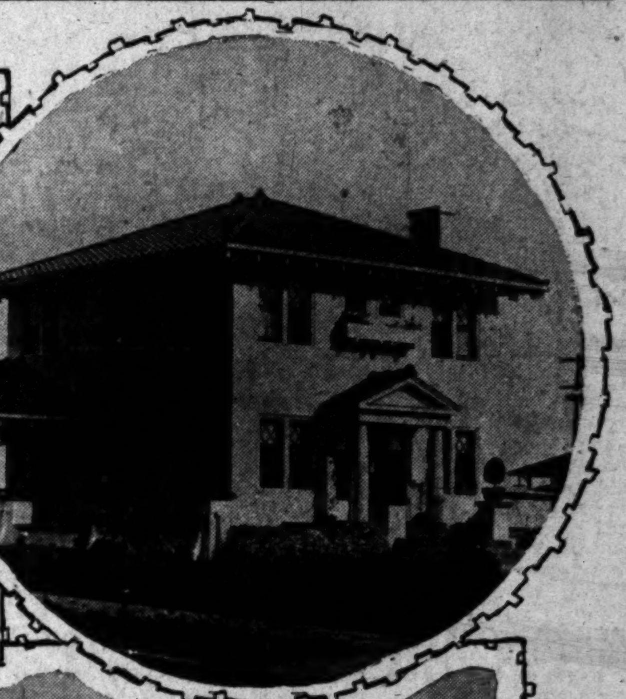
ery Day Santa Monica Goes Ahead Steadily—Be the Financial Conditions Elsewhere What They May





Two Famed Palisades Properties Taken Over by the Roy C. Company a Few Months Ago from J. J. Davis Show Signs Brilliant Future.

Other Houses to Be Built at Once on These Two Palisades Final Plans Are Now Being Completed By the Architect Immediate Building of the Home of Robert See.

one who has ever visited of the two far-famed Palisades properties which the Roy C. Company took over a few ago from the Los Angeles J. J. Davis, could wonder these properties should be the most favored and most in the entire Los Angeles when their many advantages have been thoroughly considered.

the first place, Santa Monica been regarded as the most advancing city of its size United States. This is proved the fact that its building of $125 per capita is over times that of New York City the largest and second cities in the United States; per capita rate is more times that of Philadelphia that its building rate per compared to that of Los practically a third again

Monica also has long as far as its natural are concerned, as one of superb seaside cities in world. It has what is one of the most magnificent of mountains in the Southern California system in these points, Santa what can be boasted of by no other city surrounding Los Angeles, of the same size as Santa Monica, in its three splendid canyons. The Santa Monica Canyon, which is just one-half of a block from one of the above-mentioned Palisades tracts owned by the Roy C. Howells Company, and which is bordered by the second of the Roy Howells subdivisions of the Palisades, is famed throughout the continent for its magnificence of sylvan charm.

Perhaps most important of all of Santa Monica's charms and advantages is its sea and its jagged Palisades coast, the latter rising more than 200 feet above the sea.

All of the advantages that are enjoyed by Santa Monica as a city seem to be particularly emphasized in the Palisades.

To begin with, both of the Roy C. Howells & Company's subdivisions—and in fact the Palisades as a whole—are sloped by Nature from the direction of the mountains to the sea. This factor gives the Palisades the appearance of one vast amphitheater and at the same time it makes possible the fact that all of the glories of the sea, from the smallest to the most important detail, can be seen from the homes of those who are fortunate enough to live in the Palisades of Santa Monica.

Secondly, the famous Santa Monica Mountains are so close to these two Palisades tracts that they seem fairly to overhang them.

The splendid accessibility of Santa Monica, which has spread its fame broadly, is another feature which is especially felt in these two Palisades properties, which are divided by one of the most important branches of the car lines running to Los Angeles, which centers the famed San Vicente boulevard, a part of the world-noted automobile race course.

These two Palisades tracts by this car line are brought into direct communication with all of the four other car lines running between Los Angeles and Santa Monica. One of the car lines, known as the Air Line, connects Santa Monica with Los Angeles in thirty minutes, entering the Pacific Electric Station on Sixth and Main streets at its destination. The other car lines run on different time schedules and all enter the Fourth and Hill street station at the destination of their journeys. The Pacific Electric Railway Company recently announced that they would construct a subway from the Hill-street station that would deliver passengers in sixteen minutes from Los Angeles to Palisades Park.

The financial consideration which transferred this Palisades property formerly owned by J. J. Davis to Roy C. Howells & Company, approximated for the two properties together $725,000, $350,000 being the total amount of one and $325,000 being the total amount of the other.

The original subdivision which was first put on the market formerly by J. J. Davis, comprised 180 acres, or 225 lots. The total acreage of the two amounts to about 200 acres.

The 180-acre tract is the ideal home of the prosperous business man and has now built upon it some of the most attractive of such homes throughout Southern California.

Now to add to the other splendid homes already here and being planned, Robert See is having his final plans of his superb home drawn by his architect, Adam Daun, and the house with its beautiful grounds and attractive garage will be started at once. The 180-acre subdivision in which this home is to be established has strictly the highest-class improvements. Its boulevards are splendid eighty-foot thoroughfares, built of the highest-grade rock macadam, and have twenty-foot parkings on each side, planted to beautiful palms and other plants. Its broad cement walks and curbs are of the highest standard of construction. All of the poles, pipes and conduits for the sewers, electric lights, telephones, gas, water and other such improvements of this tract are established in the broad alleys instead of being permitted to mar the streets.

The second subdivision of these two properties is laid out along larger lines, so that those who desire to build their palatial homes here may not be restricted as to the magnitude of their beautiful grounds.

It was not so very long ago that Mr. John Parkinson purchased twenty acres adjoining Palisades Park for his splendid home, which approximated $100,000. This well-known Los Angeles capitalist is laying his plans for a home that will undoubtedly be one of the show places of the United States, it will be built on such a magnificent scale.

MONUMENTAL TASK.

Realty Transactions in New York City from Middle of Seventeenth Century to Present Time Indexed.

[New York Sun:] Register Grifenhagen announced that he has practically completed a New York conveyance index under the block system, more comprehensive and more exact than is to be found in any other large city in the world.

When the Legislature of 1910 ordered the reindexing and classification of all instruments conveying realty from 1645 to January 1, 1891 (when the present section and block plan was put in operation,) it was not considered possible to complete the complicated task in much less than ten years. In the face of many serious obstacles Mr. Grifenhagen has produced the valuable index in less than three years.

Records of the filing office date back to 1654, and many of the deeds cover old farms containing many acres now covered by dense population. The old landmarks, hedges, brooks, trees, stones and fences used in describing property have long passed away, and the fixing of the exact outline of some of the tracts of land has been exceedingly difficult. Many of the lots also fronted on streets long abandoned, and the complications that resulted frequently have been hard to solve.

The usefulness of the index has been greatly increased, because, in addition to fixing the blocks affected by the various instruments, particular lots in the blocks have been designated in most cases, so that the searcher has only to ascertain the exact part of the block in which the property the title of which he is searching is situated, and he can then rapidly make a search for all instruments affecting that particular lot.

A force of from seventy to eighty men, under a special deputy register and two assistant special deputy registers, has been constantly employed on the work. The main task was the taking of abstracts of the instruments in the conveyance books, and of locating them in modern city blocks as shown on the land map of the city of New York. The work of abstracting the conveyance books has been finished. The number of instruments was 631,295. Each of the instruments was abstracted in duplicate, and a carbon copy retained in binders. The originals were distributed to the locators, who have placed them in blocks, and where possible in the city lot affected by the instruments. After being located and after the locations were verified, the abstracts were passed to typewriters, who made in loose-leaf form an index under each block of all the conveyances affecting that block, arranged by date of record. The loose leaves were then assembled in well-bound volumes.

CLOSE DEAL FOR PLACER MINES.

Syndicate Buys Forks of Salmon Group.

La Grange Giants Baring Earth's Treasures.

Petroleum New Source of Power in Mines.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

YREKA (Cal.) Jan. 2.—A deal has been practically closed for the sale of the Forks of Salmon placer mines to a syndicate of Southern California capitalists. A bond has been held on the holdings for several months, during which time a comprehensive test of the ground has been made. Numerous tunnels have been driven into the banks of gravel and a large number of prospect shafts have been sunk.

This property has been mined for years with hydraulic monitors and elevators, and has yielded substantial profits to its owners. It is one of the largest placer properties in the States, and vast quantities of gravel remain to be worked. Included with the mineral ground are splendid water rights.

The famous La Grange mine at Weaverville, the largest hydraulic producer in the world, is operating with three giants, and more monitors will be placed in commission early in January. Two of the active giants deliver water through a nine-inch nozzle under a 550-pound pressure, and the third is a six-inch nozzle machine, worked under a pressure of 400 pounds to the square inch. The water supply system has been augmented by a second pipe and flume line from the Trinity River to the mine. The property is illuminated with electricity and operations are carried on day and night.

The Siskiyou Development Company is appressively developing hydraulic mining properties in the Wildcat district and along the south fork of Scott River. Production has started on a small scale, with returns decidedly good. The management is planning to open up quartz deposits which have been discovered in a large porphyry dike traversing the ground.

The management of the Mountain Copper Mining Company has confirmed the report that a concentrating plant will be erected near Keswick before the end of 1914. It is hoped to have the first unit in commission in the early fall. The complete plant will handle 6000 tons per day. Concentrates will be shipped to a custom smelter.

HIGH GRADE.

The Mountain Copper people have been shipping about 12,000 tons of high-grade ore to the Bay Point smelter, on San Francisco Bay, for several years, and during this time an enormous tonnage of low-grade ore has been developed in the Iron Mountain and Hornet mines. This ore does not carry sufficient values to jutify shipment to the distant Bay Point plant, but can be profitably concentrated.

Conditions have improved to such an extent at the South Fork gravel mine, near Forest, that Manager Weeks has cancelled his proposed trip to Los Angeles, and is personally directing the driving of an upraise believed to be under the long-sought channel. Arrangements have also been made to resume normal activities at the property, and the general outlook is pronounced decidedly encouraging. The raise has entered a formation corresponding with that traversed by the Bald Mountain channel in the old gravel mines of the field, and geologists and engineers believe the company is on the eve of intersecting the old channel, after long years of heavy expense and tireless effort.

Operators along the Mother Lode are highly pleased with the recent ruling of the State Railroad Commission, reducing the freight rate on crude oil 96 cents per ton from Bakersfield to Ione. This will encourage the demand for fuel oil by Mother Lode mine owners, and the introduction of cheap oil on the Lode means cheap power and the operation of many mines that have long laid idle because of scarcity of water power and heavy expenses attending the employment of other kinds of power. Several of the largest companies have already prepared to take advantage of the ruling, and large shipments of crude oil are en route to Jackson, Sutter Creek, and other important districts.

POKER FLAT.

A. B. Call and associates of Pasadena are actively developing gravel mines on Grizzly ridge, and in the Poker Flat district, near Nevada City. The properties are being worked by the drift-mining method and some rich ground has been recently opened.

Sinking has started at the Kate Hardy quartz mine, in the Forest district. The head-frame has been completed, electrical equipment installed, and new surface buildings erected. The new shaft will be sent down to a depth of several hundred feet and if developments prove as satisfactory as anticipated, a mill will be built earv next summer.

The ten-stamp mill at the Golden Center mine, near Grass Valley, has been completed and will go into commission next week. It was built by local contractors and designed after comprehensive tests had been made on the Golden Center ores. The shaft has been opened to a depth exceding 5000 feet, and excellent bodies of milling ore opened on several levels. The Golden Center is situated in the heart of town, and contiguous to the Empire, North Star, Pennsylvania and other famous producers.

The Pennsylvania mine is rapidly developing into one of the richest producers in the Grass Valley field. The mine has been developed to a depth exceeding 2700 feet, and is going deeper. Splendid ore has been exposed at several points, and tens of thousands of dollars have been taken out in a day on several occasions recently. Twenty stamps are operating steadily and splendid profits are being earned.

UNDER WAY.

GLOBE (Ariz.) Jan. 2.—A large gang of Apache Indians have been employed in the excavation of the millsite of the Magma Copper Company at Superior, while eighteen teams are busy delivering building material, hauled from Florence station. The new plant, which will have a daily capacity for 150 tons, is being constructed by the General Engineering Company of Denver. It is about one-half mile distant from the Magma shaft and transportation of ore will be by means of an aerial tram.

Power is to be delivered from the Roosevelt dam by way of Miami. It is expected that the company will employ at least 200 men in February. At present it is shipping 400 tons of ore a month, running around 25 per cent. copper, to the Hayden smelter.

The Old Dominion will pay a January quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, involving a disbursement of $366,691.

Tonopah.

TONOPAH MINING STOCK SOARING.

OLD FAVORITE AGAIN COMING TO THE FRONT.

Purchase of Properties in Colorado and Other Developments Give Company New Lease on Life. Tonopah Extension's Prospects Better Than Heralded.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) Jan. 2. — The buying of the Colorado placers and the possible purchase of another acreage of claims in the vicinity of Bogota, Colombia, have stimulated the stock of the old Tonopah Mining Company, which during the past five weeks has advanced from $4.25 to $7.20, until now it looks as though the old-time favorite was going to pass the later favorite, the Belmont.

So far as local conditions are concerned, there is a material improvement that renders the Tonopah one of the best properties in Nevada. Instead of expiring, as many supposed it would, the life of the company is being renewed. Indications are for another ten years' production that will secure the company's reputation as a dividend payer.

On the Sand Grass claim the outlook is of the most flattering, while from the West End ledge the output continues to increase, with even higher values than were anticipated six weeks ago when the ledge was opened up on this estate. The mill heads reflect this improvement, which has raised the general average of the ore from $18 to above $20, and it is probable that they will run even higher before January is over.

The light earnings of the Tonopah Extension, of which much was made in adverse reports for the month of November, are not likely to be duplicated. The heavy fixed charges accrued from development of the new area that for the past three months has been systematically searched. Now the improvements have been completed and the milling returns show that the earnings will be enhanced henceforward.

A three-rail equipment has been built to connect No. 2 shaft with the mill and the value of the ore, as delivered at the stamps, has been raised from $9 to $13, making a 50 per cent. increase. There has also been a gain of 40 per cent. in tonnage.

The Favorite vein on the Belmont continues to show even a better grade of ore in the west drift on the 1100-foot level, which for the past two weeks has been extended in a body at least six feet wide. On this vein over 370 feet of stoping ground has been opened on the 1000 and 1100-foot levels and the vein gives promise of producing an exceedingly large tonnage of very excellent-grade ore. Prospecting for its downward extension to the 1200-foot level is in progress.

A very good tonnage of ore has been proved at the Montana Tonopah mine in the A B K vein on the 656 and 615-foot levels and also in the footwall branch on the latter level. These exposures prove up a large tonnage of very rich ore that will serve for some time to sweeten the lower grade in the stopes.

The Jim Butler continues to show a great improvement. The first carload of ore from the new Desert Queen shaft has been secured. When the lower workings are cleared these shipments will be made at the rate of one carload, or fifty tons, daily in addition to what is taken out of the Wandering Boy shaft.

The Vernal Property.

There are excellent prospects for making a regular producer of the Vernal property in the Diamondfield division. A rich ore shoot was exposed first on the fifty-foot level, was mined to some extent on the 100-foot level, and followed by a winze for over sixty feet below this depth, where the flow of water became so strong that it was decided to suspend sinking in the winze and seek the ore shoot on the 200-foot level. The drift is being driven forward rapidly on the 200-foot level, and is now in quartz and vein matter that yields small but encouraging assays.

Silver Pick Consolidated.

The main shaft of the Silver Pick Consolidated is nearing a depth of 500 feet. For over sixty feet it has been in a large vein that is apparently continuous for a long distance, and that has a trend directly toward the adjoining Mohawk claim of the Consolidated. Between the shaft and the Mohawk line there is a considerable area that has not been prospected, and in which it is believed important deposits of ore will be found.

Other Properties.

A number of the less prominent properties in the Goldfield district are being actively developed, and the usual large amount of annual assessment work is now in progress. Work has been started on the Talmage group, which is centrally located, and where some good ore has been found.

It is reported that work will be resumed at an early day on the Albemarle property, consisting of a large group of patented claims. A considerable amount of work has been done on the Conqueror Consolidated property, where quantities of shipping ore were mined in the early days.

Lessees have found good ore on the Crackerjack, Lone Star, Daisy, Great Bend, Goldfield Belmont and several others. Development continues at the Black Butte, New Jersey Mines Company's property, Nevada Eagle, and will be resumed on the Nancy Donaldson.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Jan. 2.—The fact cannot be gainsaid that prospects for the mining industry in the Goldfield district, as well as throughout Southern Nevada, have never offered greater promise of success and of a substantial growth in prosperity. Outside money is coming in constantly for investment and a large part of that which is made in this part of the country in mining, is being put back into development, with the result that a great many properties are being opened up which, in the belief of competent mining men and engineers, will be brought to the productive stage in the near future.

While Goldfield is not at present turning out the great amount of precious metals that marked its earlier years of activity, the district is looking better than for a long time. This statement finds confirmation in the opinions of business men, bankers, mining men, mining engineers and visitors to the camp, who take an interest in its mine. Development is in progress at many points where the showing is favorable for the opening up of producing mines and it is impossible to find a person familiar with conditions who will predict other than a bright future for the camp.

Stock market conditions promise to improve soon, and many publications throughout the country are now ready to predict that investment money is bound to seek an outlet in mining, as the result of protracted apathy in the market for industrials and other lines. It is felt by many persons that a large number of the listed securities in the mining field are being quoted at figures far below their intrinsic value and that the day is not far distant when a material advance will be recorded in these stocks, particularly those of the Goldfied district.

GOLDFIELD CONSOLIDATED.

The usual large production of gold-bearing ore is being made by the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company and there is apparently every reason to believe that this will continue without interruption for years to come. A company that is capable of paying dividends amounting to upwards of $26,000,000 in little more than five years and that produces net $165,000 to $200,000 monthly is far from being decadent and must continue to be one of the greatest gold producers even were its output of the precious metal to decline far below those figures. The territory from which the Consolidated Mines Company has extracted ore up to this time constitutes but a small proportion of the large area owned by the company.

GOLDFIELD MERGER MINES.

Development work in the territory of the Goldfield Merger Mines Company continues at a depth of 1750 feet. Some operations have also been in progress on the 1330-foot level, where the great vein that enters this ground from the adjoining Grizzly Bear claim of the Goldfield Consolidated, was cut in driving to connect with the workings of the latter mine and where the ledge is shown to be at least fifty feet wide. At this depth a number of seams of ore were cut and it has been the plan to explore these by means of drifts and raises.

REORGANIZED BLUE BULL.

The work outlined some time ago for the Blue Bull property is being carried out and good progress is being made in the north and south drifts on the 500-foot level and in the east and southwest cross-cuts on the 700-foot level. The last-named working has been extended far into the Victor claim and has apparently entered the main Victor ledge.

The cross-cut has been continued through this formation in order to determine its worth and find the best point at which to start drifts to explore the vein. At the east of the shaft on the 700-foot level the cross-cut is progressing for the purpose of cutting, on its downward extension, the vein now being explored on the 500-foot level and in which there are seams of excellent ore at the latter depth.

SANDSTORM-KENDALL.

Better progress has been rendered possible, with the aid of the newly-installed pumping plant, in carrying on the work of development on the 500-foot level of the Sandstorm-Kendall Consolidated mine. The pump is a triplex in design and is electrically driven, having a capacity of raising 200,000 gallons every twenty-four hours under a 500-foot head. More rapid progress even than at present will be made possible with the installation of the big compressor, which will bring into use machine drills at all points in the mine. Drifts and raises are now exploring the big vein on the 500-foot level.

REORGANIZED BOOTH.

The usual development work is in progress on the Booth property. On the 500-foot level drifts are being extended north and south to explore the main Booth vein, in which some encouraging assays have been obtained at this level. A new cross-cut is also being driven on the 350-foot level to explore the faulted and fissured territory that was penetrated by old workings, but which has never been explored to any appreciable extent.

The Goldfield Oro.

Sinking continues on the Goldfield Oro property, and the enlarged main shaft has reached a depth of more than six hundred feet, and is making good progress. A large station and station sump were cut recently below the 550-foot level, and the water from the shaft is now handled with ease. The bottom of the shaft is now in a formation that has the appearance of vein matter, and there would be no occasion for surprise if this shaft should penetrate an ore body at any time.

ALLOW "ROUGH RIDER" PATENT

Interior Department Make Important Ruling.

Superintendent of Calumet Resigns.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) Jan. 2.—An important ruling has just been made by the Interior Department with reference to the Hoval Smith "Rough Rider" group of claims, situated in the Warren mining district near Bisbee. Issuance of patent to these claims has been held up on the ground that no mineral in place was apparent on the surface.

It has been satisfactorily demonstrated to the authorities, however, that in that particular part of the Warren district copper deposits lie deep. It was shown that locations had been made in good faith and that development might logically be expected to find rich stores of copper ore at great depth, evidence to this effect being given in the exploration of other mines in the near vicinity. So the patent will be allowed to issue.

James Wood has resigned his position as superintendent of the Calumet and Arizona smelter and will soon leave Douglas for Los Angeles, where he will make his home. He has been with the Calumet and Arizona for nine years, but first came to the Southwest nineteen years ago, to install the first Bessemer furnace of the Copper Queen smelter, then at Bisbee.

Assistant Smelter Superintendent A. J. McDermott also resigned at the end of this year and also will make his future home in Los Angeles. Mr. Woods is to be succeeded by Harry C. Clarke, who superintended the construction of the new Calumet and Arizona smelter.

Capt. J. C. Greenway, general manager of the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, has returned to Bisbee from an interesting trip with European capitalists to examine a copper mine in Asia Minor, only a short distance from Mt. Ararat. The mine has a history of over 2000 years, and was worked in the time of the Romans. One property in that locality, owned by an English syndicate, is managed by James Colquohoun, who for years was at the head of the Arizona Copper Company at Clifton.

The total dividends of the Phelps-Dodge Company for 1913 aggregate $16.50 a share, compared with $15 for 1912. The last of the year has been celebrated by an extra dividend of 2½ per cent., making a total distribution to the stockholders of $7,425,000 for the year.

A quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable in January, has been declared by the Shattuck and Arizona Company.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Jan. 2.—The winter storms have been of large advantage to placer miners, who are bringing in a large amount of gold in small nuggets, washed out from creek beds whose riches have been known for forty years past. Only the lack of water prevents an annual output of millions of dollars from the placer grounds of Yavapai county.

At a number of points, notably on Lynx Creek, and along the Hassayampa River, lie immense beds of auriferous gravel, which could be worked to great profit by properly-equipped hydraulic machinery. A number of plans have been made, involving the storage of water, to insure continuous operation of the hydraulic equipment, but none of these schemes has been completed.

The Little Jessie mine in Chaparral district is now being unwatered by large pumps. A new company, which is handling the famous property, is preparing for the extension of underground workings, with the intention of developing all parts of its ground. The mine was notable in the past for large bodies of rich pyritic ores, which, despite their character, are readily handled by ordinary milling methods.

A small stamp mill is to be installed at once on the Hub mine, about four miles east of Skull Valley. The property is owned by T. F. Sanders, who has spent several years in its exploration.

A drainage tunnel is being driven into the Magnolia property, two miles east of Prescott, where work had to be suspended a few months ago owing to an excess of water.

Cody Buys Mine.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Jan. 2.—At Mammoth the Young Bros. have sunk a new shaft on the Mammoth-Collins property, to the depth of 300 feet, said to extend through ore the entire depth. A cross-cut tunnel 600 feet long is being driven to connect the two levels of the Mammoth and Collins, and big new pumps and an air compressor are being installed. All under ground work is to be done with compressed air.

Col. W. F. Cody has paid $20,000 of the purchase price of $37,000 on the Southern Belle mine at Campo Bonito, in the Catalina Mountains. Cody is now preparing to star in a moving picture show, which is to move its stage equipment to Tucson in February.

The Ash Peak silver properties, thirteen miles west of Duncan, have been taken over by the International Mining Syndicate, under a purchase contract with the owners, the Murray Bros., of Los Angeles. The property is to be developed thoroughly within two years, the ores extracted are to be the joint property of the two interests, and a price will later be set commensurate with the value of the ore developed.

concentrated (strong) hydrochloric acid. No. 5 is siderite (iron carbonate; chalybite.) The sample is of obtuse rhombohedrons, the faces of which are curvilinear; brownish-yellow in color. "Externally shining, internally with a brilliant or pearly luster." Opaque. Streak yellow-brown. Of uneven fracture. Brittle; somewhat magnetic. Hardness, 4.4. Sp. gr., 3.8. Over 60 per cent. iron protoxide in the sample.

Sample No. 4 resembles certain ore from the Calico district. It is horn silver (cerargyrite,) and runs high in silver percentage. No. 5: "Is this telluride of gold and silver? Tellurium absent. The sample is Stephanite (black silver,) and is of the variety that occurs in macles, disseminated. Iron-black in color; of metallic, shining luster; the sample in powder is of dark, grayish-brown color; soft and sectile. Brittle, and like quartz is of conchoidal fracture. Hardness, 2.3. Sp. gr., 6.27. In composition sulphide of silver and antimony. Before the blowpipe, fumes of antimony and sulphur are given off; fuses to a metallic (impure) globule, and if soda is added to the assay, with blowpipe heat added, a silver button is obtained. Stephanite is soluble in boiling, dilute nitric acid, with deposition of antimony oxide and sulphur.

Sulphides.

MAMMOTH (Ariz.) Dec. 13.—Q.: Am sending three specimens of rock, and wish to learn what they carry, except gold and silver. All samples are from the "Old Hat" mining district, Pinal county, Arizona. No. 1 may be nothing more than Essonite. No. 2 is a query to me, as it is the first rock of this kind that I have ever seen. No. 3 may be a vanadium ore. E. O. G.

A.: Glad to hear from you. No. 1 is cinnamon stone (Essonite,) and it comes mighty near being of gem quality. If you can find a grade of this garnet that is more transparent, and of brighter color, you will be able to fill orders for commercial hyacinths. No. 2 is probably from a narrow seam, and is a rich sulphide ore. You will find lead, arsenic, iron disulphide (pyrrhotite and pyrite) in this ore with gold and silver values. Zinc present. No. 3 is made up of two minerals—wulfenite and vanadinite. The vanadate (that of lead) occurs in hexagonal (microscopical) prisms, and its colors show reddish-brown. This mineral dissolves in nitric acid, and silver nitrate throws down a precipitate of silver chloride. The other mineral in No. 3 (wulfenite) is lead molybdate, and its primary form is the octahedron with a square base; wax-yellow in color. This mineral goes into solution with hot nitric acid, and from the solution a whitish-yellow nitrate of molybdic acid precipitates. It is also soluble in potassoum hydroxide. The crystallizations in the sample are microscopic.

Vanadates and wulfenite are difficult to distinguish one from the other at some localities, notably the molybdate of near Crescent, Nev.

Altered Rock.

NOGALES (Ariz.,) Dec. 15.—"Dike rock from foot-wall." The sample is hornblendic granite. "Soft rock over ore." This is altered serpentine. "Specimen of ore." Rock, aluminum silicate; iron oxides, and trace of lime. In the mass we find feldspathic matter with copper carbonates (malachite and azurite;) copper silicate present. Total percentage copper 8.20 per cent. No sample tested for gold or silver.

Rich in Gold.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 15.—Q.: This rock comes from a claim near Lee, Cal. Does it carry cinnabar? C. C.

A.: Cinnabar absent. The bright red color of the specimen is due to iron peroxide, and it is furthermore referred to as the "Indian war-paint" of the "Injuns," and of the mining boys in the hills. The sample carries a good portion of native gold.

Magnetite Crystal.

PASADENA, Dec. 15.—Q.: Is the specimen an ore of tungsten? L. D. T.

Black and White.

NEWHALL, Dec. 16.—Q.: I have been an interested reader of your department, but have never before had occasion to write you. I am submitting to you two samples of rock, which you will please anaylze for me. They are obtained in the hills near Newhall. The dark one I believe to be iron ore; it looks as though it might have been washed by a stream from a long distance although it was found on a hill-top. The ground is covered with specimens from small size up to large boulders. I do not know how far down in the ground they go. The light colored rock I believe to be a calcium carbonate, but whether marble or something else I do not know. Has either specimen any commercial value if obtainable in large quantities? The calcium rock is an outcropping which may be a whole mountain. E. B. M.

A.: The black mineral, with blackish streak is magnetite (magnetic iron-ore,) and it is of reniform (kidney-shape) variety. This ore would probably be purchased for smelting into iron if a blast furnace were at hand. The white sample belongs to the limestone family; it is chiefly lime carbonate, with magnesium carbonate, and gypsum present. This lime, and iron ore, if in suitable quantities will probably be of commercial value and of benefit to the locality.

Chloritic.

CIMA, Dec. 17.—Q.: I am sending you by parcels post a sample of rock. Will you please name it for me? Is it a mineral-bearing rock, and is the green coloring a mineral stain? Thanking you for past favors, and wishing the good people of The Times the pompliments of the season. T. J.

A.: Your greeting to The Times people is appreciatively noted, and the sentiment expressed therein is reciprocated.

The coloring matter in the sample is due to olive green chlorite in the mass of aluminum silicate and calcite. Phosphoric acid is sparingly present, with potash 3.20 per cent. The sample represents mineral of very doubtful commercial value.

Not Kaolin.

FRESNO, Dec. 16.—Q.: Can you tell me what this material is that I am enclosing in this box, and what it is good for? D. R. M'G.

A.: Glad to hear from you. There is probably more hard work for mineralogical chemists on the great family of clays, and allied substances than on any other matter on earth, or in the earth, as it were. Our long experience for the Trenton, N. J., potteries gave us the habit of making haste slowly on deposits of such minerals; especially so, when the starting point consists of a minute quantity of the substance to test as representaive of an entire deposit.

The sample you offer for test is undoubtedly from altered in part.

The samples are lacking in the pearly scales of kaolin, and kaolin is absent from the sample (No. 1.) Sodium and magnesium are present, with aluminum silicate, and silica. No. 2 is like No. 1, but it carries more fuller's earth. Diatomaceous silica present.

It would be a very great pleasure to test further for you, and with that end in view we would like more of the material, as represented by the samples with other rock and mineral at the deposit.

The probabilities are that, at the locality, minerals of commerical value are at hand.

Hornblende and Granite.

CRESCENT (Nev.) Dec. 17.—Q.: I am sending you, under separate cover some pieces of rock. Would you please identify them for me? What minerals do they indicate, if any? I have read with much interest your column for years. "P."

A.: Glad to hear from you. Samples look somewhat like tellurides, but tellurium is absent from all of them.

The specimens, sampled together, react for zinc, lead, iron, sulphur, manganese, and molybdenum, and by the same token the specimens must "indicate" the various grades of matter present.

We do not like the looks of this rock however. The substances named are in traces only.

Copper Ores.

TROPICO, Dec. 18.—Q.: Will you please name these ores? All of them from the Mountain Mine, Ariz. J. W. M'D.

A.: All kinds of copper ore! In the lot we find Bornite; Azurite; Malachite; Chrysocolla; Chalcopyrite; black oxide of copper, and iron oxides with silica and lime. Sampled together we find that 11.2 per cent. copper is present, and the long specimen is epidote coated with copper.

Platinum Absent.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—Q.: Please test concentrates for platinum. P. R.

Mountain Cork.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—Q.: My brother, who runs a ranch north of Reno, Nev., sends me two samples that he found on his ranch. He would like you to tell him about these samples. Are they of commercial value? L. B. R.

A.: The one sample sent to The Times is mountain cork, a variety of "asbestos in which the fibers are interlaced so intimately as not to be perceptible, or capable of separation. Sectile. Somewhat elastic. So light as to float on water. Opaque. Feels meager and resembles cork in feel and texture."

Where the substance occurs plentifully, it can be utilized as low-grade asbestos, but the chief use of mountain cork is for display in mineral collections, and so forth.

Graphite Present.

SULZER (Alaska) Dec. 1.—Q.: Accompanying this are two samples of ore, taken from tunnel. Sample No. 1 is from hanging wall. It is three feet in thickness. Sample No. 2 is from face. The tunnel is in 300 feet. If you will kindly inform me what minerals it carries you will greatly oblige. W. T. W.

A.: No. 1 is rather odd stuff for a hanging wall; it is made up with graphite and "slickenslide," as coating, and the graphite is disseminated throughout the mass. Micaceous iron ore (hematite) is present, with microscopical pyrite. Withal, there are traces of lead, antimony, copper, manganese and arsenic in the rock.

No. 2 is quartz, some calcite in the rock sample. Manganese trace; galenaite (lead sulphide;) microscopical pyrite; copper, arsenic and silver, all present. Blende (zinc sulphide) in both samples.

Both samples resemble certain Colorado ores of tellurium, but tellurium is absent. No sample tested for gold.

Not Platinum.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—Q.: Under separate cover I hand you some residues from tests on platinum ores which occur in California. While I do not claim that this residue is the chemical "platinum sponge;" I do claim that it carries platinum. Will you please test the sample carefully and publish results. P. W. S.

A.: The sample was tested thoroughly, and we find platinum absent. This residue (sample) is impure ferric chloride.

Dumortierite.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—Q.: This rock was taken from a ledge of four-inch width on a claim located near Lee, Cal. It has been assayed for copper with results "copper trace only." What gives this rock its green, copper ore color? "PROSPECTOR."

A.: The sample is smalt-blue dumortierite (aluminum silicate.)

BRING UP LIGHT BILLS.

High Buildings of New York Create Shadows Which Must Be Illuminated at Great Cost.

Among those who have appeared before the Heights of Building Advisory Commission, which was appointed by the committee of the Board of Estimate in charge of regulating the heights of buildings, are a number of experts on lighting, says the New York Press. The testimony of these experts shows what a great factor electric lighting becomes as a result of the construction of skyscrapers and how rapidly the lighting bill will increase with the height of a building.

Buildings with a general height of seventy-six feet in an eighty-foot street enjoy all the natural illumination required for general office work. Office work requires a light intensity of three candle power per square foot. An increase in the general height of building in such a street from seventy-five to 260 feet cuts off 90 per cent. of its flux of light per square foot of building front. In other words, it reduces the intensity of its natural light from three to three-tenths candle power per square foot.

Stated in terms of electrical current, the natural light shut out by increased height which has been supplanted by artificial means is equivalent to seven watts per square foot per day. In an office with floor area of 5000 square feet this would mean a consumption of 3500 watts per day. With electricity selling at 5 cents per kilowatt, this office would pay $52.50 per year for the artificial illumination made necessary on account of the excessive height of buildings.

The net rentable floor area in the office buildings below Chambers street, in Manhattan, between Gold and Pearl streets on the east and Broadway on the west, is 28,000,000 square feet. It is fair to assume one-fourth of this area requires constant artificial illumination on account of the natural light being shut off by high buildings.

In 1913

ANOTHER GIANT IN KERN FIELDS.

WELL OF OBISPO COMPANY IS DOING EIGHT THOUSAND.

Big Gusher Is Kept Under Control Only with Great Difficulty—Strike Portends New Wave of Activity. McKittrick Operators Optimistic Over Outlook for New Year.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, Dec. 31.—Well No. 7 of the Obispo Oil Company on section 32-12-23, is steadily flowing 8000 barrels of oil per day. The heavy gas pressure is maintained.

Sunday the worn gate was removed and a new one, with a giant control valve, was substituted. The oil and sand with the heavy flow soon cut out a gate and the flow is switched from one outlet to another every few hours to allow for repairs.

It took five hours' hard work in a torrent of oil to cap the well.

Superintendent Luton has a set of storage and gauge stanks for the oil, which is now running into these and thence to the pipe line of the Union Oil Company.

Since the strike by the Obispo Oil Company on section 32-12-23, many operators having land in that territory are preparing to develop their property and at least ten new wells will be started in a short time. The General Petroleum Company was one of the first to spud in. Its well No. 2 was started Sunday with rotary tools and several feet drilled that day.

Well No. 5 on the same property is being redrilled to the rich sand. The casing was shot off at 2300 feet and drilling started Sunday.

The General Petroleum controls eighty acres, known as the Annex division, adjoining the Obispo property.

Optimistic.

Optimism prevailed generally among McKittrick oil operators and with the coming of the new year an increased activity may be noted throughout the field. The fact that the Standard Oil Company has contracted with the Reward Oil Company for 1,000,000 barrels of oil, and the opening of the Standard's station, Olig, which was built six years ago but never used, appears to indicate that the big company has plans for the future that will help the situation considerably.

Cattlemen and settlers in the Tejon Mountains near Lebec are threatening to bring suit against the General Pipe Line Company because of the pollution of lakes and water courses along the pipe line by leaking oil. Some of the lakes and many of the streams are useless for irrigation or for watering cattle on account of the amount of oil in the water.

Years ago, when the oil industry first started in the West Side fields, Miller and Lux were fearful that the waste oil from the wells would pollute their watering places, and threatened suit to the amount of $1,000,000 damages should the oil run into Buena Vista Lake. The building of dykes and basins obviated this trouble, however, and the suit was thus avoided.

Development Notes.

Well No. 1 of the Interstate Oil Company on section 4-11-23 is down over 600 feet. The Interstate company intends to put down twelve wells on its property during the next six years. Two wells will be drilled in 1914, and two each succeeding year till twelve are finished.

The territory is among the best in Sunset field and since the 1000-barrel gusher of the Lakeview No. Two Oil Company came in, the value of property in the vicinity has increased amazingly.

The Pacific Crude Oil Company will soon land the eight-inch string in well No. 4, section 32-31-23, in the Fellows district.

Well No. 1 of the Sunset Monarch Oil Company on section 26-12-24, is down over 350 feet.

Well No. 3 of the Baltimore Oil Company stands ready to cement. It is in the oil sand.

The M. J. and M. and M. Oil Company, on section 26-12-24, in Sunset district, is preparing to redrill well No. 6.

Well No. 5 of the Associated Oil Company, on section 34-31-24, in Fellows district, is to be redrilled.

The Standard Oil Company is preparing to abandon well No. 1 on the Campbell lease in Belridge district. After deep drilling there was no sign of oil.

The North American Oil Company on Section Two Syndicate division on section 2-32-23, brought in a 1500-barrel well last week.

Well No. 6 of the Union Oil Company on section 34-31-23, in Fellows district, came in last week with a big flow, spouting over the derrick for a time. Later it sanded up.

Well No. 1 of the Hazelton Crude Oil Company on section 17-11-23, continues to block up with a fine sand. A crew is at work removing the sand bridge, but so far their efforts have not been successful.

CHOOSING AN AGENT.

Prospective Buyer or Seller Does Well to Carefully Consider Broker to Be Employed as Adviser.

[Real Estate Journal:] The real estate operator occupies a tremendously important position in both the commercial and home life of the city.

The man or woman who desires to buy a piece of real estate, as a rule seeks the advice and counsel of a man who makes a special study of the real estate market.

This thought embraces both the questions of the ability of the operator to advise properly and accurately and the purpose to which the prospective buyer intends putting the property.

In the first place, the prospective buyer needs but seek out a dealer who is a member of the local real estate board and he can feel assured that so far as reliability is concerned, he is properly safeguarded.

An organization's principal purpose is to see that every buyer and seller of real estate is honestly, fairly treated. There are provisions in the constitution and bylaws of the average real estate board that impose severe penalties on any member who should even momentarily depart from the strict rules of professional conduct that the organization imposes.

As to seeking out the man who is the best posted on the general market and is therefore in position to give the soundest and most accurate advice, the prospective buyer must use his or her own initiative or seek the counsel of someone in whom they have, personally, implicit confidence.

The second thought—that relative to the purposes to which the buyer intends to put the property—is a vastly more important one, because on that advice hinges the success or failure of the investment.

If it is a home that the buyer wishes to purchase, the advice must necessarily be specifically along the line of the desirability of the property for home purposes, its future prospects and such surroundings as might have an influence on the general home life of the community.

If the purchaser desires to invest money in a direction that will produce a revenue or will enhance in value so that it can eventually be sold at a substantial profit, the information and advice must take a distinctly different trend.

Real estate is a desirable form of investment, because real estate is the basis of all wealth and always will be.

This reason ought to satisfy the prospective investor that so far as the desirability of the investment is concerned, there is room for neither doubt nor argument. It is merely left for him to decide just what he wants to purchase, and, of course, on the location and nature of the property hinges the possible return on the investment.

BEAT CONTRACTORS.

Realty Organization Defeats Proposal to Compel Every Builder to Take Out Fifty-Dollar License.

[Real Estate Bulletin:] After a warm exchange of correspondence the San Diego Realty Board has won a victory over the contractors' organization, which proposed a city ordinance licensing persons, whether contractors or owners, before any building costing more than $1500 could be erected in the city. The license ordinance proposed that a fee of $50 be charged for permission to engage in the building of any such structure. It was strongly opposed by the real estate men, on the grounds that if enacted it would be class legislation and would tend to give certain contractors a monopoly of the building business.

At the Mayor's conference last week it was recommended that the proposed ordinance and the correspondence on it be filed. This means that no action will be taken by the City Council.

TO HAVE OR NOT TO HAVE A NEW STATE CONSTITUTION.

BY FRANK H. SHORT.

THE editor of The Times has requested that I contribute an article upon the pending proposition of calling a constitutional convention and the adoption of a new Constitution for the State. This for the reason that the last Legislature adopted the concurrent resolution submitting to the voters at the next election, November, 1914, the question as to whether a constitutional convention should be called for the purpose of framing a new Constitution. This resolution recites that "Such vote to be taken for the reason that two-thirds of the members of each branch of the Legislature at said regular fortieth session deem it necessary to revise such Constitution." (Stats. of 1913, p. 1714.)

THE PRESENT CONSTITUTION.

The present Constitution, usually referred to as the Constitution of 1879, was adopted by the people May 7, 1879. At the time of its adoption this Constitution was considered more radical, and, as frequently observed by the courts, upon some subjects in advance of the Constitution of any of the other States. It will be recalled that shortly prior to the calling of this convention, and as one of the moving causes thereof, the State had been stirred by what were known as the "sand-lot" agitations, led by Denis Kearny, whose chief slogan was the exclusion of the Chinese. But his arguments and attacks were addressed to a great many other subjects. Later years have demonstrated that while Denis Kearney was a shallow and noisy agitator, that he was not excessively progressive or radical, in a modern sense. Also, while on account of the insertion therein of a few apparently radical, but rather superficial clauses, the Constitution of 1879 was considered a radical document, as a matter of fact it was not even at the date of its adoption particularly advanced or radical, for while there were a good many so-called radicals in the convention, in the final analysis the so-called conservatives largely prevailed.

While possessing a few radical features, the Constitution of 1879 in every respect embraced and included all of what are known as the "Guarantees of Liberty" or the "Bill of Rights." These so-called guarantees of liberty are peculiarly of English or Anglo-Saxon origin, and until within comparatively recent years have been the most cherished heritage of the English or Anglo-Saxon peoples. For the purposes of this article the whole subject is illustrated by a quotation of section 1 of article I of the Constitution of 1879:

> All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

It was provided in the Constitution of 1879 that amendments could only be submitted by a two-thirds vote of both houses of the Legislature, thus establishing the only method of amending the Constitution, it was early demonstrated that it was hardly, if at all, more difficult to adopt a concurrent resolution to submit an amendment of the Constitution to the people than it was to pass an ordinary legislative act by a majority vote. This because many members of the Legislature were inclined to vote for resolutions submitting constitutional amendments, since they were later to be voted on by the people in any event. And since all that was required of the people was that a majority of those who did vote should vote in favor of the amendment it was early demonstrated that this Constitution was peculiarly easy of amendment, and comparatively soon after its adoption the practice of amending it became quite frequent.

AMENDMENTS.

Prior to the year 1910 a very large number of important amendments were adopted of the Constitution, and in that year twenty-three amendments were adopted. Included in these were what are known as the initiative, the referendum and the recall amendments. The first two conferred the right upon the people by petitions signed by a moderate number of the electors, to propose any desired amendment to the constitution or the passage of any law, without any legislative interference whatsoever. It will, therefore, be observed at the present time that the Constitution of California amounts to nothing more than a declaration for the time of fundamental law, continuing so long only as a majority of the people are satisfied therewith, and leaving no intervening difficulties or space of time of any importance between the proposition to amend the Constitution and the ability to carry the suggestion into effect. Whereas, constitutions were previously regarded as covering only the fundamentals of government and of human rights, and therefore to be adopted with great caution and amendable only after the requirement of considerable deliberation and intervening time, the actual situation at this time is that, barring a little greater expense, it is as easy to amend the constitution of the State as to pass a legislative act, and almost as easy as it is to amend a town ordinance.

Whether this situation is wholesome and beneficial, depends wholly upon the point of view. It is confessedly wholly contrary to historical authority, and directly the opposite of the theories of the founders of this government. However, these considerations are serious or otherwise, depending upon whether we are inclined to revere the fathers or to muckrake them, as is now becoming quite popular. And also as to whether the teachings of history are deemed of weight and importance, or as to whether the wishes or supposed interests of the hour or the day are the only guide.

While the adoption of the initiative and the referendum amendments to the constitution was and is of fundamental importance, there have been but few amendments proposed by this method, but continuing and increasing numbers of amendments have been proposed by the Legislature, and most of these have been adopted. The process of amendment has gone on at such an increasing ratio that it is not improbable that the constitution of California is now longer, and has appended thereto more amendments than the constitution of any other State or of any other government or people. It is stated, and while I have not verified the statement, it is substantially correct, that the constitution of 1879 has been amended one hundred and one times, and it is now confessedly in such a voluminous, chaotic and contradictory state that if reasonably possible there is a consensus of opinion that its length should be greatly reduced, its chaotic form reduced to order, and its conflicting paragraphs reconciled.

IT IS RADICAL.

As every student of current history knows, the last three Legislatures of the State have been in a large majority friendly to the provisions of the constitution as it stands, and to the amendments that have been adopted, most of the later amendments having been submitted by overwhelming majorities of the members of these last three sessions.

The constitution now represents the work and expresses the will of what is known as the radical or progressive elements of the State, and it therefore might seem surprising that the suggestion to adopt a new constitution or change the present one should come from the very source favorable to the fundamental law as expressed in the present constitution.

This can only be explained upon the theory that even those largely responsible for the present state of the constitution are altogether mindful of its excessive length, of its confused and contradictory form, and of its confusing and conflicting provisions, and that therefore, quite as much as others, they appreciate the necessity of reducing its incoherent and erratic bulk to something resembling a brief, logical and concise statement of fundamental principles. It is also true that those who are more in sympathy with what may be appropriately described as the original American ideas and principles of government are heartily dissatisfied with the present constitution, and its form, and are earnestly desirous of seeing it amended.

Therefore, it might be assumed out of hand that since it is evident that both the elements friendly and those unfriendly to the constitution agree that it should be amended, there should remain no question of the propriety of proceeding so to do. Notwithstanding this undeniable situation, there are most cogent and weighty reasons against the procedure of adopting a new constitution at this time.

Apparently we are not either at the beginning or the end of the period of constitutional reconstruction in California. If a constitutional convention were called, it would doubtless be composed of elements consistent with every existing type, and including some of the most rigid adherents of the most fundamental doctrines of the American government, likewise Socialists up to the present minute and ready to share the honors and keep step with the crowd. Between these two extremes we would find represented all of the elements, possessing in some degree at least all of the innumerable and conflicting views of the present generation upon questions of government. If we could assume that out of this new Babel of conflicting ideas and languages there could come a constitution consistent with itself, and representing fundamental doctrines by which the people would be willing to abide for a reasonable period, it might be worth while. But it is all too probable that in order to reach a conclusion that could be accepted or adopted at all, and to cover all subjects that were insisted upon, the constitution would emerge from the convention more bulky than it is now, and, if possible, with more conflicting sections, articles and provisions therein.

EXTINCT.

Unfortunately, the style of constitution exemplified by the Constitution of the United States has become practically extinct. This great instrument, adopted for the common defense and the general welfare, and covering the delegation of all desired powers from the several States to the central government for the common defense and the general welfare, the creation of legislative, executive and judicial powers of government, and all of the far-reaching considerations involved in the creation of such a government, was covered by a document that has commanded the admiration of thinking people throughout the world, and which has required but little amendment—originally a few to fit the Constitution to the wishes of a number of the States, and later, to meet a great moral issue, and still later, a few and a few only, to adjust the government to modern and changed methods of industry. Therefore, this great instrument has proven its sufficiency to meet all the demands upon it, without amendments, except such as will always arise under and in connection with any instrument dealing with changing human affairs.

The Constitution of the United States, and of all of the States, with a very few recent exceptions, was adopted consistent with certain theories of government carefully thought out and well understood. That is to say, "that the least government was the best," and that individual rights were paramount, and individual excellence the prime motive, and that individuals should be compelled to surrender to society only such limitations upon their rights as were necessary and practically indispensable to the common welfare.

The later doctrine, struggling in recent years for recognition with considerable success, represents the diametrically-opposite theory that society is the prime consideration, and the individual is but a "social unit" and that the first and larger consideration relates to the welfare of the mass of society, and that the individual has only such rights as may be allowed, in view of the predominating rights of the social body.

A careful examination of our present Constitution, with its amendments, while it will indicate many amendments merely expressive of a changed point of view, and others to adjust the powers of the State to the modern business methods and to the adequate control of public utilities, will indicate and demonstrate that the tendency has been away from the bill of rights, so called, and to limit the rights of individuals and extend the powers of government. The up-to-the-minute idea now, frankly and fully expressed, being that the doctrine that the least government is best is wrong, and that it becomes the province and the duty of government to devote itself to the control, regulation, limitation, aid and protection of the individual wherever its processes, restrictions and assistance are assumed to be for the social and general benefit or of advantage to the individual.

Such an examination of the Constitution and its amendments will demonstrate that while the bill of rights, so called, and all of the provisions for the protection of individual rights and property have been continued, unrepealed and unamended, that there has been an increasing number of amendments undertaking to withdraw, limit or override these individual rights, and with special reference to property rights.

WHAT IS WANTED?

In the first place we may, therefore, submit that no people should undertake to adopt a constitution at all until there is a fair consensus of opinion as to what they want. No people should attempt to adopt a constitution until they are willing to designate, in unqualified language, exactly what individual or personal rights consist of, and the limitations thereof. If they are of a state of mind to adhere to past doctrines to the extent of declaring and protecting individual rights, as heretofore, and at the same time are desirous, not by direction, but by indirection, of endeavoring to limit and take away these rights in certain directions, or as to certain classes, then they are not in a state of mind to adopt a constitution that will prove beneficial or workable, and that will not require almost instant and constant amendment.

History, I think, will demonstrate that conflicts of this character sooner or later reach a determinative point, and I have no doubt that within a reasonable period of years the people of California will be prepared to adopt a new, fundamental and comprehensive declaration of rights and of fundamental law, and by which they will be willing to abide for a reasonable and substantial length of time. That we are in any such a position now I do not think can be fairly contended. It may appear to many that progressive movements always go ahead, and that within a few years the American ideas of government will be so fundamentally changed that the constitution which will be adopted will be for society and for the mass, and will leave to the individual only such protection and only such rights and only such property as the majority are willing to accord.

However, history is not in accord with this view. People at times incline to radical movements of this character, but sooner or later comes the reversion as to one form or another of government that gives certain security to the individual, certain definite and established lines of procedure, and certain security and incentive in the accumulation of property, and the Anglo-Saxon peoples have always heretofore been peculiarly inclined in this latter direction.

We may, therefore, fairly assume, I think, that while obvious necessity requires that individual rights shall give way where public use, public necessity and public service require it, nevertheless the American mind will find a way to accomplish this, and a way to define and limit this public authority so that outside of these limitations and inside of them, so far as public right is consistent therewith, there will be established clear, firm and sufficient constitutional limitations that will continue to foster and protect individual excellence, individual initiative, and individual industry, without which neither society nor government can permanently thrive or prosper.

A CONVENTION?

It may be that a constitutional convention will be called. In fact, I think it is somewhat probable that such will be the result, because each side will be inclined to think that it will get what it wants as a result of such convention. My own prophecy is that neither side will get what it wants, and that nobody will be satisfied. Those who stand for the fundamental doctrines of American government will not be strong or numerous enough to cause the constitution to tend back to so-called fundamental doctrines, and those who favor so-called progressive or advanced views of government will have neither the unity of view, the coherency of ideas, or the courage to write out of the constitution the bill of rights or the limitations of government sustaining individual liberty, and they will not go to the length of writing this doctrine out of the constitution and leaving the other provisions therein. But I am inclined to prophesy that if a new constitution is adopted in California it will be the longest constitution ever written in any language as an original charter of government, although possibly not longer than the present constitution with its amendments; that it will carry practically all of the present bill of rights designed to protect individual liberty and property; that it will carry practically all of the modifications and attempted limitations thereof contained in the present constitution, with certain new ones; that such constitution will endeavor to represent something of Americanism, something of Socialism, and something of progressiveism. That it will neither establish, define, carry out or protect one or the other, and that as a document, it will in part be accepted by many and satisfactory to but few. I further prophesy that if such a constitution is adopted, it will be repeatedly and materially amended within ten years after its adoption.

Probably the situation as I am endeavoring to state it is as definitely set forth in the recent address of Gov. Johnson delivered in San Francisco, Saturday, December 6, 1913, as in any example that could be found.

> In the nation today are two diametrically opposed lines of thought concerning our government and its administration.
> On the one hand, there are the conservatives who believe firmly in a representative form of government—in placing between what they are pleased to term the "mob" and the ultimate sphere of governmental action, as many barriers and checks as it is possible to interpose; who distrust the people in the aggregate and question their ability to act intelligently for themselves; and who insist that they can only act through chosen representatives, and that to permit direct action on their part will mean chaos and anarchy.
> On the other hand are those who insist that the source of all political power is the people themselves; that the government must rest upon the intelligence of the people; that their will must, in all instances, be paramount; and that whatever they may be permitted to do by representation, they must be permitted to do by themselves.

"AGIN THE GOVERNMENT."

I pause here to observe that without any other change in the Governor's suggestions, except as to time and persons, the criticisms which he addresses against the so-called conservative of today are directed with equal force as against the American form of government and those who founded it, and who participated in the adoption of the Constitution, including Washington, Franklin, Madison, Jefferson and Hamilton, and, in fact, every person who ultimately advocated its adoption. Thus, readjusted, the first paragraph of the Governor's statement would read as follows:

> On the other hand, at the time of the adoption of the American Constitution, there were conservatives such as Washington, Franklin, Hamilton, Madison, and others, who believed firmly in a representative form of government, in placing between what they were pleased to term the "mob" and the ultimate sphere of governmental action, as many barriers and checks as it was possible to interpose; who distrusted the people in the aggregate, and questioned their ability to act intelligently for themselves, and who insisted that they could only act through chosen representatives, and that to permit direct action on their part would mean chaos and anarchy.

AS TO THE PEOPLE.

In passing, it may not be inappropriate to observe that the advocates of the divine intelligence and [illegible] of the people to act independently of fundamental law are not at all inclined to spare the people when it comes to restricting their individual activities, private life and personal rights. The people, cannot even carry on ordinary business, much less erect buildings, or compound medicines or practice a profession, or even prepare and dispose of and purchase ordinary food without some chosen or appointed representative passing upon their capacity or intelligence so to do. Nevertheless, the people are distrusted if they are asked to place over themselves a declaration of abiding and fundamental law for their common and universal protection, and if they are asked to choose amongst themselves without limitation or restriction, such intelligent representatives as they may desire to perform for them the functions of government.

If we were here debating things instead of stating them, it would be easy to demonstrate that no people are so free as those who have a universal and common grant of liberty; who have the questions pertaining to the infringement of such common rights, submitted to courts selected and provided in such way as they may appoint, and who act through such representatives as they may desire to choose from among themselves, without limitation, and that there is no greater delusion in connection with liberty and human rights than the delusion that a people who have established for themselves no common rights and common guarantees against the conflict of classes and of interest and of passion, are more free than those who by and for themselves have established and provided liberty under the law, which is the only real liberty that ever has or ever will be known to mankind.

FRANKLY STATED.

However, it is not, of course, meant to be suggested that the adoption of a new constitution for this State should await the time when a constitution could be adopted consistent with the views of one set of men or any number of classes of men. It is, however, submitted that it would be futile and worse than useless to attempt to adopt a constitution until there is some concensus of opinion. In fact, the adoption of a constitution based upon the theory that whatever the people may be permitted to do by representation they must be permitted to do by themselves, and that there shall be no restrain over the will of the majority, would be in the first place more in the nature of a repeal of the constitution than the adoption of a new one, and also in such direct and hopeless conflict with the Constitution of the United States as to serve no useful purpose.

This is not to protest or complain against existing conditions, but it is quite desirable that we shall be frank and truthful as amongst ourselves, and as already suggested, I am satisfied that the people of California, while now possessing about as many conflicting and diverse ideas with respect to the fundamentals of government as any people gathered under one jurisdiction in the world, within a very limited number of years, by further study, experience and discussion, will become reconciled to one course or the other.

When this time shall come, it will be proper and beneficial for us then to adopt a fundamental scheme of law with sufficient and moderate restrictions upon its amendment, such as will justify the expense, labor and thought necessary to bring it about. In other words, so that it will endure and remain as a basis under and in connection with which the people can understand their own rights and other people's rights, for under such a government alone can any people be free, happy and prosperous.

POOR WORK DOESN'T PAY.

Architects, as a Class, Insist Upon Experienced Contractors—Reputation of Oesigner at Stake.

[National Real Estate Journal:] Most architects are disinclined to have new firms estimate on their work unless they can give references from other architects showing that they are reliable and efficient, says the Construction News.

Architects, as a class, insist upon workmanship of the highest grade. They have troubles enough solving legitimate problems without taking on as an additional annoyance contractors who do sloppy work, or who have so little business ability that they neglect the job. You can't blame architects for this, as every piece of work, which, through faulty workmanship or poor materials, gives out in a short time, is a reflection upon the architect. No architect can afford to run the risk of losing the most precious asset of all—his reputation—a thing bound to occur if his buildings do not stand.

You cannot build work too well. Mechanics sometimes spend too much time on it, puttering around because they are not skilled enough to work well and work fast—but no job can be too carefully done. The contractor who thinks it can will lose out in the long run. Nothing makes a bigger hit with architect and owner than first-class work. Cheap work, even at a saving cost, never yet impressed an architect. Everybody wants a fine job—one that will stand.

TENANTS WHO STICK.

Landlord Who Keeps Property up Gains More in Long Run Than Fellow Who Squeezes Investment.

The policy of the landlord is an important factor in apartment-house success, says the New York Times. The apartment-house owner must determine which of two policies he is going to follow—whether he is going to keep the physical condition of his property at par as far as possible by granting his tenants' reasonable requests to keep his house a little better, by giving his tenants a little more, and as a result, receiving more in income, or whether he will follow the opposite course, granting tenants as little as possible, making only such repairs as are absolutely necessary and squeezing his investment for the purpose of extracting the last ounce of net return.

The consensus of opinion is in favor of giving and getting. A house gets a good name and is advertised by its tenants. This affords the best means of obtaining new tenants and of keeping the old ones satisfied.

The keynote of the situation is getting tenants who will stay—the wandering tenant, due to the incompetent owner, is the underlying cause of the big repair bills.

"My eye, you fawst people you are," he commented with wonder. "Here's Mrs. Pankhurst's visit only a month ago, you know, and you've got a [illegible] statue up to her already."

SMELTER MEN GO ON STRIKE.

Tacoma Rioters Fire Shots Into Company Yard.

Work for the Unemployed Not Hard to Find.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Jan. 3.—Increase of working hours without an increase of wages is the reason given by 250 laborers at the Tacoma Smelter for going on strike. A notice was posted Tuesday saying the working time of the yard force would be increased from nine to ten hours a day, with the nine wage scale of $2.25 per day. Officers say the places of the strikers are being filled and that the plant has not been crippled in the least.

About midnight Thursday night some of the yardmen working an eight-hour shift, and who were not affected by the company's order, were attacked by a crowd of about fifty strikers who gathered on the bluff near the smelter. Several shots were fired by the strikers, but no one was hurt.

WORK FOR WILLING MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 3.—Relief work for every unemployed man in the city who is willing to accept it will be provided, according to a decision reached yesterday at a conference between members of the Council and the County Commissioners. Notices are being received from men who have land clearing and other work in the country to perform, offering to furnish employment to a large number.

LOSS INCURRED BY STRIKES.

Over Four and a Half Million Dollars Lost by Working People of New Jersey in One Year.

[Portland Spectator:] In the twelve months that ended on September 30, 1913, the wage-earners of New Jersey lost [illegible] by strikes. It is a large sum, and its withdrawal from circulation among the working people caused much privation and heartrending misery. About 50,000 people were involved in 180 strikes; one of these strikes lasted nearly six months, and paralyzed business in Patterson. What the employers lost is not known; the only persons who appeared to feel no ill effects from the strikes were the labor leaders who called them.

From the labor standpoint, twenty-[illegible] of the strikes were successful, twenty-four were partly successful, and sixty-eight failed. Think of the waste, the sorrow, the suffering and the crime in that record. And all could have been avoided. There is no more necessity for a strike as a means of determining the rights of employees and employers than there is for trying to determine the merits of a suit at law by assassination of the litigants. Strike and lock-out alike are the warfare of barbarism; as many persons have suffered and died in the conflicts of labor and capital as have perished in the no-less brutal battles between nations in modern times.

PERCENTAGE OF IDLENESS.

Report of New York Labor Commissioner Shows a Great Increase During 1913 Among Union Workers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALBANY (N. Y.) Jan. 3.—Lack of work, not labor disputes, was responsible for an increased percentage of idleness among union workers in New York State during 1913, according to a statement yesterday by Labor Commissioner Lynch. His reports show a higher percentage of idleness than in any year since 1886, with the exception of 1908.

Will Fight Trade Unions.

[The American Employer:] Word comes from England, says a press report, that employers are forming a great organization with an enormous war fund, to fight trade unions, a move greater and more far-reaching than anything yet attempted. Some employers, like Sir Benjamin Browne, the engineer and shipbuilder, are inclined to doubt the wisdom and usefulness of the proposal of a general agreement and think that the leaders of the movement should make it perfectly clear that they are not undertaking to fight what is understood by the term "legitimate trade unionism." One of the promoters of the movement, in discussing its objects, said that the organization would not be antagonistic to trade unions that respect the liberty of non-unionists, that its only antagonism would be to the trade unionism which sets itself up to become a monopoly by coercing members of a trade or calling into unions.

[illegible] Labor News.

[The American Employer:] "One of the things," says The Industrial [illegible] of Syracuse, N. Y., "which some of the delegates to the New York State Workingmen's Federation convention at Utica last week [illegible] a little around the collar was that the Label Committee was making its report to the convention in which it was stated that only seven girls are employed but part of the time in only one factory in the United States making union label collars. In other words, "seven girls make all the collars for union men in the United States," the paper declares. And there are more than 2,-000,000 union men.

Persons employed (average)	948,706
Yearly wages	$ 601,755,267
Annual product	2,970,143,382
Cost of materials used	1,710,324,600
The chief products are:
Women's clothing	270,646,086
Men's clothing	224,943,048

New York City's total factory product each year is 60 per cent. greater than that of Chicago, the city next in rank, and it is also greater than that of any State other than New York, except Pennsylvania. In 1910 the population of New York (metropolitan district) was 6,474,571, including 4,766,883 for the city proper. Its factories lead the country, as to work, wages and product, in five chief industries, namely, women's clothing, men's clothing, printing and publishing, baking industry and tobacco products. Data of workers and wages in some other of our cities follow:

PHILADELPHIA.

Factories	9,568
Persons employed (average)	358,218
Yearly wages	$200,933,650
Annual product	911,014,910
Cost of materials used	529,992,413

Philadelphia ranks third among our manufacturing cities. Its principal industries are woolens and worsteds, printing and publishing, sugar refining, foundries and machine shops, women's clothing, men's clothing and petroleum refining.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Factories	2,639
Persons employed (average)	55,177
Yearly wages	$ 43,298,791
Annual product	189,593,117
Cost of materials used	117,440,976

Alameda and Berkeley, as part of the San Francisco-Oakland metropolitan district for census purposes, are included in these figures. The principal industries of the district are sugar refining, printing and publishing, slaughtering and meat packing, foundries and machine shops, lumber and shipbuilding.

ST. LOUIS.

Factories	2,391
Persons employed (average)	128,483
Yearly wages	$82,157,283
Annual product	430,170,244
Cost of material used	290,562,373

Slaughtering and meat packing leads in value of products, but boots and shoes hold first place as to workers and wages. The other principal wage producers are tobacco products, steel works and rolling mills, copper, tin and sheet-metal products (an increase of 383.1 per cent. in ten years) crease of 383.1 per cent. in ten years.) per cent. in wage-earners.

CHICAGO.

Factories	10,202
Persons employed (average)	293,850
Yearly wages	$ 208,626,915
Annual product	1,308,779,818
Cost of materials used	870,584,561

Chicago district is only exceeded by New York district among the factory districts of the United States. Its principal industries are slaughtering and meat packing, foundries and machine shops, men's clothing, steel works and rolling mills, steam railroad car construction shops, distilleries, printing and publishing, cement making and blast furnaces.

Workers and Wages in Shoddy.

Factories in United States	88
Persons employed	2,320
Yearly wages	$ 907,000
Annual product	7,446,000
Cost of materials used	5,000,000

The prevailing hours of work are sixty per week for 64.7 per cent. of the workers; 19 per cent. work fifty-four to sixty hours, and 13.1 per cent. from sixty to seventy-two hours per week.

Workers and Wages in Carpets, Rugs.

Factories	139
Persons employed	34,706
Yearly wages	$17,745,000
Annual product	71,188,000
Cost of materials used	39,563,000
Capital invested	75,627,000

In ten years the number of workers has increased 17.2 per cent.; the wages disbursement, 39.7 per cent., and the value of the product (prices went up,) 47.7 per cent. These were the average increases for the country. For New York State alone they were relatively larger, with New York leading in the industry. Her wage-earners increased 38.3 per cent. Children employed in the industry number 1351, Pennsylvania leading with 639, followed by Massachusetts, with 366. In Massachusetts and New York more than half of the spinners and weavers are women, while in New Jersey and Pennsylvania men are largely in the majority. Hours of work range from fifty-four to sixty weekly. That is the limit of weekly work in this industry.

Work and Wages Notes.

Wages have been cut from 10 to 40 per cent. by the Federal Terra Cotta Company of Woodbridge, N. J. The American Federation of Labor is trying to get the cut reversed.

The General Electric Company has reduced its working force by 5000 among its several factories.

The Phoenix Ceramic Company of Metuchen, N. J., has placed its employees on piece work instead of straight wages. There is great dissatisfaction among the workmen, who say they cannot make as much as under the straight wage system. The American Federation of Labor has been appealed to, but what influence has it got in such a case? It cannot effectively dictate to the employing company. Of what real use to workers is the American Federation, or its president, Gompers, anyway?

Beginning January 1 the pay of the motormen and conductors employed by the Public Service Company of New Jersey was increased $200,000 a year in the aggregate without any strike. The very lowest wages on this line (beginners) will now be $12 a week.

The Steel Corporation has been employing 221,025 men and paying them $189,000,000 a year in wages. During the last few weeks the force has been cut down by 25,000.

Baldwin Locomotive Works pay rolls are running $100,000 a week short of this time last year. Twelve thousand workers instead of 18,000.

Wages in London.

House porters	$2.50 to $4.25 per week
Packers	4.25 to 6.25 per week
Van men	5.25 to 6.25 per week

With hours of labor from 7 a.m. to 10 and even 12 at night. These men are flocking into a trade union in the hope of forcing better wages and shorten hours, to both of which they are certainly entitled on these figures.

"Man Who Can't Laugh."

[Indianapolis News:] An unfortunate known as "the man who can't laugh" recently got a verdict of $25,000 from his former employers. He was thrown 140 feet down an elevator shaft, broke the second cervical vertebra, and has since lived in a steel corset with a head guard which prevents him from moving his head even a fraction of an inch. The slightest twist of his neck might break the spinal cord and kill him. A laugh or a sneeze would probably do this, hence his name.

WHY THE UNREST IN PATERSON?

[Editorial]

THERE is no good reason for the labor unrest and discontent which still exists in Paterson, New Jersey. Statistics show that since 1880 the average wages there have increased by over $180 per capita. Every man, woman and child engaged there in an industrial occupation receives on the average $180 a year more now in wages than they did thirty-two years ago. Hours of labor are also from six to eight less per week.

Here is the wages (average) record; per capita:

Years	Wages per year.
1880	356
1900	422
1905	464
1912	540
Increase since 1880	184

These figures do not include salaried workers. If they did the present average would be over $600 per year.

Paterson workpeople have been able to save considerable money. On January 1, 1913, the savings bank there had $34,678,000 on deposit, or $265.50 for every man, woman and child in the city. In 1912, the workers of Paterson saved several hundred thousands of dollars, they sent or carried abroad $700,000, and they invested over $500,000 in industrial life insurance. And, what is more, they were better clothed, better fed, and better housed than ever before.

Then why the unrest in Paterson? The propaganda of the Socialists since 1888 and of the I.W.W. since 1905 is responsible for it, and the whole propaganda of the Socialist leaders and of the I.W.W. agitators is one of misrepresentation.

Let us see, says F. G. R. Gordon, of Haverhill, Mass., writing from Paterson:

> When the workers began to protest against the unnecessary demands of the ten-hour day, they were working sixty hours per week, in spite of the fact that Saturday was only a partial work day, the employees of the mills knocking off at 2:30 p.m.
> When the fifty-five hour week was adopted in Paterson, years before it was granted in other States, it was hailed as a victory—and why? Because it meant the establishment of the "nine-hour day." That is what the workers themselves said, and if you will figure it out for yourself, you will see that they were right. A fifty-five hour week means nine and one-sixth hours a day. There is no other way in which it can be worked out.
> In other words, the silk workers have already almost as much as they are clamoring for. You can't divide fifty-five by six and make it mean anything else than practically a nine-hour day.
> In asking for the forty-nine and one-half hour week, however, it is not the nine-hour day they are demanding—though they call it that. A forty-nine and one-half hour week means an eight and one-quarter hour day. Yet these are the facts which the agitators do not recite.
> Again the workers are told that, in Pennsylvania, the silk industry is run on the fifty-hour-week basis. This is only partially true. In Pennsylvania, women and minors work fifty-four hours per week, but the schedule for the men still ranges from fifty-eight to sixty hours per week.
>
> It is upon just such statements that the "radical labor" propaganda is founded.

Rabid Unionite.

LABOR SECRETARY A BAD MISFIT.

ANYTHING BUT A NON-PARTISAN OFFICIAL.

Occupant of the Office Was Expected to Lean Neither to the Side of Employers Nor to that of Employees, but Act as a Mediator in Settling Industrial Disagreements.

[Washington Correspondence of New York Journal of Commerce:] It is already being perceived by friends of the Wilson administration that there is an undeniable "soft spot" in the management of things at the present time. This is found in connection with the situation developed by the organization of the new Department of Labor. The Secretary of that department is former Representative W. B. Wilson, who, when in the House, was chairman of the committee on that organization, and who had previously been an active trade-union man. When he took office the question placed before him was whether he could assume a distinctly non-partisan character, leaning neither to the side of employers nor to that of employees. He has not been able to do so.

In the act creating the Department of Labor was included the following provisions:

"That the Secretary of Labor shall have power to act as mediator and to appoint commissioners of conciliation in labor disputes whenever in his judgment the interests of industrial peace may require it to be done."

This act was approved March 4, 1913. On July 15, following, there was approved "an act providing for mediation, conciliation and arbitration in controversies between certain employers and their employees." This latter act related solely to railroads and other common carriers and provided for a regular board of mediation which should in future settle disputes between railways and their employees when such service was desired. The work thus provided for had in the past been done by the Bureau of Labor (now the Bureau of Labor Statistics,) which has been moved into the new Department of Labor, although it was formerly in the Department of Commerce and Labor. The head of that bureau had made a success of his mediation, working with the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and others. So far had he succeeded that most of his time was occupied in settling labor disputes into which he and his colleagues had been voluntarily summoned by the parties. It was supposed that by removing this field of work and giving it to a special commission, while retaining to the Department of Labor simply the field of industrial mediation and conciliation, the latter would be given a chance to do in the industrial world what had already been successfully done in the railroad world, and would carry the precedents already established by the old Bureau of Labor forward in a successful and growing manner. This was probably the most important single duty assigned to the new department. The situation was serious and especially important because at that time there existed a disturbed condition in various places which has since involved the labor forces of some five different States, producing a condition bordering upon civil war in large territories. In West Virginia, for example, the condition was for months during the past year one of actual armed combat between employers and employees.

This opportunity has not been improved. The Secretary of Labor, an avowed trades-unionist, has gone about announcing the fact at various conventions and other gatherings of organized labor. Employers consequently would have nothing to do with mediations conducted by the department under his charge. Inasmuch as the mediation provided for in the act was not compulsory, but could come to pass only (1) as a result of direct application on the part of both sides to an industrialcontest, or (2) as a result of the offer made by the head of the Department of Labor and accepted by both sides in the controversy, the attitude of the employers meant a very serious handicap to the department, assuming that it was to act as a machine for the settlement of disputes. The situation has been increasingly troublesome and at times has led to amusing results, as some subordinates of the department have occasionally resorted to the method of winning victories of arbitration after the methods followed by the generals of the later Roman empire, by simply announcing them. One or two curious incidents of this kind have recently occurred. But in spite of the attempt to develop a favorable situation by these rather artificial means, the fact remains that the department is anything but successful in connection with its functions of settling labor disputes. Positive and emphatic letters to officials of the government are now attesting the displeasure which seems to be felt by some members of the community because of the failure of the Secretary of Labor, who is supposed to be a non-partisan mediator, to maintain that character, inasmuch as he has instead presented himself to the community as being a convinced advocate of the ideas of organized labor. It is not believed that anything better can be expected for the future.

That this situation is bad for the administration needs hardly to be indicated, much less proven. It is a fact that the Department of Labor is badly discredited, except by those who consider it nothing more than a mouthpiece for the extreme labor element in the country—a status which was never supposed to be the function it was to fulfill. In the opinion of some of the most judicious and sincere friends of organized labor, the new Deparament of Labor is a heavy liability to the labor cause in the broader sense of that word, and is an immediate demand liability of a serious sort to the Wilson administration. In fact, it is the prevailing opinion that conditions cannot continue in their present posture, but must be radically modified in the near future.

Strikes Must End.

SHOULD REMEDY INJUSTICES.

RESORT TO VIOLENCE IS A SERIOUS MENACE.

Should Grant to Others What They Claim for Themselves and Their Families, and Must Do So Before the Labor Question Is Satisfactorily Settled.

[New York Commercial:] The recent victory of the conductors and trainmen in the eastern railroad district is of far-reaching influence on public opinion. It directs attention first to the possibility of compulsory arbitration laws that will do away with strikes and also to the possibility of government ownership of railroads and other public utilities. The trend in that direction is worthy of serious study and will undoubtedly become an issue in future election campaigns. It will not be long before some party of importance adapts these two policies as planks in its political platform.

In cases where skilled labor is necessary in order to protect the lives and property of the public, as in the case of locomotive drivers, the claims of the workers for a fairly high scale of wages is well founded. In return for this they must prove their efficiency and reliability just as a physician or a lawyer has to before he is allowed to practice his profession.

The injustices labor unionism must remedy in the long run are that the members do not attain a fixed standard of efficiency and knowledge of their work as a rule, and also, that they refuse to allow any one who chooses and can qualify for the position to enter their ranks. As has often been pointed out, the learned professions cannot exclude any worthy applicant from their ranks, and, if they tried to do so none would complain more loudly of the injustice than members of labor unions who have sons that wish to become doctors or lawyers. What they claim for themselves and their families they should be willing to grant to others and they must do so before the labor question is finally and satisfactorily settled.

The tendency of members of labor unions, and especially of their leaders, to resort to violence when they do not at once gain whatever they ask in the way of higher wages or improved conditions of labor is a serious menace to the welfare of the community and must be dealt with firmly by the authorities. We do not need more laws. All that is necessary is to put in force those that we have. In New York State it has been decided that a justice of the Supreme Court has authority to call upon the militia to aid in suppressing violence and in enforcing an injunction which has been issued. This was tested in the street car strike at Buffalo last spring. The point involved in the case was whether the country could be compelled to pay the cost of calling out the militia. The County Treasurer refused to issue the certificate required by law upon which money should be raised to pay the troops on the ground that the judge had exceeded his authority. The Supreme Court has issued a mandamus directing the County Treasurer to issue a certificate and this probably ends the matter and settles the law, though there has been some talk of appealing it to the Supreme Court of the United States. This case is important because it decides that the judge has the power to enforce any judgment that he may give. All laws rest on force, and the situation is now clearer since the application of this fundamental principle to the suppression of strikes by order of a Supreme Court judge has been settled.

The logical outcome of this decision seems to be the enactment of a compulsory arbitration law that will enable boards of arbitration or judges of the courts to try to decide speedily the justice of claims for higher wages and to enforce strictly all orders and notices forbidding employees to strike or to interfere with others if they themselves refuse to work. The safety and comfort of the public is always involved in strikes that affect public utilities in any way and the losses inflicted on the communities are always vastly greater than the amount involved in the dispute between employers and employees.

The strike fever has been growing so fast that even the drivers of the mail wagons in New York tried to hold up the United States mails in that city. As they come within the scope of the very stringent Federal statutes that apply to the postoffiffice service there is no need for worrying about the outcome of this little affair. But the public can be just as seriously incommoded by an interruption of railroad, street car, telegraph or telephone service as by stoppage of the mails, and the remedy should be as swift and sure in these cases. This would be of benefit to the men themselves because it would free them from the domination of agitators who have no other interest than to foment trouble and collect salaries and expenses for themselves. Whenever a government job is vacant there are always plenty of applicants for it, though the rate of pay is not higher than any other employments calling for similar diligence and intelligence. It is the certainty of continuous employment that seems to attract men to the government service, and better discipline would give public service employees great advantages and would make the service still more attractive.

Work for the Idle.

[Portland Spectator:] On some of the banners carried in a procession of men who exposed themselves indecently on the streets of Portland last Sunday was the inscription: "Give us work, or we'll give you hell." The spokesman for those who paraded under this banner with the strange device explained what the inscription meant; he said the troop that thus demanded and threatened wanted work at union wages; no other sort of wages would satisfy them.

It is likely that this man who elected himself tonguester for the paraders would refuse to accept work that promised to be any more laborious than chin-moving. The applicant for a job who begins dictating terms to his prospective employer is looking for trouble rather than work.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES AND STRIKERS OF THIS BUSY WORLD.

MORE than $10,000,000 is the loss already by the Southern Colorado coal miners' strike since it started in September, according to estimates which the Denver Times regards as conservative.

They include the loss of wages to 11,000 miners who are striking, and of 7000 railroad employees who are out of work because of the strike; loss of traffic to the railroads, increased cost of coal to the public, pay of mine guards, cost of maintenance of militia, loss of property and incidental expenses.

This loss is absolute. It can never be recovered. If it had been caused by a convulsion of nature or by a conflagration, the whole country would take notice and sympathize with the stricken State. Because it comes of a strike it passes almost unnoticed.

And what good can come to any one of the strike, directly or indirectly? None has been mentioned. Not even a statement has been made why the men are striking, except one or two references to "recognition of the union"—the Western Federation of Miners—as in the Michigan copper strike and the loss in Colorado, as in Michigan, is still going on. Do strikes ever pay?

Employees of the Consolidated Car Heating Company of Albany, N. Y., are out on stirke for the reinstatement of some dozen union men who are laid off. The company, as is its right, persists in maintaining an open shop. Slack business compelled these "lay offs," with others to follow. Officers of the union announce their intention to conduct a peaceable strike so as to secure public support.

Hotel waiters in Cleveland, O., are striking again for $5 a month more pay and improved working conditions. A recent strike for the same objects was dropped without result.

Leeds, Eng., has a bad strike of 3000 workers for the municipality. Leeds is a city where municipal ownership of utilities is run to the extreme. The departments affected by the strike are sanitary, sewerage, water, gas, electricity and parks, as well as the street lighting. If the strike is not promptly settled the municipally-owned tramway service will be suspended. Then indeed the citizens will "walk in darkness." The men's demand is for a weekly increase of 48 cents all around. In England "wages" talks in pennies. How very different here.

As they are not getting the 15 per cent. raise asked the British postal, telephone and telegraph workers (all government employees,) are again seriously considering the advisability of striking—97,500 of them. They also have other minor grievances. Conference meetings of delegates from the men are being held frequently. They were ready to strike at Christmas, but did not want to make trouble for the public at that busy festive season.

A new spirit of cheerfulness and confidence now pervades Dublin, Ireland. The port is reopened and the quays so long deserted and silent are once more a scene of busy traffic. The strike is still officially on though settlement negotiations, opposed by James Larkin (England's Haywood,) are under way. It is not believed, after his "fiery-cross" fiasco in England and his quarrel with the English trades unions, that Larkin will be able to retain his old influence over all the workers. The employers are anxious for peace; the English delegates who have earned the confidence of the public, are striving hard (opposed by Larkin) for peace; the men are despondent, and for the most part really anxious to get back to work. Chiefly "recognition of the union" now stands in the way of a settlement of the lengthy and costly (mainly to the strikers) dispute.

Settlement of the Great Western Railway of England strike has set over 26,000 to earning wages again. The strike of only 2230 stopped the trains and threw 24,100 other workers into idleness and wages loss. Not a single point was gained by the strikers, but somewhat to the contrary—they have to subscribe 25 cents to 60 cents to a local hospital as penalty (besides the lost wages) for striking without cause.

Irish railwaymen are with representation on the new executive board of the National Railwaymen's Union of the United Kingdom. This strong governing body steadily refuses to recognize or aid any strike not authorized by it. Hence the utter collapse of the Great Western Railway strike and the abject surrender of the strikers.

Stringent efforts are being made to start a general strike of all the cooks, (the waiters and bartenders are already out) musicians, barbers, electricians, carpenters, painters, teamsters and baggagemen employed by the hotels of Cleveland, O.

More than $300,000 has been expended by striking garment workers of Philadelphia since they went on strike July 15, last, and the union treasury is now empty. No more strike benefits can be paid, and a vote to return to work without conditions, is likely. Think also of the five and a half months' wages also utterly lost. Do strikes pay?

Michigan copper strike leaders do not want a Federal probing of the strike doings there, even though the head leader, Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, was deported from Hancock, Mich., by indignant citizens. The mines are being operated by practically a full force of men. The strikers are gaining nothing but are suffering a very heavy wages loss. Trouble-making Socialist newspaper men are under arrest, charged with inciting riots.

Haywood, the I.W.W. leader, is back from London, boasting about the big things the I.W.W. are going to do in Ireland and Paris. He says, the I.W.W. will settle the Dublin transport workers' strike. How?

The money to be withdrawn (as a penalty for civic hostility by the international unions from the banks of Indianapolis, amounts to $1,000,000, instead of $5,000,000, as stated by them.

The telegraphers of the St. Louis and Frisco Railway have voted to strike, some 1500, but an agreement without strike is likely. They want a 15 per cent. raise and an eight-hour working day.

As a rule, there's nothing for strikers in striking.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) Jan. 3.—The Illinois legislative board of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen elected officers Thursday and adopted resolutions recommending the following legislation:

An eight-hour law for employees of railroads in the State; the "absentee voters' certificate," by which men in train service will not be deprived of their franchise right by being called on for duty on road on election day; clearance bill, providing for proper clearance from overhead and side obstructions; standard steel-framed caboose for purpose of eliminating box-car accommodations for trainmen, and a bill giving an injured employee the right to sue his employer in any State in which the carrier does business.

LANSING (Mich.) Jan. 3.—John Mitchell, whose term as vice-president of the American Federation of Labor has expired, announces that his retirement from official life in the federation does not mean that he will cease his activities in the interest of labor. He said he would devote his time largely to writing for the "cause."

The Message of the New Year

I am the NEW YEAR, come from the loins of Time bearing 365 days of Opportunity and a message of Good Cheer to the people of Southern California.

From my right hand flows Prosperity and from my left hand the Sunshine and the Rain, which stimulate virility and fruitfulness in tree and vine.

At the touch of my fingers the orchards of the Southland become fragrant with magic blossoms that are transmuted into golden fruit.

I offer unto all the triple prize of Home, Happiness and Health by the purchase of a planted orchard in Gibraltar Acres at Bloomington, 52 miles east of Los Angeles.

I offer unto all the Opportunity to buy a deciduous, citrus or olive orchard on that level, fertile, mountain-protected tract for but 10 per cent. of the purchase price down and $5 per acre per month.

I offer unto all the Opportunity to live amid the scenic beauties of the country and yet be in touch with rapid transit facilities, theaters, schools, churches and the other modern conveniences.

I offer unto all the Opportunity to participate in the Prosperity that characterizes the residents of the famous Bloomington Fruit Belt — noted the world over for bumper crops and for the superior quality and flavor of its oranges and olives.

I invite all to visit the headquarters of the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company, 142 South Spring Street, Los Angeles, California, and talk with the corporation's land salesmen about the Opportunity for wealth-getting Gibraltar Acres offer.

Signed,

DEALERS PREDICT BUSY SEASON.

MARKET OUTLOOK GOOD IN PORTERVILLE FIELD.

Newly-Incorporated Company to Develop Large Foothill Holding. Los Angeles Men Mentioned in Realty Transactions—Quarries to Be Opened.

PORTERVILLE, Jan. 3.—Constantly increasing confidence is manifested in the realty market for the ensuing year, and dealers here are preparing for the best season in the history of the district.

Announcement was made this week of the organization of the Thermal Water Company, which is the official title of a syndicate headed by Stephen A. Kieffer of Oakland, a business associate of "Borax" Smith, and J. W. Laverty of Los Angeles. The company has been incorporated for $50,000, all of which is subscribed. The purpose of the company is the development of a tract of 320 acres of general purpose orange and olive land, which the syndicate has acquired in the Richgrove foothills. It is stated that work on the property is to be started in the early spring.

W. R. Smith and A. L. Graham, formerly of Texas, and lately from Southern California, have purchased the W. Elster ranch, in the Visalia district, paying a given price of $16,500 for the eighty-acre alfalfa property. The land is partly improved. The new owners are practical dairymen and expect to stock the place with high-class cattle.

H. L. Weaver of the Broadway Department Store, in Los Angeles, has purchased a ten-acre tract of orange land in the Richgrove foothills. It is stated that he plans to put the tract out to trees in the early spring.

E. V. Katterhorn of Ontario, Can., has purchased from J. W. Wadel eighty acres of alfalfa land in the Wasco section. Katterhorn expects to make a high-class dairy of the new holding.

C. W. Moore, a contractor and builder of Los Angeles, has purchased twenty acres of orange land in the Richgrove district. Moore plans to make his home in this section during a portion of the year, while he develops the holding. He will probably set the tract to early navels.

Adolph Pernu, recent purchaser of a large tract of granite lands in the foothills east of this city, has secured title to a strip of land one mile in length, sixty feet wide, extending from the main line of the Porterville Northeastern station at Adobe, to the hills where his stone quarries are to be located. Deeds for the property contain a clause that the land will be used for the construction of an industrial railway tract and that the work must be started within sixty days.

UNIONITES FOUGHT SHERMAN LAW TO THE LIMIT.

The Decision in the Danbury Hatters Boycott Case Was Only Reached After the Courts Had Passed Upon Every Question Raised by Defendants.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] The latest decision in what is known as the Danbury Hatters' case, is strictly in line with the long list of judicial rulings that have preceded it. The history of the case is a highly interesting one. It had its origin in an action at law in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Connecticut, which was begun by D. E. Loewe & Co., about the beginning of 1904 to recover damages under section seven of the Sherman act. The plaintiffs composed a partnership which had for years been manufacturing hats in Danbury, and selling them to dealers in a number of States of the Union. The defendants were members of the Danbury Hatters' Union, which was a branch of the United Hatters of North America, which was one of the component organizations of the American Federation of Labor. In 1901, the Hatters' Union resolved to unionize the factory of the plaintiffs, and on July 25, 1902, a strike was called and a boycott declared, whose object was to prevent the plaintiffs from selling their hats in other States than Connecticut, and thus to make it impossible for purchasers of hats in other States to buy any hats manufactured by the plaintiffs. The boycott was sufficiently successful to convert a profit of $27,000 made in 1901, into losses ranging from $17,000 in 1902 to $8000 in 1904. The action was begun by the filing of an elaborate complaint, and in pursuance of the statute of Connecticut that complaint was accompanied by certain attachments levied upon property of the defendants to secure the payment of whatever judgment might be recovered in the action.

The first motion made by the defendants consisted in filing a plea in abatement and a motion to vacate the attachments on the ground that a suit for the same cause of action had previously been brought and was still pending in the Superior Court of the State. The plaintiffs filed a demurrer to the plea, and on June 9, 1904, Judge Platt, the United States District Judge, sustained that demurrer and held the plea in abatement to be bad because the State court had no jurisdiction to enforce section seven of the Sherman law. The next thing done by the defendants was to file a demurrer to the complaint, which, of course, involved the tacit assumption that the complaint was true in point of fact. On that assumption, the demurrer took the ground that the facts stated in the complaint did not constitute a violation of the Sherman act. Although the Supreme Court had decided in the Debs case that the law was applicable to restraint of interstate commerce by means of labor strikes, it was argued that the law was not applicable to labor boycotts. On December 7, 1906, Judge Platt sustained this demurrer pro forma in order that the question of law which it raised, might be taken immediately by a writ of error to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Thereupon the case, without being decided by the Circuit Court, was transferred to the Supreme Court of the United States by means of a writ of certiorari.

HANDSOME DWELLING.

One of the most attractive dwellings recently completed in the Wilshire district is the new home of W. D. Richards at No. 626 St. Andrews boulevard. The place represents an investment of about $20,000, and was planned by Loy Lester Smith. The architect in his designing followed the style of the Italian renaissance. The living-room is large and elegantly finished in mahogany. The dining-room is wainscoted in oak and has tapestry panels and canvas-decorated ceilings. The conservatory finish is carried out in gray tones and the library is in Flemish oak. The rest of the house, consisting of five bedrooms, a gallery, parlor, sleeping porch and three tiled baths, is in ivory white.

RENTALS ABROAD.

Cost of Apartments Growing Faster Than Incomes in European Cities—Owners Decreasing.

[Real Estate Journal:] Rentals on apartments and houses in the principal cities of Germany are rising faster than incomes, and as a result the percentage of house owners is steadily decreasing. A hundred years ago 70 per cent. of all Berliners owned their own homes; now only 12 per cent. do so. The average number of persons dwelling in one house in Berlin is seventy-seven, as against eight in London. Of all Germany's important cities, only Lubeck and Bremen still cling to the one-family house. Everywhere else the apartment-house has become the rule.

In 1868 residents of Hamburg with incomes from $225 to $300 a year paid 20 per cent. of the total for rent; they now pay more than 25 per cent. The proportion of rent to income has risen in Breslau to 34 per cent. among persons with incomes of $1000. It is not at all uncommon to find persons who pay more than a third of their entire income for rent alone, and in some cases the percentage reaches 40. It is doubtful if any other nation in the world pays such a high percentage of its income for housing. A Berlin authority estimates at 32.4 the average percentage paid for rent by those inhabitants of Schoenberg, a division of Berlin, whose incomes do not exceed $300 a year.

PORTALS OF MOTOR SALON ARE WIDE OPEN TOMORROW

Handsome Display of Nineteen-Fourteen Cars to Be Exhibited This Week in Grand-Avenue Pavilion. Many Distributors Ready to Introduce Their New Lines of Stylish Models—Worth Seeing.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

MOTOR car enthusiasts are promised an automobile show in which the bright gems of the motor world will be exhibited in a setting that is unique. The Grand-avenue pavilion has been decorated to the queen's taste and the cars are to be rolled into position this morning for the grand opening tomorrow.

Nothing has been left out of this grouping of late model 1914 motor cars. The growth of the automobile industry can be seen to advantage. The latest improvements, the finest line of accessories, the best self-starters we have on the market, together with the fullest line of motor equipment is to be shown.

The decorations are handsome. The pavilion is fitted in such a manner that it is easy to arrange a background for these cars that will be second to nothing ever planned. The cars themselves are well worth our careful inspection and with the extra decorations, the show will be one of the best we have ever had an opportunity to witness.

The largest space has been taken by Don Lee, distributor for the Cadillac. Nine of the cars are to be shown in a way that will be pleasing to all those who take in the exhibit this week. The late Cadillac models are to be grouped around a stripped chassis and will be shown in the series, as it will be possible to exhibit every Cadillac model now on the market.

CADILLAC CARS.

Having the largest exhibit, Don Lee and his Cadillacs will be one of the main attractions. Lee plans to show nine distinct models, among them being the new convertible. This is the newest type of Cadillac and is furnished on a 134-inch chassis. It is one of the most beautiful bodies ever furnished on a motor car. Three distinct types of body are incorporated in the one. The car can be used as a completely enclosed car with all windows up and top in place. The side windows can easily be lowered, opening the car on either side, in front or rear. Or if an open touring car is desired for summer, the top can be lowered back and there are no posts left standing with the exception of the glass front. The body is beautifully designed and finished.

In addition to this attractive model the five and seven-passenger touring cars will be exhibited, the four-passenger phaeton, the roadster, coupe and limousine.

The Simplex-Mercer Company will exhibit four cars, two new Simplex models, the new Mercer roadster and the Mercer racing car that won the light car championship.

The Savage Tire Company is planning a unique exhibit. It will be new and novel and will be unlike anything ever seen in a motor car show. Teddy Tetzlaff will have full charge of the Savage booth.

HOMER ENTRY.

An entry at the motor show which is absolutely new to Los Angeles is the Homer light delivery car, the first of which was this week turned out at the Homer factory on San Fernando road. The Homer is of a half-ton capacity and is equipped with a two-cylinder, air-cooled, Homer motor of about twenty horse power. This motor, owing to its simplicity of construction, is very light and admits of building a car of light construction. The frame is of one-piece steel tube, giving a strong, yet light construction, and is especially stiff for the weight.

The motor is hung on the frame under the body and is easily accessible through the footboard.

The car to be exhibited at the show is the first of a full line of commercial vehicles which will be built by the Homer factory. It is the an-

Five years of growth in the automobile industry of California.

Above, we have the first Ford car. Our registrations in 1910 measured up to about the proportions of this little midget. Next in order we have the Brush, which is about the size of our registrations for 1911. Then comes the Cadillac coupe, and who more fitting than Don Lee to represent our wonderful growth in 1912, when we reached, by selling 32,283 cars, the sixty thousand mark. Next we have the handsome Packard tourer with a remarkable total of almost 100,000, which Earle C. Anthony helped us to swell. That last triumph represents our present registration.

BASKETBALL MEN MEET IN OAKLAND.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND, Jan. 3.—Preliminary steps have been taken here for the formation of an intercollegiate basketball league of California and Nevada. Representatives of the universities of Stanford, California, Nevada, Santa Clara College and the College of the Pacific at San Jose met here yesterday afternoon and agreed upon a programme, which calls for another meeting here January 17, when a "big seven" schedule will be adopted and permanent officers chosen. The University of Southern California was represented by proxy, and it is believed that Santa Clara University favors the movement and will be represented at the next meeting. The schedule will call for six games from each team, the championship to be decided on a percentage basis. Handsome trophies have been pledged by those interested in the sport.

PASTEBOARDS FOR DEALERS.

Help is in sight for automobile dealers, who are restricted to only five license numbers under the new Motor Vehicle Act. William F. Klinger, manager of the automobile department of the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company, is the good Samaritan who has come to the rescue in the nick of time.

W. R. Ormsby, superintendent of the new motor vehicle department, sent in an order to the State authorities for only five numbers for each dealer. Now we have dealers who need ten times that many numbers. It will take at least three months before additional plates can be made. This would mean a decided hardship on dealers who are forced to operate with only five sets of plates.

Atty-Gen. Webb, after a conference with Klinger and others yesterday, agreed to allow Superintendent Ormsby to issue pasteboard cards to dealers which will read "License Applied For." There will be a space for the dealer's name and the date of application for the license. The motor vehicle department of the State of California will issue these cards to dealers only and they will serve as temporary permits.

COULON WANTS TO MEET WILLIAMS.

TELLS LICHTENSTEIN TO FIX UP THE DETAILS.

Bantam Champion Had Offer from McCarey for Washington's Birthday But Thinks It Is Too Early. Is Willing to Scrap, But Wants 116 Ringside.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Johnny Coulon, champion of the bantamweight boxers, is to battle "Kid" Williams of Baltimore in a twenty-round contest at Los Angeles. The date of the battle has not been decided upon, but probably will be in a few weeks. The title holder received an offer from Promoter Tom McCarey of Los Angeles a few weeks ago to fight Williams February 22. This date is a trifle early for Coulon as he desires to engage in a few bouts before he signs to clash with the Baltimore boxer.

Coulon did not answer McCarey's communication but assigned Larney Lichtenstein, who looks after Jimmy Clabby's interests, to see the promoter on the Coast and obtain from him his best proposition, and also when it would be most convenient for him to stage the battle which will be for the bantamweight championship of the world.

Lichtenstein went to the Coast recently to arrange matches for Clabby and also to look after his training. Having been asked by Coulon to see McCarey, he will complete the details for the battle with Williams.

Trouble Ahead.

RIVERS MEETS WOLGAST AGAIN.

Milwaukee to Be Scene of the Next Battle.

Levy, Rivers and Abdul Leave Tomorrow.

Will Be Renewal of the Old Grudge Fight.

Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, old rivals and participans in the most sensational battle ever seen in the old Vernon arena, are to meet once more, the terms being arranged last night. This time the place is to be Milwaukee, the distance ten rounds, and the date January 23.

The bloody fray of a couple of years ago, which ended in the thirteenth round with both boxers lying on the floor, will never die in the memories of the fans who saw it, and it appears that the scrap at Milwaukee will be a continuation of the old grudge which remained unsettled after that bout.

Since that last battle, Wolgast has lost his title to Willie Ritchie and the new champion succeeded in defending it against Rivers, but Wolgast has been going back, sustaining defeats at the hands of Tommy Murphy, Charley White and others, while Rivers has gone on his way beating everybody but the champion.

Wolgast apparently took a new lease on life with the first of the year when he knocked out Jack Redmond in five rounds, and it is quite possible that he will get into shape again to put up the battle of his life against Rivers.

Rivers, with his manager Joe Levy, and his trainer Abdul, the Turk, will leave for Milwaukee Monday morning so as to be on the ground bright and early and put in some good licks in preparation for the match.

AMERICANS ARE HOT AFTER TROPHY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—In an effort to capture the British international trophy several motor boats here and in Philadelphia are planning a syndicate to build and maintain a high-speed boat to be sent abroad this year. Designs for several boats are being drawn, it was announced today.

These plans call for boats between thirty and forty feet in length. The promoters include several wealthy men who are devoted to motor boating.

Commodore H. U. Melville of the Motor Boat Club of America, recently visited the West and was satisfied there would be several speed boats available from that section to race for the big prize.

CRANE GOES ABROAD.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Joshua Crane, for a number of years court tennis champion of the United States, is going abroad to try for the British championship, which will start on April 20. He will sail March 1 and will be accompanied by Walter Kinsella, former professional of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club.

Brakes Essential to Safety on Any Thoroughfare.

Pierce-Arrow Shoes Made to Stop Car in Short Space.

Special Attention Given to Real Scientific Problem.

There are several ways to stop a motor car traveling at speed. One is to run it into a good stout stone wall. Though unquestionably efficient, this method is commonly objected to as being wasteful and over dangerous. Some brakes, while not quite so radical, are sufficiently wasteful and dangerous in their action to be likened to the stone wall.

It sometimes happens that, to save life, the stone-wall method is the best. It is occasionally desirable to apply brakes sufficiently to lock the wheels. As a general practice, however, there is little to choose between the two from the point of view of damage to the pocketbook of the car owner.

It is a scientific axiom that energy is indestructible. It may be inactive, as for instance, the energy stored in a ton of coal or gallon of gasoline. It may be active, as in the case of steam acting against a piston head. It is further true, that as soon as energy becomes active it begins to change its visible form of manifestation. In most of the mechanical manifestations of energy, this change is in one of two directions; either from heat to motion or from motion to heat.

The forward movement of a motor car is an example of the translation of energy from heat into motion and the stopping of the car is an example of energy translation from motion back again into heat.

A simple example of this translation from motion into heat is witnessed when a piece of metal is struck a number of blows with a hammer. The motion of the hammer head is arrested by the impact with the metal and the temperature of both hammer head and metal is very sensibly raised.

ABOUT BRAKES.

Motor car brakes are the medium through which the motion of a car is translated into heat. To be truly efficient, they must perform their function with the minimum of wear on the tires and mechanism of the car, and with the minimum of shock to the passengers. They must do this with the maximum of celerity.

Brakes may be considered as a friction machine for generating and radiating heat. It will be easily understood that the moment that motor car wheels become locked, friction between brake shoes and drum ceases, and the whole work of heat generation is transferred to those portions of the tires in contact with the road, and the road itself. The destructive effect upon the tires of this concentrated friction may be readily imagined and particularly so when it is realized that the heat generated has a very marked softening effect upon the rubber.

Pierce-Arrow brake shoes and drums are made large so that the frictional wear may be distributed over a large surface and the generated heat quickly radiated. In addition to large radiating surfaces, it is desirable that a considerable body of metal be in contact with the brake liners to draw the heat away from the friction surfaces by means of induction.

One of the chief disadvantages of a thin band brake is this lack of body. An inch of water in the bottom of a vessel will boil just twice as quickly as two inches. The thin band will heat up much more rapidly than a comparatively heavy brake, such as used on Pierce-Arrow cars.

Pierce-Arrow brake-shoe linings are of such materials that considerable pressure must be exerted before the wheels lock. In case of emergency the wheels can be locked, but they are not likely to lock under ordinary circumstances. It is extremely difficult to prevent some designs of brakes from locking the wheels. The range of pressure between "free" and "locked" is too short; durability, flexibility, and the owner's pocketbook are sacrificed to brutality, lightness and low cost.

ADVERTISING IS ACCEPTED METHOD.

Commenting upon the fact that some years ago advertising was thought unsound in principle, L. L. King, says:

"Many of the finest old houses held aloof, saying that they did not have to advertise. Even today there are some business and professional men so bound by custom and tradition that they have not yet availed themselves of the advantages of advertising. By so much as these customs hold out, by just so much is the public deprived of knowing all about these professions and businesses.

"The most successful and the only honest way to deal with the public," says Mr. King, "is to 'play the game out in the open.' If there are true and interesting reasons why the public should buy something from a certain manufacturer, then this manufacturer should be glad of the chance to say so over and over again, through the medium of reliable newspapers.

"Many instances can be cited where present manufacturers gained a world wide reputation, and their produce became known throughout the entire universe, simply through their aggressiveness in pushing their goods through the aid of these various high class mediums."

HIGHWAYS OF JERSEY.

New Jersey has built 150 miles of improved road during the past year, the second largest number in the history of the State's road building. All told, the State now has more than 1500 miles of improved highway—a high percentage considering its size and population. Col. Edwin A. Stevens, probably the wealthiest road commissioner in the United States, who was appointed to his post by President Wilson while he was Governor, is firmly of the opinion that convict labor, when used on State roads, should be strictly under the control of the road authorities, even as to their safekeeping. Incidentally, he notes that the increase in local registration has made good the loss sustained in foreign registration, due to New Jersey's reciprocity act.

ELECTRIC HAS HANDSOME HOME.

WOODS AGENCY FOR BEKINS-SPEERS MOTOR COMPANY.

Stylish Car to Be Handled by Same Concern that Holds Lozier Agency—High-Grade Coupe and Brougham Designs Here for the Opening of New Year.

The Woods Electric agency has been secured by the Bekins-Speers Company and the first shipment of coupes and broughams arrived last week.

Manager Froman Speers has been investigating the electric market for several months with the aim of securing a high-grade line. He satisfied himself on his recent trip east that the Woods was just what his firm desired.

The new Woods comes in several different models. There is the brougham seating four, all seated forward. A larged brougham seats five all forward. The first-named model has a wheel base of ninety-two inches and the larger one 102 inches.

A smaller model is furnished as a coupe, roadster or victoria. This company builds a special collapsible roadster which seats two.

The method of controlling the movement of the Woods Electric is by means of two conveniently-placed and easily-moved levers, mounted on pillars at the left and directly in front of the rear seat.

The control of the electric current driving the car is by means of a shorter lever. A slight forward movement of this lever starts the car at first speed, and a further movement of the lever brings the car to second, third, fourth and fifth speeds, either forward or back, as desired. Both the backward, the emergency switch lever may be raised to an upright position where they are entirely out of the driver's way.

The direction of the movement of the car is governed by the position of the small upright emergency switch at the extreme left of the power controller lever. When this switch lever is in an upright position the current is cut off. When it is desired to drive the car ahead, this switch is pushed to a forward position, after which the power controller handle is pushed forward gradually to the speed desired. When the car is to be driven backwar, the emergency switch lever is moved to a back position and the power controller handle moved forward, exactly as in driving the car ahead.

This emergency lever may be used to stop the car quickly by simply moving it back to an upright position, at the same time applying the brake. When the power is cut off by means of this switch, it is impossible to close the circuit again until the controller handle is moved to an "off" position. This makes it impossible for the car to be started except through the first speed, and is one of the features which makes the Woods car the safest to operate.

When it is desired to apply the controller brake in stopping the car, the controller handle is pulled toward the driver to a position back of the neutral or "off" position. This operates a very effective brake on the end of the armature shaft. The car may be kept in perfect control by the use of this brake alone—an important feature particularly when a woman is the driver.

SAVAGE TIRE MAN HUSTLES.

J. S. Binford, sales manager of the Savage Tire Company, was in Los Angeles last week making arrangements for the Savage exhibit at the coming automobile show. Mr. Binford stated that he would be in Los Angeles several days during the show and in all probability Arthur W. Savage would be here to see the show.

From P. H. Greer.

NEW YORK'S AUTO SHOW TO ECLIPSE ALL OTHERS.

THIS YEAR'S show in New York will surpass anything of the kind ever staged in this country.

This is the gist of a telegram received at the Greer-Robbins Company from P. H. Greer, who arrived in Gotham yesterday, to attend the monster affair at the Grand Central Palace. Greer was the first of the local contingent to make the trip across the country, and as a special favor, was given a peek at the display floors before the doors were opened to the general public.

Both the Hupmobile and Mitchell, which the Greer-Robbins Company distributes in this territory, have places of honor on the main floor of the great show. Each factory is represented by a full line of cars, every model of the current season being accorded its rightful place. The Mitchell six, which recently established a world's non-stop record for cars of its class, was to have been sent on from Pittsburgh as part of the exhibit, but failed to arrive, and may lose its position in the display.

According to advices from Greer, it is probable that this season's show will exceed in every way those of other years. Promoters of the big affair assert that the advance sale of tickets indicates a record attendance, and the number and class of cars being shown represents more cash value that has ever before been assembled in this country under one roof.

The local dealer will attend the show with officials of the Hupmobile and Mitchell factories, and at the conclusion of the big event will proceed to both plants to confer regarding the season's business in both lines here. So far, a record sales period has been established in each line here, and in all probability, the allotment of Hupmobiles and Mitchells for the Greer-Robbins Company will be materially increased as a result of the visit.

DEMONSTRATION HIGHWAY.

By way of demonstrating the advantages of proper road maintenance, the American Highway Association is planning a 700-mile demonstration to be conducted on a road from Washington, D. C., to Atlanta, Ga. In co-operation with the United States Office of Public Roads, and road officials in Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia, the road extending south from the capital is to be improved, according to the most scientific methods wherever possible, and throughout will be maintained by workers under the supervision of highway engineers. The American Highway Association has undertaken to raise the money to pay the traveling expenses of the engineers, who will supervise the work.

The carefully-restricted output of the Locomobile Company is an important aid to quality. A large and experienced Company concentrates its strength on a small output—not more than Four Cars a Day. Each Locomobile is personally and intimately supervised.

The Locomobile owner is proud of his car, not merely because of its style, its comfort or its reliability, but because of the knowledge that his car has been watched and worked over with the greatest possible care at all stages of its construction.

Furthermore, a motor car gains distinction if Quality, not Quantity, is the ideal to be achieved. Thus, through its limited output, the Locomobile has an added preciousness in the mind of the owner.

WINTON DRIVERS EARN CASH ON ECONOMY RUN.

JOHN L. DONDERO of Boston won the prize of $1000 offered by the Winton Motor Car Company to the chauffeurs making the best economy records in handling Winton "Six" cars during the year. Dondero drove a machine 27,542 miles without repair expense to his employer. Thomas Murren of Medford, Mass., took the second place prize of $500, with a record of 18,273 miles without repair expense. William Newsome of Atlanta, Ga., took third with a run of 18,258 miles with a repair bill of $3. E. P. Brubaker, fourth, a prize of $150, with mileage of 16,376 and no repair expense. The prize was $100.

Every year the Winton company distributes $5300 in cash to the twenty Winton chauffeurs who make the best records in high mileage and low repair expense. This prize system was inaugurated in 1907, and in the six years the Winton company has distributed $18,000.

The prizes are awarded by five disinterested persons who meet in Cleveland and carefully weigh the evidence, which consists of daily and monthly mileage and repair reports signed by both the car owner and the chauffeur, and sworn affidavits covering the season's travel and repair bills.

In the six years covered by the contests, ninety money-winning chauffeurs have driven Winton "Six" cars 1,329,960 miles on total repair expense of $333.71. This mileage is equal to fifty-three times the distance around the earth at the equator. The average repair expense all told is 25.1 cents per 1000 miles—undoubtedly the world's lowest record.

Billiard Champion William Hoppe, accompanied by Young Jake Schaefer, will go on a tour of the Western States early in January.

The Startling Hudson Light Six-40 $1900

Hearty 1914 Wishes to the Hosts of Hudson Owners and Admirers!

Nineteen Thirteen was by far the biggest year in sales, service and satisfaction that the Hudson factory has ever seen.

Hudson car owners in Los Angeles and Southern California increased in wonderful numbers during 1913. And Hudsons are more popular now than ever before, both in Southern California and throughout the United States and foreign countries.

There must be a well-founded REASON for this. There IS one—it's the mechanical supremacy and the delightfully different beauty of the 1914 Hudson 54 and the remarkable Hudson Light Six-40 that is swaying the minds of the millions.

Enter, the NEW Hudson Year!

HAL CHASE SINGS HIS SWAN SONG.

THE GREAT FIRST-BASEMAN IS ABOUT THROUGH.

Was Accused of Lying Down for Frank Chance But Honestly "Fell Down." They Found Him Crying in the Club-House the Afternoon Before He Was Traded.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Poor Hal Chase! They called him a loafer, four-flusher, a staller, a grand stand player, a quitter, and they said he was "laying down" on the New York Americans. And they said that was why Frank Chance traded him to the White Sox. Now, listen to something that will surprise you. Chase is on his last legs as a big league ball player, and the next season is likely to be his last in the majors.

Prince Hal, as he was called at the height of his glory when the acknowledged peer of first basemen was guilty of all he was charged in 1910. He was accused of purposely laying down on the job so that he could get the position of manager of the Yankees, then held by George Stallings, with whom Chase did not "gee" at all. Chase got Stallings's job the next year—that is history. But he failed as manager—that, too, is common knowledge. Then when Harry Wolverton was appointed as his successor, Chase, disgruntled again, resumed his old loafing tactics.

THE "WOLF" HAD ARRIVED.

Wolverton failed and Frank Chance was signed up to head the team the past season. Chase swore by all that was holy then he was going to "play his head off" for the Peerless Leader. He became a hero worshiper of Chance. But he continued to play poor baseball in spots and the fans howled. "He's up to his old tricks again—laying down on the job." The tough luck of it is this—Chase was not laying down on the job—not last year. It brings to mind in a way the story of the boy who called "wolf" when there was no wolf. But this time the "wolf" had arrived and the fans wouldn't believe it. They thought Chase still a great ball player, but that he wasn't trying.

A Boston friend of Frank Chance, a man to whom P. L. is willing to confide almost anything, is authority for a story told by the manager.

FOUND HIM CRYING.

"On Saturday afternoon last summer, just before Chase was traded," says Chance, "the crowd got after Chase and booed his every move. When the game was over Chase could not be found in the clubhouse. He had locked himself in one of the shower baths and waited until he thought everybody had dressed and gone. But when he came out Trainer Barrett and myself were still there. Chase was crying like a baby. He went over and sat down on one of the chairs, with his face buried in his hands, and the tears streamed down his cheeks. He sobbed as if his heart would break. We tried to console him, but he would not speak. Before Barrett and I left, there were the beginnings of tears in our eyes, too.

"The next day I went to Mr. Farrell and said, "See here, this boy isn't laying down on you. He's trying to do his level best, but he just cannot play the way he used to. His days as a star are over. Now he's trying to accomplish things, but it's too late."

A BROKEN BALL PLAYER.

After Chase was traded to Chicago, he put up a sensational game for a short while, but then slumped and began to play a mediocre game again. The Chicagoans, just like their New York brethren, got after Chase and accused him of loafing and even conspiring to get Jimmy Callahan's job as manager. Chase, it is learned, was entirely innocent of any such thing, but the printed charges stung him again until now he is practically a broken ball player, both physically and in spirit.

One thing that kept Chase from putting up a better grade of ball last season was a weak ankle, which had troubled him off and on for some time and which he hurt badly at the training camp in Bermuda last spring. Just as soon as it would seem to be well and he would go back into the game, it would break down again. But that was not all.

REALLY A VETERAN.

Few fans have ever looked upon Chase as a veteran. He has a boyish manner about him and as a matter of fact, is still young in years, too, as a player. But he began baseball very young—before he was 20 years old—and has served in nearly ten full major league campaigns. Moreover, his habits of life off the diamond, until recently, were not such as to make him last long. He had extravagant tastes and the bright lights appealed to him, so that he not only wasted away his physique, but spent his money as fast as he made it. So he has practically nothing left but his reputation—and that, though one that has drawn wide attention—is not the sort that will help him much now, as the result of his youthful folly in the time of the Stallings regime.

Hal Chase, the veteran, not only had trouble with his ankle last year, but his arm refused to respond with the same old snap. His eye did not have the same old keenness in gauging batted balls or in picking out those served up to him by a pitcher. And even when the ankle was sound he found he could not get over the ground as speedily as he used to. Plays that he used to make by the margin of a few inches were now lost by just the same margin. He had advanced to the stage where, instead of just barely getting there, he now just barely couldn't get there.

UNIQUE KANSAS RAILWAY.

Kansas puts in claims for having many unique things, and now it adds the only motor car operated railroad in the country. It is a real railroad and it has a real motor car—not one of the gasoline motor cars, built for regular railroad traffic, but just an ordinary six-cylinder pleasure car that has been converted into a locomotive. The Kansas Southern & Gulf was a paper railroad started years ago to tap the wheat fields of the Dakotas on the north and furnish a direct route to haul the wheat to the Gulf of Mexico. It was started by Kansas men and some $20,000 in real money was spent for charters in five or six States, through which the line was to be built. It failed. Now a big second-hand touring car covers the traffic. It carries ten passengers and some baggage.

AUTO TOWER OF BABEL.

If—and there probably never was a bigger "if" than in this case—if plans now under way are carried to completion, the city of Denver will boast of the freakiest freak in the building line that any city so far has erected. According to the architect's plans, it will be a reinforced structure of 200 feet in height, to the top of which visiting motorists may drive their cars to an extensive platform at the top, where a commanding view of the surrounding country will be obtainable. A spiral driveway, wide enough to accommodate both the "going-up" and "going-down" traffic, will be built around the central portion of the building.

EVEN TIRE WEAR.

It is surprising how European manufacturers have been able to gauge the relative wearing qualities of the fabric and of the rubber composing the cover. In most cases these gives out about the same time. When it has been found that the wearing qualities of the rubber are superior to those of the canvas, it is advisable to inflate the tire just a little harder than average and thus save the canvas at the expense of the rubber. When, on the other hand, the canvas is superior to the rubber, the tires should be inflated rather softer in order to save the rubber.

DECREASE IN RUBBER.

Shipments of crude rubber from the Amazon Valley to Europe and the United States are much smaller at present than they were a year ago. During October there were exported a total of 6,995,915 pounds, as compared with 9,032,657 in the same month of the preceding year. The total amount exported to the United States was 3,682,519 in October of this year, as against 5,306,945 pounds in October, 1912. The quantities sent to Europe in these respective months show a much smaller loss, 3,313,396 pounds being sent in October, 1913, as compared with 3,725,712 pounds in the same month of 1912.

Boxing will be a part of the athletic training at the University of California beginning in January. Indiana University also has boxing instruction.

Immense Volume of Business Done Since Nine Ten to Culminte in Vast Wealth for Automobile In try During Nineteen-Fourteen—Bumper Crops E where Indicate Better Times.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

REPORTS from all over the United States and especially from California show marked prosperity for the 1913-14 season. The wealth produced from farm lands in this country during the year just passed amounted to $9,000,000,000.

This immense sum is to be distributed this year. It proves in abundant evidence the wealth of this nation. Figures compiled by the Federal Department of Agriculture show a surprising amount of business done in every corner of this broad land. It is only logical that automobile men should look forward to immense returns during 1914.

When the orange crops, which we now have a right to believe will be bumpers, are turned into cash, and when the farmers fully realize what a profit is theirs, the local trade will be given the stimulus it has needed for the past two months and the voice of the croaker will no longer be heard in the land.

With this wealth in general circulation the automobile business, which is the first to receive or at least to feel the effect of so-called hard times, conditions will change. It is to be the local field where these conditions will be most marked. Then in the outlying districts, where sales have been slack, money will be obtainable and cars will be sold in numbers.

BETTER TIMES.

Every dealer on automobile row is preparing for something. He does not know just what. All are agreed that conditions are better than they were a month ago. Just how good they are no one dealer is prepared to say.

When the automobile tour was held in December conditions were not ideal. The volume of business for the last month of the old year dropped down to startling figures. Came the dealer who was ready to say the bottom had dropped out of everything. One glance at the other lines of industry showed this to be a pure canard.

When we consider what an increase there has been in the dustry in the past three that we thought inflated to be only normal. During that has passed $50,000,000 cars were shipped to Califo tributors from the automo tories in the East, besides the volume of business done in the plants.

FEW CARS.

On the first of the new year it was found that only 20,000 been registered in California were those at that time who that California was destined to greatest distributing point United States. These men have shared in the rich profits from the increased sales to the ent time.

With such a small registration 1910 we went into the season every dealer on his toes and sult of the campaign that registrations almost reached 000 mark, as we sold more than cars during those twelve

The 1911 season was better the 1910 year and we sold cars in this State bringing the bers almost up to the 60,000 This sent us into the 1912 season a start that made that year the most important in the his the motor industry in the West.

BEARDSLEY ELECTRIC ON SHOW FOR ANOTHER WE

SUCCESS has marked the initial showing of the first electric cars built on the Pacific Coast. The Beardsley Electric showroom at Seventh and Witmer streets has been thronged with a crowd of interested autoists and three sales were recorded during the six days the show was on.

Volney S. Beardsley, after whom the handsome electric was named, has been host to hundreds of prospective purchasers, and as a result of the week's endeavor the designer of the Beardsley electric says the market in Southern California is twice as large as he had hoped it possibly could be.

Attorney Carroll Allen, well known in this city, was the first purchaser of the first Beardsley electric. The stylish coupe was made a New Year's gift to Mrs. Allen, who will have the machine on the streets tomorrow. Mrs. Allen is an experienced chauffeuse and will be at home at the wheel of the homemade beauty. This first electric built on the Pacific Coast is certain to attract much attention and is to be only one of many thousands that Beardsley says will soon be rolling about our thoroughfares.

Open house is to be continued this week and the electric display will not conflict in any manner with the automobile show, but instead will be an adjunct to the affair in the Grand-avenue pavilion where Manager Walter Hempel is in charge. At the Beardsley electric salesroom the salesmen have been kept hustling the past week and are looking forward to another week's rush as they close a number of other sales.

The factory is already its full capacity and before the ent month is very old it is pated that an additional force put to work in an effort to get correct number of cars to steady demand which has created for an electric that 100 miles of comfort.

Automobile dealers who touch with the motor prophesy a remarkable year Beardsley electric. The popu the man who designed this electric is such that sales are to be recorded steadily. known for his integrity and says a thing his friends are banking on his statements.

THAT well-known automobile supply house, the Halliwell Company, after a most successful year of business, has decided upon a large extension of its scope to meet the growing demand for the lines handled.

The concern is planning to take on the representation of a number of other standard accessories, in order to give complete lines a full listing. Only standard lines will be carried, as it is the distinct policy of the Halliwell organization to show and represent lines which are well proved as to their merit in every particular.

It may be necessary, in order to complete these proposed arrangements for the Halliwell brothers to make an extensive trip to the East in the near future.

The Halliwell company will represent the Marvel Auto Supply Company, manufacturers of the Marvel Tire Pump and the Marvel Vulcanizer; also the Stewart Saver, which is manufactured Angeles.

STEARNS PLANT DECLARES DIVIDEND FOR OLD YEAR.

J. H. M'DUFFEE, manager of the local Stearns-Knight branch, is in receipt of a telegram from his factory announcing a ten per cent. dividend at the close of the old year. This came as a great surprise in that this season is supposed to be a hard one for motor car dealers.

The message gives in detail the act that came as a welcome reminder that good times are in store for us. The dividend was declared in addition to the eight per cent. dividend paid in July. The Stearns Company is in a particularly flourishing condition.

"We have no thought of complaining," said McDuffee yesterday. "Times are not bad. We have been selling cars right along and as far as I can see, business has been fair enough. The hard times, or what some of the fellows speak of as hard time, do not affect the higher-priced lines of cars.

"Of course I am not saying this to boast but if I had my way some of these same times would be continued for another month or two. We found the holiday season just right for us and this has been one of our most important weeks. There are no croakers around the local Stearns salesroom any more than there are croakers at the factory in Cleveland.

"Of course it was joyful news when I learned of the dividend just declared at the Stearns plant. Talk about hard times, why they would laugh at me back there if I wrote them or wired them that we were having a hard time. With two big dividends in six months we have a right to be happy."

Here is the wire which Manager McDuffee received:

"At an adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of the F. B. Stearns Company, Cleveland, Ohio, manufacturers of Stearns-Knight motor cars, held December 22, the old officers, Frank B. Stearns, president; Roy F. York, vice-president, and E. McEwen, secretary and treasurer, were re-elected for the ensuing year.

"A cash dividend of 10 per cent. was declared on the capital stock of the company, this being in addition to the 8 per cent. cash dividend paid July 1. The F. B. Stearns Company has no preferred stocks, bonds or mortgages outstanding."

Tournament of Roses.

DRIVES TWO THOUSAND MILES TO SEE TOURNEY.

E. S. CONKLIN of Montana arrived here Thursday morning, after driving more than 2000 miles, just to see the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena. Mr. Conklin, slightly sleepy, but otherwise all right, was a center of attraction with the Mitchell four which he piloted from his home to Los Angeles, its mud-bespattered appearance showing only too well that it had come a long ways.

The Montana man was accompanied by his wife and 19-year-old son, Elbert. They left home early in December, intending to reach here in time for both Christmas and New Year's. One of the heaviest storms ever recorded on the Nevada desert spoiled these plans, however, and the wealthy man and his family, used to every luxury, saw the merry Yuletide ushered in at a mining camp, which consisted of three shack houses and boasted the name of Bumville. The only Christmas celebration indulged in, according to Mr. Conklin, was when the skies cleared up a little and allowed him to drive the Mitchell a few more miles on its way to Los Angeles, the last view of Bumville as it disappeared behind a series of buttes being the most pleasant view of the day.

Mr. Conklin advises motorists to fight shy of long trips during the winter months, especially when the storms on the desert are playing havoc with even the unusually poor roads and leaving them practically impassible. "We had no mechanical trouble of any kind, and I think my Mitchell pulled us out of places where no car had ever been before," he declared, "but the hardships of the trail are too severe to be borne when pleasure is the object of the outing. Hereafter I will refrain from December trips across the desert, for you who live here in Southern California can hardly realize the discomfort of bucking snow and sleet and pulling for miles and miles through mud or sand, which enmeshes the machine clear to its hubs."

The Conklins will remain here for the rest of the winter, touring Southern California and visiting the various points of interest. Mr. Conklin plans to start home early in the spring, intending to pilot his Mitchell to Montana in time to take charge of his season's shipments of sheep.

"Service" is the subject of pithy comment by W. B. Cochran, manager of the Haynes Auto Sales Company, who says that in the case of his company it means ample facilities and their application to the welfare of the customer.

"To show how much we value the work of this part of our business," commented Cochran, "I can cite the fact that we have constantly on the road service men whose sole duty is visiting the various sections and seeing that Haynes owners are being taken care of in their respective territory.

"This is what I call real service—the service that does not wait for the owner to come in, but keeps constantly in touch with him, giving him the benefit of his experience and advice and saving him both time and money by this expert knowledge.

"The fact that the Haynes car, the motor car that needs a service less than any other automobile, should have one of the most complete and reliable is just another instance of the Haynes way of doing things. The best car backed by the best service."

MARTIN ABSORBERS ARE IMPROVED.

Refinements of construction render the Martin shock absorber of 1914 a marked improvement over the instrument of the past year, according to specifications furnished by President J. P. Baldwin, who calls attention to two changes of special value among the several introduced.

A ball and socket joint is now incorporated with the connecting rod attaching the arm and axle clip, giving greater leverage with more positive permanent adjustment, more delicacy of action, and increased absorbing power.

Friction shoes are now held in place without rivets, thus reducing wear and first cost.

THE AUTOMOBILE SHOW opens tomorrow in the Grand avenue pavilion. It should be an interesting display and well worth your time to spend several hours there looking over the late models.

Phil Lyon says the new store of Chanslor & Lyon is one of the most complete in the United States, and a glance through the building makes me disposed to agree with Phil. It has a stock of goods that covers everything the autoist needs.

Leon T. Shettler is in the East. Thus far he has failed to do anything startling, but he may come across this week with a real thriller, such as L. T. only knows how to give. More power to the promoter of the Vanderbilt cup race, and may he secure many entries.

Thomas Thorkildson will enter an Alco in the Vanderbilt cup race. Tony Jeannette will drive. This is the Alco that figured in two Vanderbilts as a winner, and is just as fast a car as we have out here. That Alco should prove a winner.

Volney S. Beardsley has given us a real motor show and his new electric shows its class. The Beardsley electric is well named and is certain to be a great seller.

Dick Carlson sold that Alco to Thorkildson. He was so much in love with the car himself that he would have liked to have kept the racer. Think what Billy Carlson might have done at the helm of that racer, but then, Tony Jeannette is some driver himself.

A. M. Young is jumping into the limelight with a long list of Paige sales. For consistency the man who ran that Santa Monica classic is the goods, and he keeps pegging away, sawing wood, so to speak, without saying much, but he is constantly making good.

William Rufus Ruess has just sent out a long letter which is at least to the point. Bill explains that the Pope-Hartford Company has had some troubles and is in the hands of a receiver, but that receiver is Col. Pope. Bill also, in his characteristic manner, explains that he needs no sympathy and will continue to do business at the old stand without asking odds of anyone.

Wouldn't it be a great card to see Bert Dingley in that Vanderbilt cup race. Remember, Bert has figured in that race before when he drove the Chalmers into such a wonderful position, and he is not so old but that he might figure again. If he starts my money will be on him, though the chances are so slim that it is hardly a possibility.

Earl Cooper looked handsome in that Pasadena Tournament of Roses procession. He drove the winning Stutz, and the hand he got should have made him feel right proud, as it was an evidence of the applause he will receive in that Vanderbilt cup race.

Do we stand a chance to reverse that motor vehicle act? Please don't ask me that question, as I am not an attorney, and I would gladly say yes if I could. Perhaps Ed Kuster is about the best man to pass that query up to, and in the meantime we can do no better than hope.

At least the dealers are promised some assistance. The special provision whereby they can get the pasteboard numbers will help some. Let's cheer up and be certain the worst is not yet to come. At least, the farmers must admit we are helping to pay for the good roads.

FROM THE FACTORIES.

A FIVE-TON Peerless truck is doing the work of nine two-horse teams in hauling sand and gravel from a dam over the Cuyahoga River, with a daily expense of $16 as against $56 for team work.

Four cubic yards of material, weighing about 11,500 pounds, are carried by the truck up a gradient of 18 per cent. and over a difficult country road at a saving of $40 per day of nine hours.

Columbus, Wis., is said to use KisselKars exclusively, on account of the experience of one citizen in using one for six years. In attempting to break the non-stop record at Calgary, over a 157-mile course to Medicine Hat, after gaining half an hour in 100 miles, one of the crew was thrown out by the KisselKar while running fifty miles per hour, and the run discontinued. A. S. Robinson recalls the first consistency run, in 1901, when crews lived in overalls and jumpers for constant repairs.

Thirty carloads of Overlands, comprising ninety machines, were shipped to Philadelphia last week as a special order to meet an increased demand.

An Overland touring car was awarded the prize for the best car costing $1500 or less at the California State Fair.

John N. Willys claims that trackless vehicles are now transporting sixteen times as much merchandise as the railroads of the country. New York shows an increase of 46 per cent. registrations of motor trucks for the year.

Patterson's Lozier car completed a 500-mile trip from Tia Juana, Cal., to Coney Island, on December 10, with its moving-picture crew and records safe, and without having required a touch to the motor between the two oceans. Gasoline averaged twelve and one-half miles per gallon.

A comprehensive booklet on the Motz cushion tire is put out by the makers, with full explanations of their superiority in lasting, non-skid and power-saving qualities on electric vehicles.

Only cultivated rubber comes to factories in condition to be compounded, and most of this comes from Ceylon, according to H. S. Firestone, who states that the primitive method of rolling on smoked sticks employed by the Indians of South America to solidify the gum results in many impurities.

Brazil furnishes the best rubber, mainly from the Para district; the Amazon district, Federated Malay States, Africa and Mexico give the remainder of the world's supply.

The Peerless Motor Car Company has offset the increased cost of manufacture due to improved grades of steel, by syndicate selling methods as a reduction of overhead expenses. The McDuffee Automobile Company in Chicago and the Silver Motor Company in New York have taken over the entire sales business of the company in those cities.

RUSSIAN-MADE TIRES SOLD HERE.

Russian-made tires are to be sold in Los Angeles, the reductions in tariff schedules having enabled the foreign makers to freight goods here in competition with American tires. H. H. Reese & Son have opened salesrooms at No. 1046 South Olive street, where they are to distribute over the Coast, the Prowodnik tire, manufactured at Riga. The tube is strengthened with alternating ribs, which prevent skids and slipping.

JACKSON MAKES A SPEEDY TRIP.

Fred D. Morse recently drove a new Jackson car from Portland to Boston in three hours and five minutes, according to an account received by C. H. Thompson, Southern California representative of the builders.

Morse had missed his train, and bought the car in order to keep an important engagement. The run was made with but three stops, none of which were caused by troubles.

DEWAR TROPHY CAR FAVORED.

CADILLAC CENTER OF ATTRACTION AT LONDON SALON.

Engineers Examine the Motor Carefully and Critically and Report Is Favorable—Don Lee Receives Interesting News from Abroad Concerning His Car.

An interesting letter was received last week by Don Lee from F. S. Bennett, the Cadillac agent in London, in which the Londoner stated that the Cadillac was the center of attraction at the great Olympia show on account of the awarding of the Dewar trophy to the 1914 Cadillac as being the car demonstrating the greatest advance in the industry.

According to Bennett not only was the wonderful improvement as typified by the two speed rear axle taken into consideration, but also the motor.

The examining engineers found, in their investigations, that there was not a single portion of the Cadillac motor that had not been designed and constructed to give the maximum of efficiency. Since the advent of the first Cadillac motor, a "one-lunger," more than eight years have elapsed, during which time over 55,000 Cadillac motors have been built. All of them, without exception, have won an enviable reputation for the efficient service which they give.

A Cadillac motor departs from standard practice inasmuch as it is constructed upon the "built up" and "individual part" principle, a principle which has proven conducive to efficiency, power, simplicity, smoothness of action, long life and economy.

It is contended by Cadillac engineers without refutation, that the matter of horse power cannot be exactly determined by bore or stroke, the piston displacement, or any of the general formulas. The Cadillac company contend that the rating of a motor, and that to which it is entitled, is the power it actually develops, and nothing else.

The results given by this motor tend to prove this theory and practice. Each cylinder is cast by itself, as are also the cylinder heads which contain the valve chambers. The heads are attached to the cylinders by right and left threaded nipples. The water jackets which surround the cylinders are of spun copper, fastened in such an efficient manner that they have never been known to leak. There is an underlying reason, vital in importance, why each part of the motor is constructed as it is. For instance, the proper circulation of the water around the cylinders, is of the utmost importance to the efficiency of any motor. The Cadillac method of individual unit castings enables it to have walls of uniform thickness, and by applying copper jackets, a uniform space for water circulation, which gives an even cooling to the entire cylinder and all its consequent advantages.

The castings which enter into the construction of Cadillac motors are so very superior to the average product, that this department of the Cadillac has for many years produced castings for a number of the manufacturers of the highest grade cars in America. Cadillac methods of construction were the first prominent example of standard parts and interchangeability. Cadillac motor parts do not vary at the maximum more than two one-thousandths of an inch.

Coach George Brooke of the University of Pennsylvania football team is the latest recruit to those who wish to have the football players numbered next fall. The matter will come before the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, but it is hard to see what the rule makers can do except to recommend that the coaches do as they like—which was the committee's suggestion for 1913.

BOOTHE OF NATIONAL IS VANDERBILT RACE BOOST

"WE are to have the greatest Vanderbilt cup race ever held." This is the statement of Earle Y. Boothe, one of the men who will have a large part in the production of this stage event which is to be made one of the finest and most attractive races ever held if L. T. Shettler, the manager of the race, has his way.

The National man is enthusiastic over the contest and says he will try to go back East during the first of the year, if possible, to urge the National factory to enter a racing car. This, however, Boothe admits will be difficult, because of the plans already made for marketing a surprise that is to mean much to the local man.

"This race interests me," said Boothe yesterday. "No matter whether I have a National in it or not, I am anxious to see a contest that will be not only better than the last one at Milwaukee, somewhat of a frost, will easily outshine any am strong for the Vanderbilt Grand Prize events, and sible, I expect to go back the automobile show.

KEEP OFF STATE HIGHWAYS UNTIL THEY ARE

OFFICIALS of the Automobile Club of Southern California are warning members of that organization not to drive their cars upon the fresh concrete of recently-constructed highways, following a request from W. L. Clark of the Highway Commission offices.

That actual damage has been done to the new highways of the State, particularly in the vicinity of the Canejo Grade and on the Calabasas road, is the report issued yesterday from the Highway Commission office to the Automobile Club.

"We are preparing to take active and drastic steps to curb the carelessness of motorists in breaking down the barriers and using our new highways before the concrete has had opportunity to dry," said Clark last night. "It is a case of heedlessness on the part of the motorists, and that is what we want to overcome.

MIDWICK OPEN GOLF TOURNEY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

golf professionals have justified themselves. James Simpson, one of the visiting Simpson brothers, won the open tournament, which ended at the Midwick Country [illegible] yesterday, with a total score of [illegible] for the 72 holes.

[illegible] was a medal play competition [illegible] two days and the five best [illegible] were all turned in by professionals. So our brilliant amateurs are [illegible] still. But Erving S. Armstrong is the best of these, with 328, [illegible], we all felt that Armstrong [illegible] win. He has mothered that [illegible] like an infant for two years and he plays on it almost continually. Besides which he is an ex-[illegible] of both the Pacific Coast [illegible] Southern California—and quite [illegible] "ex" at that.

[illegible] Armstrong played con[illegible]—two 40's in the morning [illegible] 41's in the afternoon. He [illegible] both rounds with par figures [illegible] the first three holes, which in[illegible] confidence. And he was putting well. It was in putting that [illegible] the best players failed to [illegible] and one heard many a growl [illegible] amateurs and professionals [illegible] those greens. "Concrete [illegible], you know, and altogether too hard. Some of the holes [illegible]ually raised in the middle,

[illegible] one wonders what the van[illegible] would do, poor dears, if they [illegible] blame something. Why not [illegible]?

[illegible] two professionals to capture [illegible] prizes were James Simpson, with 312 (37, 41, 38 and 39;) [illegible] Peebles of the Midwick, with [illegible] Martin of the Virginia, Long [illegible] with 317; Hutton Martin of [illegible] Angeles Country Club, with [illegible] three tied for last place, [illegible]—Bob Simpson, Ernest Mar[illegible] Louis Berrien. After their brilliant defeat of the Simpson [illegible] Ernest and Hutton Martin [illegible] confident of winning the spoils, [illegible] Martin of Long Beach natu[illegible] sure of first place after his [illegible]-breaking 63 last week. But [illegible] a certain fitness in the vic[illegible] a Simpson, since the tournament had been planned for this date [illegible] on account of their visit.

[illegible] Rigby of the San Gabriel [illegible] Club, of whom great things [illegible] expected, came a long way down [illegible] with 348. It was not Rigby's [illegible]

AMATEUR STARS.

[illegible] other amateurs to capture [illegible]—it takes the form of a chaste [illegible] in their case—were Hugo [illegible], with 331, and A. A. [illegible] with 332. The adorable Hugo [illegible] brilliantly to par for the last [illegible] holes yesterday—strictly to par [illegible] hole. If he seems more than [illegible] patronizing to we lesser mor[illegible] for a spell we must bear it with [illegible] and understanding. There seems [illegible] some delicate question as to [illegible] he will adorn the Midwick [illegible] Annandale team this year, too. [illegible] is keen and he will seem [illegible] desirable than ever after this. [illegible] French of Annandale did not [illegible] quite such a good standard [illegible] yesterday as the day before. [illegible] first day's play resulted in 165 [illegible] holes, against Armstrong's [illegible] and, as he had recently been [illegible] such remarkably good golf [illegible] Annandale, betting ran high. His [illegible] 9-hole score was 41, par being [illegible] each half. All the same, the [illegible] predict a brilliant golf year [illegible] new Annandale captain, and [illegible] not forget that he won the [illegible] round at Del Monte last [illegible]

[illegible] Goodhue of the Virginia [illegible] Club made a total of 357, [illegible] included one good round of [illegible] very creditable score, consider[illegible] new conditions of play which [illegible] him on a course which was [illegible] to him. F. B. Browning [illegible] Beach also helped to repre[illegible] club, while San Gabriel [illegible] up enthusiastically with sev[illegible]. A. T. Jergens, P. A. [illegible] and Will Bacon were all there [illegible] latter did as well as some of [illegible] and better than his own [illegible]. His 355 included two ex[illegible] 9-hole 41's, and bettered such [illegible] player as E. R. Wil[illegible] by three strokes.

ANNANDALE MEN.

[illegible] carrying home two cups [illegible] including two winners, [illegible] was well represented. E. [illegible] made 337 and really in his [illegible] greens did seem to be [illegible] guilty. For one watched [illegible] putts reach the very [illegible] the cup and then pause coyly [illegible] a "hesitation waltz."

[illegible] made 341, H. G. Chaf[illegible]; E. K. Jewett, 375; Lincoln [illegible] (that included a beautiful [illegible] the first half in the afternoon;) [illegible], 384, and A. L. Gartz [illegible] although he spoiled his score. [illegible] also participated but [illegible] as we had a right to [illegible]

THE ABSENTEES.

[illegible] was not one single ama[illegible] of the Los An[illegible] Country Club. Not one. We [illegible] hurt. It looked so very [illegible] a peeve or a sulk, or, at [illegible] indifference to another [illegible]. When Los Angeles [illegible] golf party she has a queenly [illegible] everyone to turn up [illegible] performance. Mid[illegible] casting, but, like all well-bred people, she is sensitive. She didn't say a word, individually or collectively, but eloquent thinking filled the air.

If only Edward Tufts had gone it would have been all right, because he always counts three and talks six—several hosts in himself. But there was no Edward, no Roger, no Jack, no Freddie, no anybody. Los Angeles was represented by a yawning vacuum. And we didn't like it.

A Conspiracy.

CHICAGO FANS SCENT A PLOT.

THINK AMERICAN LEAGUE IS HELPING FEDS.

Point to Ban Johnson's Speech Welcoming the Federals and Say That He Hopes to See Charley Murphy Run Out of Baseball. Other Proofs Cited.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Baseball fans here believe they see evidences of a thorough understanding between the American and Federal leagues. They cite the address of welcome issued by President Ban Johnson to the new comers, in which he laid stress upon the elimination of "undesirables" now in baseball, by the advent of the Federals. A blind man would instantly identify the chief "undesirable" as President Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago Nationals, whom Ban Johnson hates with a cordial hatred.

The Federals will hurt the Cub machine more than any other organization and, so far as can be learned, they will not approach a man that the American League desires to retain. St. Louis also will suffer through the Federals. Ban Johnson and Col. Bob Hedges of the St. Louis Browns have not been the best of friends for years. Johnson has never been able to rid his league of Hedges, although a supreme effort was made three years ago to turn over the Browns to a syndicate.

Another peculiar angle to the affair is that the Federals have pulled out of Cleveland. This step was not necessary unless it was the desire of Charlie Somers, the angel who put the American League on the map. Somers and Johnson are very close to each other and Ban would not tolerate anything that would hurt the feelings or pocketbook of the man who made him dictator of the baseball world.

The tip was out today that when the Federal schedule is announced, it will be found that games have been arranged to conflict with all Cub dates in Chicago and Browns dates in St. Louis. The Federals also have pulled up stakes in Covington, Ky., just across the river from Cincinnati, although there is now talk of them entering Cincinnati. The chances that they will do so are very remote as Garry Herrmann would object and Garry is a powerful man with powerful friends.

Replying to criticisms of long jumps in their schedule, the Federals today pointed out that their longest jump—Kansas City to Baltimore, was 300 miles shorter than the jump by the majors from Boston to St. Louis.

MANUAL ARTS TIES DUARTE TEAM.

Manual Arts High School held the invincible Duarte hockey eleven to a draw yesterday afternoon at Duarte. Each side scored one goal. The first was hit by Grace Snelling, which put the Manuals in the lead. On resumption of play after half time, Marjorie Maddock shot a difficult goal which equalized.

Both teams were at full strength and played the hardest game of the season. Miss Vera Stuart, late of Shanghai, China, was one of the stars of the local team. Lyla Johnson and her splendid team may now take first place for 1914, seeing that Duarte have not anything on the girls in bloomers. Yesterday's game was for the Neil Nettleship trophy and the ladies' hockey championship of Southern California. H. Mansfield acted as referee.

immune from faculty action because of his scholarship record at Citrus Union High School, where he was the valedictorian of his class, in addition to being the big athletic star.

Fred Kelly of the University of Southern California and Harry Kirkpatrick of Occidental will be the two persons most affected locally by the disbarment of Whitted. Kelly had been looking forward with anticipation to meeting Whitted once more and hoped to set up a new world's record in meeting him this time. Kirkpatrick was looking for revenge for his two defeats of last year and hoped to defeat Whitted in the low hurdles at least, if not in both events.

Rumors are floating around that several other prominent Stanford stars were barred by the faculty, but it was not possible to learn their names.

BIRMINGHAM A CHEESE, SAYS RYAN.

"Joe Birmingham is such a joke as a manager that I'll bet he doesn't last out next season, and, furthermore, what he knows about baseball can be written on a postage stamp. If we had had a manager like Harry Davis last year we'd have won the American League pennant by fifteen games."

This was the statement made in the Portland Journal by Buddy Ryan, former idol of the Portland fans, who spent two years with the Cleveland club and was released to Toledo this year, even though he hit .296, being the nearest outfielder to the great Joe Jackson on the Cleveland club. Buddy was not a bit reserved about any of his assertions, reflecting on Birmingham's ability as a manager, and he did not seem to be actuated by anger over his release by the Naps.

BIRMINGHAM POOR MANAGER.

"Birmingham is the poorest excuse of a manager in the major league," continued Buddy. "The stuff that he pulled last year would have sent a blush of shame over the face of any class C manager. He was so much of a farce that the ball players finally threw up their hands in disgust and got along the best they could without listening to him. But, of course, the ball players can't select the pitchers and here is where we fell down. We had a staff of good pitchers and should have breezed in on the bit with that pennant. We showed what we could do in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh series. We lost at least thirty games by poor judgment in working pitchers.

"Davis is one of the brainiest ball players in the country and could have done a lot with the club. We know pretty well that Birmingham knocked him out of a job by carrying tales.

"When Harry joined the club he asked the fellows, as a special favor, to point out places where the work of the club could be improved and with Harry at the helm last year we would have made a great showing.

"Birmingham got sore at me this year because I edged him out of his regular job in the outfield. I struck a terrific hitting streak after I got over my attack of pneumonia, and was clouting around .400 for awhile. Birmy couldn't stand it, I guess, so he took me out and went into the outfield himself. He was so fat that he could hardly waddle around. He lost the arm that used to scare the base runners, and his showing was so bad that he had to bench himself, and instead of putting me back he stuck little Liebold into the outfield. Liebold played a pretty good game, but didn't hit.

DOESN'T LIKE GREGG.

"Birmingham doesn't like any player from the Coast and you know the Cleveland club is full of them. He doesn't get along with Gregg, and instead of using him last spring it was six weeks before he got a chance to get in regularly. Pretty strange, too, for the best left-hander in the American League. He used to ask Gregg how his arm was, and Vean would say it was feeling fine, yet Birmy selected somebody else. He worked big Falkenburg to death after Falky had won a few games, instead of giving him a rest and the others a chance."

TY COBB DRAWS THE SAME SALARY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In mailing contracts for 1914 to Tigers today, President Navin let it be known that Ty Cobb's calls for the same salary that he received last year, and that it was for one year only, but did not make public how much that salary is. The figure, said to be $12,000, has been reiterated so many times during the last nine months that it is generally accepted as true indication of what Ty draws. Mr. Navin and Cobb have both publicly stated that they agreed upon mutually satisfactory terms while at the world's series last October. Cobb is satisfied because he admits that he did not play in his best form last season and Navin is satisfied not to have another hold-out on his hands.

The Executive Committee of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has favorably considered the selection of representative rowing men from the various clubs of the Dominion in sending crews to the Olympic regatta at Berlin in 1916.

"Tortes."

CHIEF MEYERS PLAYED FOOTBALL AT DARTMOUTH

A WRITER in an eastern newspaper signing himself "Observer," tells a good story of when Chief Meyers, of the New York Giants, now playing baseball in San Diego, was at Dartmouth College. He says:

"Speaking of Dartmouth football the Observer never fails to chuckle when he thinks of an incident that took place on the football field at Hanover several years ago. Ralph Glaze, an athlete of renown who later pitched a season for the Boston Red Sox, returned to Hanover one fall from his home in Colorado bringing with him a huge Indian.

The redskin presented credentials at the faculty office and was duly enrolled in the freshman class under the name of Tortes. The next day he was all fitted out with football clothes and appeared with the squad for practice. Some 900 under-graduates were out to watch the practice and everyone was bug-eyed with wonder when the Goliath of an Indian shuffled out from the side lines. He looked as tall as the Baptist Church and as heavy as the town hall.

Folsom was the coach, and in three seconds it was obvious that the Indian chief knew absolutely nothing of football. However, he was placed next a man with the ball and told to crouch down. He squatted grinning, and regarding everything as a huge joke. "Now," said Folsom, "you are a guard. You watch the ball, and when it is passed you charge that man opposite and push him back."

The "man opposite" was a 200-pounder who knew the game. He expected by some simple trick to bowl over the big grinning chief. But the instant the ball moved his plans went wrong. Tortes lunged at him, grabbed him around the waist, lifted him and carrying him like a bag of flour went galloping down the field. The crowd yelled to come back. Nothing doing. Folsom had told him to drive that man back and he was busy doing it. When he got to the fence at the end of the field, Tortes looked back to see most of Dartmouth College rolling on the ground in side-splitting laughter.

DID NOT LAST.

"The big chap did not last as a football warrior, however. His work in the classroom made the dean suspicious. He wrote to the western school which had issued a certificate to Tortes and found that the real Tortes was a small, red-headed man. The chap at Hanover weighed over 200 and his hair made a crows feathers look pale. He was therefor 'fired' from the freshman class and became ineligible for the athletic teams. He enrolled again as a special student and did some work in chemistry during the winter. Most of his time, however, he spent training the dogs and horses about Hanover, a pastime which he loved and at which he was very successful. When not teaching tricks to some stray cur, he was surrounded by a group of boys to whom he was telling stories of life on the plains where he was a sure-enough chief of an Indian tribe. He had a big array of tricks himself, rolled cigarettes with one hand, and was a continuous fountain of fun and interest.

KNEW BASEBALL.

"When spring came 'Tortes,' as he was still called, proved that he knew as much about baseball as he did little of football. He could bat a fly ball the length of the campus and throw one almost as far. The candidates for second base had sore palms all summer from stopping the throws when Tortes was catching. He gave up study entirely and would play ball from early morning until darkness stopped him. He was built for outdoors. No class room or laboratory could hold him. It seemed then that he was wasting his opportunities for an education and that after they were out of college the other boys would quickly show their advantage over the 'untutored' aborigine.

"Yet this same Indian has made many hard round dollars in the past three years pulling down fouls behind the bat for the New York Giants, three times winners of the National League pennant, and pulling down also a $6000 or $7000 salary besides $2000 or $3000 extra from the post season series with the Athletics or Red Sox. He did not try to fool John McGraw, as he did the dean of Dartmouth, and is playing under his right name, John Meyers. But the Dartmouth men of that time have always felt that the college lost an 'American' lineman from the football team because the real 'Tortes,' who sold his college entrance certificate to the Indian, was not a big fellow with black hair."

HOW FIGHTERS AMUSE THEMSELVES, TRAINING.

Well-Known Training Partner Tells How Joe Rivers Has to Be Kidded Along—Ritchie Plays Solitaire and Jim Flynn Shoots Craps—Mandot Writes Letters. O'Leary Likes to Dance.

BY JOHNNY SCHIFF,

(Slightly Assisted by a "Times" Reporter.)

THE work of actual training only takes a small part of a boxer's time, even when he is getting ready for a fight. Very few managers will allow their men to stray away from the training camp, so you can see that a fighter has a good deal of time on his hands.

The boxers have all kinds of ways of filling in this time. Having been the training partner of so many, I have helped to amuse most of the well-known fighters now in the ring.

It takes a whole flock of regular entertainers to keep Joe Rivers from being bored. Joe always has some attache to his camp who takes the part of the King's jester. Willie Rooney used to have the job of cracking jokes for Joe until he lost his job as trainer after the first Mandot fight. Since then Joe has had several boys who hang around his camp and keep him in good humor.

JOE LIKES MUSIC.

Joe is fond of music and always likes to have some fellow around who can play good ragtime. Joe also has a peculiar nervous horror of sleeping alone, and likes to have some entertaining young fellow to sleep with him while training.

Joe plays the piano pretty well himself. I remember once when he was training at Doyle's that an old lady in the neighborhood opened her house to Joe and let him use her piano any time he liked. Whenever Joe was missing around the house, you could be pretty sure to find him over at her house, sitting alone in her parlor, playing "In the Shadows" on her piano. That was his favorite piece.

PACKY AND THE FLOWERS.

Packy McFarland was a great fellow for working around the flowers. He did not mix much with the fellows who hang around fight camps. I remember out at Doyle's that he used to work every day in Jack Doyle's rose garden. Packy always liked to have his lady friends come out to the camp to call on him and see him train. Packy has always gone with good people and the women who came to see him train were often very charming folks.

Another fastidious young person was Jack Britton. Jack may be said to have spent most of his spare hours on his toilette. Can you imagine this guy taking a bath in perfumed water. Well he did. It took him longer to get dressed than a professional beauty.

AD IS GABBY.

Ad Wolgast was a great kidder around a training camp. He played all kinds of jokes on people. My land, that boy's mind was never still. If he wasn't pulling off some kind joke on somebody, he was sitting around a cafe talking to somebody. Ad is a good talker and has all kinds of ideas on all sorts of subjects and lots of big business men like to talk to him. Ad will sit around a cafe table hour after hour talking to whomever drifts in. Kind of an afternoon reception he holds. For that reason, Ad always liked to train near a cafe.

TOMMY AND JOE.

Tommy Murphy is a very quiet boy; in fact, the quietest fighter I ever trained with. He is kind and sociable, but he never has much to say and does not mix much in the gaiety that always goes on around a fight camp. Sometimes he takes a hand in some quiet kind of card game, but he usually amuses himself by taking long walks by himself.

Joe Mandot spends most of his time writing letters. That guy has the most insatiable appetite for picture postal cards I ever saw. He ought to have a good strong right hand, he uses it so much writing. When he trained out at Jack Doyle's they had to replenish the supply of postal cards several times on account of Joe's correspondence.

MORAN AND FLYNN.

Owen Moran has a hard time amusing himself. He is easily bored. One time they took him up to the mountains in the hope that he would manage to find a good time, but he came back the next day. The mountains simply bored him to death. Moran liked to sit at a piano. He couldn't really play anything, but strummed out a few cords.

The noisiest man that ever stepped in a training camp was Jim Flynn. That fellow was simply a riot. He always kept the place in an uproar all day long. Jim always liked to have somebody in his camp for the goat. He played all sorts of rather crude practical jokes on him when the goat was found. Abdul, the Turk, was always willing to stand for Jim's rough stuff and got along with him for that reason. Jim was a natural-born gambler, in the matter of inclination, at least. He was never a very good one. He was very fond of shooting craps and playing black jack.

BUD FOR THE COWS.

Dundee is a quiet, good-natured little Italian boy who is fond of animals. He always has a pet of some sort in his training camp and spends most of his time teaching it tricks and taking care of it.

Harry Thomas, the English featherweight who was out here a year or so ago, had a mania for digging with pick and shovel. A gang of Mexican workmen digging a sewer had as much temptation for Harry as a champagne cocktail has for the average person. He went stale and lost his first fight in Los Angeles by over working when they were digging Jack Doyle's swimming pool.

Bud Anderson has to have a cow to milk, or there is no happiness in his heart. If you placed Bud down on a desert island, he would mosey,

TINKER AFTER GIANT CATCHER.

Wants Arthur Wilson to Play With Federals.

His First Act as Manager of New Chicago Club.

Wire Indicates Joe Has Actually Jumped.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

All doubts as to whether Joe Tinker has actually made the plunge into the Federal League appear to have been removed by a telegram received here by Arthur Wilson, catcher of the New York Giants, who is wintering in Southern California. In this wire, Tinker makes a proposition for Wilson to jump the Giants and sign with the Chicago Federals.

As far as known, this is Tinker's first act as manager of the Chicago club in the new league, and would seem to remove all doubts as to whether he has severed his connections with the National League in particular and organized ball in general.

Wilson is noncommittal regarding what action he will take in connection with Tinker's proposition, and naturally declines to discuss particulars. Friends of his, however, who have seen the telegram, declare that the offer is very attractive.

IN WORLD'S SERIES.

Wilson is a high class catcher, and has many years of efficient service in front of him. He shared the bulk of the catching with Meyers, and McLean last season, and has worked in the last three world's series. This latter circumstance should make it difficult to tempt him away from organized baseball, not to mention the more important one that the Giants desire to cut into another slice of world's series money next fall.

Tinker's offer to Wilson is especially important, because of the fact that it appears to establish him as a Federal leaguer beyond a doubt. Repeated stories stating that Tinker had gone to the Feds have been published, but men prominent in organized baseball on the Coast had refused to accept them as final.

ROSSMAN WANTS JOB.

Claude Rossman, former Detroit player, and for a number of seasons with the Minneapolis club, is a candidate for a position in the Coast League. Cantillon recently asked for waivers on Rossman. Columbus refused to grant the request. Jack Gillis is sponsor for the statement that Rossman will never consent to play in Columbus. Rossman has written friends in this city expressing a desire to become a Coast Leaguer.

FROMME UNDECIDED.

LE DOUX HAD PARTIES.

Charley Le Doux, the funny French bantam who came over Paris and nearly got his map n by Kid Williams for his poin ways had a grand soiree going he time. His camp was always with excited Frenchmen, who jabbering at once. If you Doux while he was boxing in he whole chorus would get up a yell and squeal to him in Fren hat you were trying to show him

Leach Cross is a great kidder amp. He is independent and thinks for himself, and spends more owntown than the average fighter. He goes to the theater a great deal and likes to go automobiling.

Eddie Campi spends most of leisure hours in the surf or on sea shore. His father was an Alaska seal hunter, or a fisherman, and must have inherited a fondness the water.

A SOLITARY CHAMP.

Willie Ritchie is a very quiet around camp. When not working is usually away somewhere by himself playing solitaire.

Abe Attell also uses cards in training work, but his game is solitaire—far from such. I can't imagine what the game is that plays, but he sat up all night, night before he had to defend championship from Johnny Kilbane. If it had been solitaire, Abe might still be the champion of the world.

PALZER, A WASH LADY.

Al Palzer, at one time in the white ope class, is a funny fellow. He ikes notoriety, and he sure got hrough his manager, Tom O'Rourke. ne of the first things Palzer when he arrived at Doyle's was ack big poster pictures of himself ll over the walls of his sleeping quarters, and sit alone for hours looking t himself. One other thing Al o pass away the idle minutes was cour out his own linen that he while training.

SLEPT WITH DOG.

Johnny O'Leary, one of the ightweights now on the Pacific Coast, is a peculiar sort of a while in training. He likes to dance and if he is not closely watched, ill sneak off to the nearest ance hall and waltz around before etiring. Johnny had a bull hich was a great pet of his, by ame of Jeff, and if that dog did leep at the bottom of the bed, ould not go to sleep.

Kid Williams is one of the nobbiest ressers in the boxing game and ooks classy when he is dressed. Williams makes it a point to do raining at the beach, always. eason for it was that in the summer ime he could parade up and he boulevard with his big diamond n, and let the pretty damsels pon his beautiful figure and admire is beauty. The kid is very fond ilk articles, and had his shirts, er garments, and even has a air of silk tights made for every atch he has. On the Job.

TINKER AFTER GIANT CATCHER.

Wants Arthur Wilson to Play With Federals.

His First Act as Manager of New Chicago Club.

Wire Indicates Joe Has Actually Jumped.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

All doubts as to whether Joe Tinker has actually made the plunge into the Federal League appear to have been removed by a telegram received here by Arthur Wilson, catcher of the New York Giants, who is wintering in Southern California. In this wire, Tinker makes a proposition for Wilson to jump the Giants and sign with the Chicago Feds.

So far as known, this is Tinker's first act as manager of the Chicago team in the new league, and would seem to remove all doubts as to whether he has severed his connection with the National League in particular and organized ball in general.

Wilson is noncommittal regarding what action he will take in connection with Tinker's proposition, and naturally declines to discuss particulars. Friends of his, however, who have seen the telegram, declare that the offer is very attractive.

IN WORLD'S SERIES.

Wilson is a high class catcher, and has many years of efficient service in front of him. He shared the bulk of the catching with Meyers, and McLean last season, and has worked in three world's series. This circumstance should make it hard to tempt him away from organized baseball, not to mention the important one that the Giants to cut into another slice of series money next fall.

Tinker's offer to Wilson is especially because of the fact that to establish him as a Fed beyond a doubt. Re stories stating that Tinker had to the Feds have been pub but men prominent in or baseball on the Coast had to accept them as final.

ROSSMAN WANTS JOB.

Claude Rossman, former Detroit and for a number of seasons Minneapolis club, is a candidate for a position in the Coast Cantillon recently asked for on Rossman. Columbus refused to grant the request. Jack Gil responsible for the statement that will never consent to play Rossman has written to this city expressing a desire to become a Coast Leaguer.

FROMME UNDECIDED.

Art Fromme, the Giant pitcher, who was tendered a contract by the league, denies that he has yet accepted terms. Fromme does not expect to receive a contract from the Giants until the club returns from its round-the-world junket, and it is not regarded as likely that he will give Stovall a denite answer prior to that time.

It appears to be a consensus of opinion in sporting circles that Maier and Hogan made a move calculated to strengthen the Tigers when they traded Baum for Henley and McArdle. Of course, there are some who hold a dissenting opinion. In this connection it can be recalled that few of the fans could see Koestner and Harkness when Venice secured these players from Portland. Without them, the Tigers would not have landed in the first division. Hap has yet to make a bad trade.

SELECTS WIN.

The following telegram from U. Gens Doyle, who took Maier's Select Kids to San Diego yesterday for a two-game series, tells the story:

"We beat San Diego today 3 to 0. Charley Chech was on the mound for the Selects, and Tesreau of the Giants pitched for San Diego. Chech pitched a wonderful game."

M'CREDIE TO HAVE YOUNG HEAVERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There will be one phase of the 1914 training season of the Beavers, which differs materially from that of last year. This is in the number of young pitchers McCredie has on his string from which he is very sanguine of developing at least one or two good ones.

Look over the list: With Frambach, Salveson, Peet and Hall lined up and several others in view, he is counting strongly on developing at least two winners from the collection.

Frambach was born in Waterloo, Iowa, and was raised in Rupert Idaho. Hall is a product of the Santa Maria, Cal., territory, while Salveson comes from Fullerton, Cal., a short distance out of Los Angeles. Peet was born and raised at Sumpter, Or., and was wanted by several other clubs before he signed with Portland, Bob Brown of Vancouver, trying especially hard to land him.

COAST SWIMMERS TO VISIT HAWAII.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Al Coney of the Olympic Club yesterday received instructions from the Hawaiian Mid-Pacific Carnival Committee relative to the organizing of a team of six swimmers from this Coast to compete in the great meet at the islands.

Coney will hold a series of tryouts at Sutro tank on Sunday, January 11, and the men making the best times will be selected for the trip to the islands. Ernie Smith, Ludy Langer, Walter Pomeroy, Bobby Beck, George Bond, Linc Johnson, Frank Parrisch, William McWood and many other stars in these parts will take part in the trials.

The team will leave here the first week in February and will have a full week for training purposes before the start of the meet.

West Virginia Wesleyan baseball team has mapped out a tour of the South for next spring, which will include about 2000 miles, the longest in the history of the college. It is located at Buckhannon, W. Va.

UCKY WOMAN TO ENTER DE LAGE IN VANDERBILT.

Leotia K. Northam Determines to Start Pair of Racers and Will Give Omar Toft One-Hun Twelve-Mile-an-Hour Car—Off for France to Real Speedster.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

LEOTIA K. NORTHAM will enter two cars in the coming Vanderbilt Cup Race unless her securing a 112 mile an hour This plucky woman has to purchase a French De that is said to be one in the world and a car covered two miles in a minute.

Toft left on Tuesday for the in the southern part of He will visit Turin, Italy, returns and expects to come a fund of information that valuable to him in this coming contest. The moment the of the race, announced exclusively in The Times, was changed to Toft made all his plans for trip.

Simplex which Toft drove to remarkable finish in the race is in fine shape for Santa Monica speedfest. This good for eighty miles an hour, wants a faster machine. The however, is to be tuned to that will see the 100-mile and there is every reason that this car will place in this year.

publicity, Mrs. Northam is willing to tell why she is so anxious to win a big race. Her ambition is to secure that Vanderbilt Cup. With the De Lage and the Simplex both in the big race at least Mrs. Northam has an excellent opportunity of obtaining her heart's desire.

"After having considered every racing car that is on the market," said Mrs. Northam, "I have about decided that the De Lage is one of the fastest motors that I can secure for the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races. It is my ambition to win a big race. The sport is grand and there is nothing I like better than a fast motor car.

"That De Lage, judging from the records already made by the car, is one of the speediest machines that the French factories have turned out. It seems to me this is just the car that I should have for just such a race as the one at Santa Monica. Of course, I am open to conviction as to any other car.

HER OWN IDEA.

"The Fiat has been raced here and has done wonderful work. We have seen the Isotta-Fraschini, the Benz and other great cars. Now I would like to bring out an entirely new and novel motor, the De Lage, and the factory is willing to provide me with a ninety or even a hundred and twenty horse power racer.

"What could be better than a race in which an unknown car is entered. It is not for the purse that I will start that car, but for the Vanderbilt cup. Yes, I will try to win, and I believe Omar Toft is the driver who can take first place in that Vanderbilt cup contest."

OTHER RACES.

The Vanderbilt cup race is to be held at Santa Monica, Saturday, March 21. It is the plan of Leon T. Shettler, who is now in the East, to hold the Grand Prize a week later. The purse is $15,000. While this is not a large prize, it is estimated that with the Vanderbilt cup in the balance many factories will send cars into the ranks.

Already Ralph De Palma has expressed a desire to race. Spencer Wishart is anxious to come out here. Ralph Mulford has never figured in a western motor classic, and several other classy drivers are more than willing to take part in the promised battle royal.

These men, with the local drivers we can secure, will make a race. Earle Cooper is one of the big drawing cards who will appear. Walter M. Brown has already entered the Stutz. Teddy Tetzlaff also has entered, and with Barney Oldfield the third of the trio the local staff will be well represented.

The local drivers are so good that Promoter Shettler says he can hold a race with only the local men entered. Perhaps this is true, but there are others who are anxious to secure every driver that is possible to start in this big classic.

Good Time Coming.

DEALERS SHOW QUIET NERVES.

Freedom from Frost Frees Fearful Freeholders.

Forty Per Cent. Production Over Last Year.

Motor Industry Now on Sound Basis.

Conditions affecting territory tributary to Los Angeles lead E. R. Carpenter, special agent of the Studebaker sales department, to predict largely-increased motor business for next year. He continues:

"There are many causes for this optimistic prediction. First, the very slight possibility of a frost in the citrus belt, due to weather conditions and the preparations made to smudge in the event of a slight frost. I, however, base my prediction largely for the much-increased business on the fact that the automobile industry has gradually been getting farther away from the 'game' proposition, for Southern California dealers as a whole are a splendid exemplification of the stability of the industry—in proof of the fact that automobiles are now being sold and marketed by business men. This is proven by the fact that a large proportion of the dealers, both here and elsewhere, are independent of the so-called 'financial stringency,' and are at this time ordering cars in quantities large enough to warrant the factories to produce in numbers heretofore impossible during the fall and winter months, and Studebakers are today employing 40 per cent. more men on production work than they were during the same period last year."

HUGE CROWD TO SEE BALL PLAYERS.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

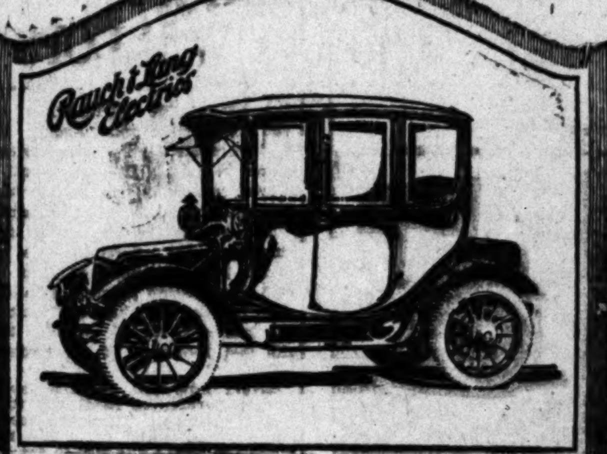
SYDNEY (N. S. W.) Jan. 3.—The Chicago White Sox defeated the New York Giants 5 to 4 in the opening game here this afternoon. The game was played on the Sydney cricket grounds before a wildly-enthusiastic crowd of 10,000 spectators.

Great interest has been aroused in Australasia by the tour and the visitors will be given a civic welcome by the Lord Mayor of Sydney on Monday.

HERZOG SIGNS TWO.

CINCINNATI (O.) Jan. 3.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] President August Herrmann received a telegram from Manager Charles Herzog today which stated that the latter had signed Pitcher "Rube" Benton and Catcher Von Kolnitz to play with the Cincinnati National League club next season. Benton was with the Cincinnati team last season, while Von Kolnitz was drafted from the Appalachian League.

That a five-man swimming team, including Duke P. Kahanamoku, the noted sprinter, will visit Australia in the fall of next year, is a report recently received from Honolulu.



More Than a Marvel of Mechanical Refinement

WHEN buying an "electric" you should look beyond the car itself. The "R. & L.'s" marvelous mechanical perfection—its simplicity and ease of control, endurance, tasteful design and exquisite appointments—are not its only claims for your consideration.

Two of the oldest, best-established motor car firms on the coast—whose combined investments total more than a half million—guarantee that your "R. & L." will give, throughout coming years, the very fullest quota of service for which it is noted. COAST BOWLERS PLAN CONGRESS.

CALL MEETING HERE TWO WEEKS HENCE.

Delegates from All Prominent Cities on Slope to Take Formal Action Providing for Competitions in Great Tournaments This Year and Next.

Bowlers of the Pacific Coast are to meet here on January 17 for the purpose of providing, as representatives of their enormous brotherhood, for a comprehensive and powerful organization with express powers and authority over bowling interests of the Coast, including the arrangements for annual tournaments and conventions of players from all the westernmost States.

Competitions between the foremost players both men and women, with provisions of ample trophies and prizes, are to be furthered annually. The first gathering is planned for this year, probably in Los Angeles, while San Francisco is to have the honor in 1915.

The Pacific Coast Bowling Association, as the new organization is to be named, is promoted by the most influential exponents of the alley game in this part of the country, whose nerve and ability assure success in any undertaking upon which they may embark.

Methods and rules of the American Bowling Association give foundation for their plans of work, with local legislation pertinent to conditions affecting the wide sweep of territory involved.

One special feature of the new work consists in bringing woman to her own in this healthful and invigorating pastime. In this respect, the tactics of the American Association in barring women are to be repudiated.

REO PACIFIC TO HOLD AUTO SHOW.

J. J. De Vaux, of the Reo-Pacific Company, is planning an automobile show this week which will be held during the same hours as the show in the Grand-avenue pavilion. He expects to exhibit the entire line of Reos as well as the Chevrolet cars. These machines are particularly interesting as both are in the low-priced division. It is the determination to give demonstrations and conduct the exhibit as if the cars were on display at the motor salon.

The Reo-Pacific salesroom is only a few doors below the Grand-avenue pavilion. De Vaux will plan to entertain the throngs that are expected at the motor exhibit. Instead of showing his cars on the floor with the other products he will keep open house close to the show building and in that way he says he can reach almost as large a number as will be attracted by the classic display which is now being rushed into position.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Racing men heard with regret today of the critical illness of John Hunter, at one time president of the Jockey Club, who for more than fifty years took a leading part in the development of American sport. He is 80 years old and his illness is incidental to his advanced age. Tonight word was sent to relatives that he was not expected to live more than a few hours.

nounced intention of the company to make an active selling campaign of the small car throughout the country. A heavy tractor is also under construction at the factory and will be out in a short time.

Lynn Buxton is planning an interesting exhibit of American cars. The touring car model and a roadster are to be shown. The 1914 cars are not only particularly interesting in design, but show many refinements that make the American this year one of the handsomest cars on the market. Buxton is planning to introduce his cars in such a way that this show will mean much to the local distributor.

W. J. Burt Motor Car Company, California distributors for the Auburn, announce that their show cars are here. They are as proud of them as a little boy with new red-top boots.

The six-cylinder, six-passenger car was built specially for this show, and is the first Auburn on the Coast with wire wheel construction. This particular car is trimmed in a new whipcord goods, painted white, has every new and up-to-the-minute attachment, and has attracted much attention from admirers of automobiles.

The other model they will show is a four-cylinder forty-horse power, six-passenger, which is also a beauty, and of practically the same construction as the six, except the four-cylinder motor and shorter wheel base.

In addition to this, the Burt company will show a train of all the different kinds of gears used in automobiles, all of which are made at the factory of this company at Pico and Hope streets. These gears will be in operation, running by an electric motor.

MARATHON RUGBY TEAM WALLOPS ARDEN FIFTEEN.

MARATHON ATHLETIC CLUB 11 points and Arden Rugby Football Club 8 points, were the scores in the big Rugby football game played yesterday afternoon on the Manual Arts High School ground.

Arden had the game won several times and their defeat is due wholly to the rank fumbling of their backs. The combination passing of the Marathon players and their excellent punting gained them all territory lost by the fast footwork of the Arden forwards.

Every now and again a favorable opening presented itself and the ball would be passed from the scrum to the Arden backs, only to be muffed when the whole line was in action and in a splendid position to score.

The work of Rush Meadows and Ybarrando overshadowed everything else. The former was in the thickest of every hard play, and with the star Santa Clara player equally active and diligent, the Arden forwards had all they could do to keep a tab on the ball.

Arden scored the first try from a scrimmage in front of goal, Dutch Henry having the honor of crossing the line, with the ball safely tucked under his arms. The goal was not kicked. At half-time Arden was in the lead by 3 points to 0.

On resumption of play, Pat Maguire equalized by accepting a fine pass, in which combination play Meadows, Ybarrando and Donohue figured conspicuously. The try was unconverted.

F. Brooks again put Arden in the lead by some fast footwork and the acceptance of a handy pass by Elliot. G. Blue and Palmer. L. Grant converted the try. This gave the Glendale club a lead of 8 points to 3 points.

At this juncture of the game the Ardenites apparently went to sleep, thinking the game already won. In this way they were badly mistaken. The Marathon fifteen to a man redoubled their efforts, with the result that W. Jackson and Al Maguire each scored a try, one of which was converted. This gave Marathon the game by one goal and two tries to one goal and one try.

Following is the line-up: Marathon—G. Donohue, captain; Al Maguire, Leo Maguire, F. Toolan, W. Jackson, H. Jackson, R. Vejar, H. Cunningham, B. O'Neil, J. O'Neil, F. Bothwell, Rush Meadows, T. Ybarrando, D. Goodpasture, A. Bessalo and A. M. Polley. Arden—F. H. Palmer, captain; C. A. H. Narlian, C. Baronidis, W. Henry, G. Blue, H. Blue, F. Brooks, H Henry, T. E. Murray, T. King, L. Grant, P. Sheedy, W. C. Fusilehr, E. Fishburn, K. Elliot, C. P. Peters, E. J. Orth, J. A. Dewar and G. W. McKenzie. P. J. Higgins and W. A. Sidford acted as referees.

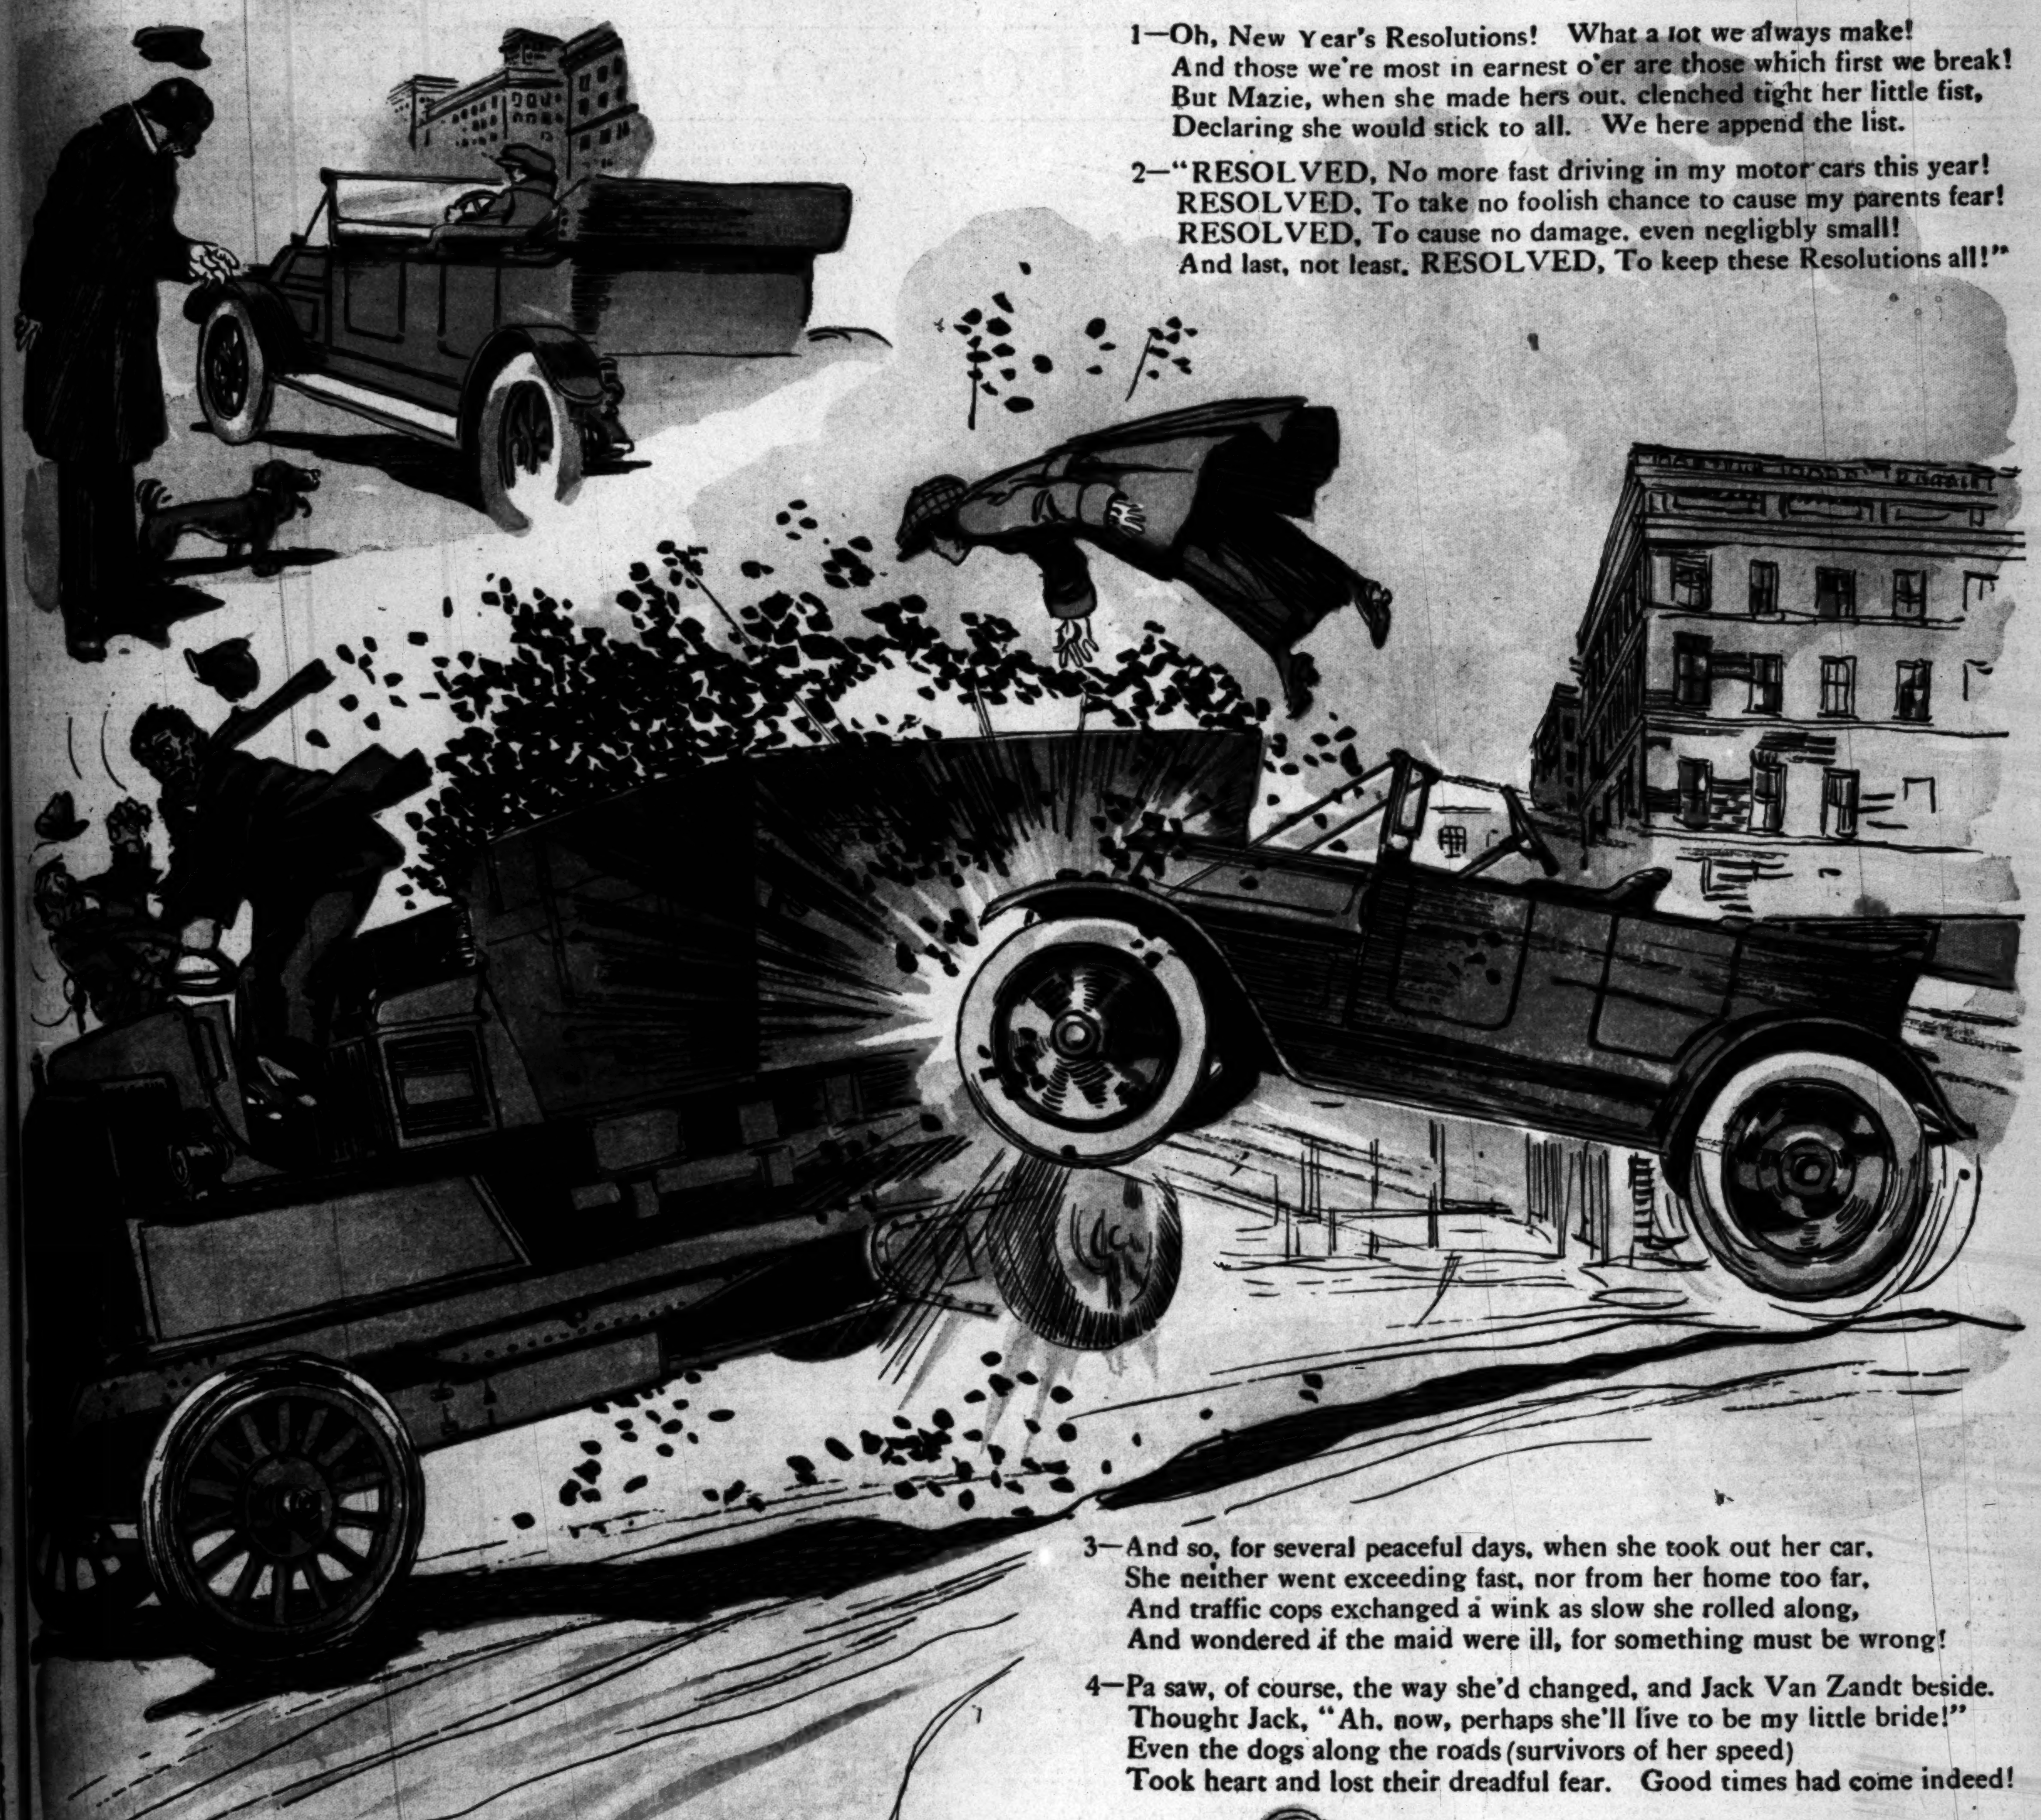
MAZIE THE MOTOR MAID

Verses by Paul West ⊠ Illustrations by J. Norman Lynd

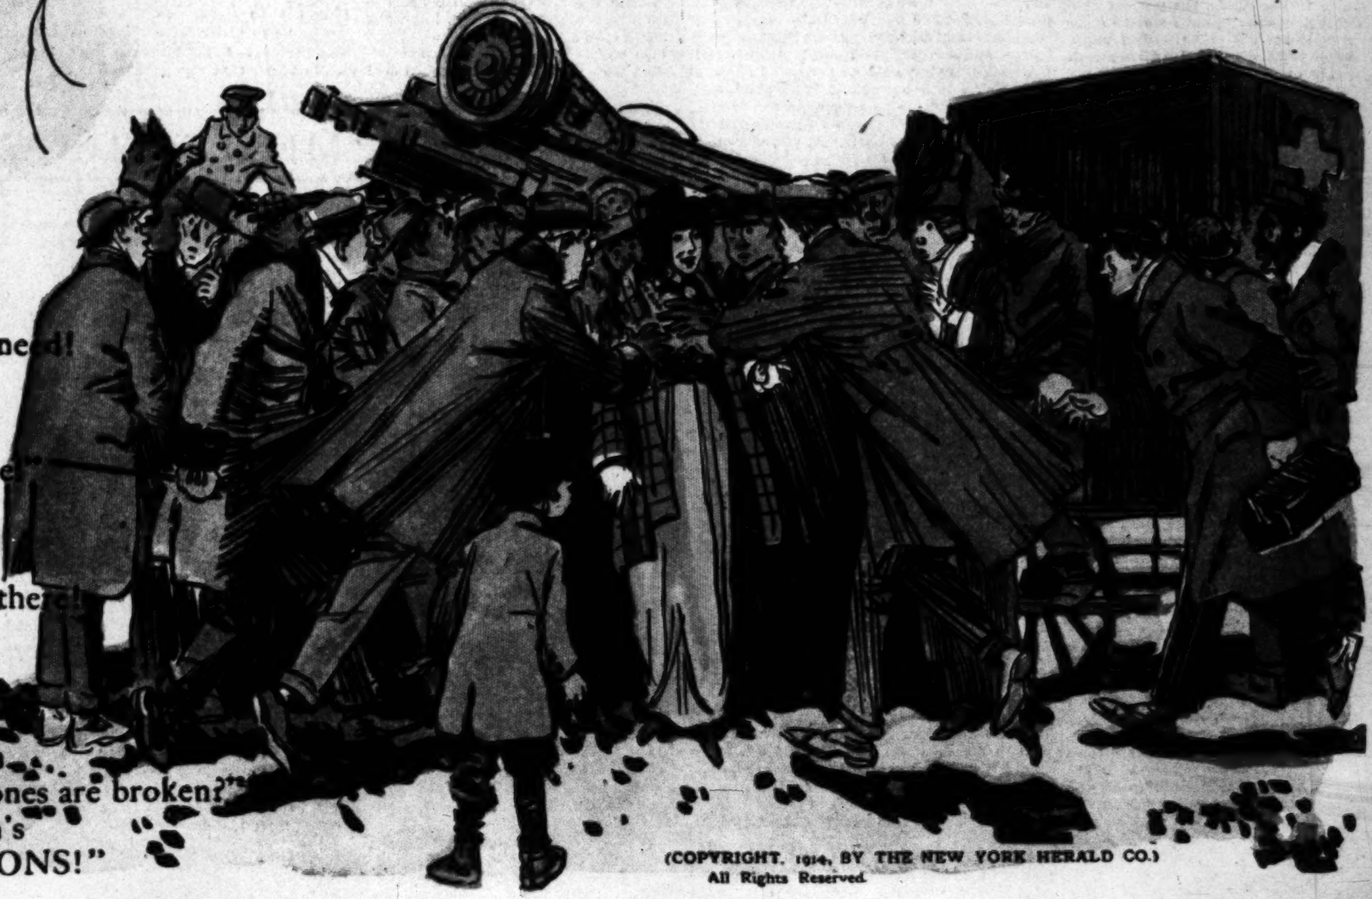


1—Oh, New Year's Resolutions! What a lot we always make!
And those we're most in earnest o'er are those which first we break!
But Mazie, when she made hers out, clenched tight her little fist,
Declaring she would stick to all. We here append the list.

2—"RESOLVED, No more fast driving in my motor cars this year!
RESOLVED, To take no foolish chance to cause my parents fear!
RESOLVED, To cause no damage, even negligbly small!
And last, not least, RESOLVED, To keep these Resolutions all!"

3—And so, for several peaceful days, when she took out her car,
She neither went exceeding fast, nor from her home too far,
And traffic cops exchanged a wink as slow she rolled along,
And wondered if the maid were ill, for something must be wrong!

4—Pa saw, of course, the way she'd changed, and Jack Van Zandt beside.
Thought Jack, "Ah, now, perhaps she'll live to be my little bride!"
Even the dogs along the roads (survivors of her speed)
Took heart and lost their dreadful fear. Good times had come indeed!



5—Alas! the dull monotony! No one-wheel tips round curves!
No whizzing on the straightaways—it got on Mazie's nerves,
And one day she could stand no more. Sighed she:—"A change I need!
All's safe—I shan't be reckless, but—well, just a little speed!"

6—The air felt fresher on her cheeks! A thrill her heart came o'er.
"It's fine!" she laughed in wild delight. "I guess I'll try some more!"
Faster—then faster—faster still, dogs, chickens running down,
Missing collisions by a hair, she meteored through the town!

7—And then—a coal truck barred her path. Bang! What a crash was there!
The rattling roar of spilling coal! The swirl of skirts in air!
But when the crowd collected 'round, and ambulances, too,
They found fair Mazie quite unhurt—not even black and blue!"

8—Then Jack Van Zandt and Pa appeared, their horror scarcely spoken.
"My child!" gasped Pa. "My love!" gasped Jack. "How many bones are broken?"
"Bones!" Mazie sighed. "No bones, but ah—beyond all restitution's
My two mile record—last year's car—with ALL MY RESOLUTIONS!"

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

YOUR DUTY TO YOUR BODY.

How many of you who are housekeepers make a business of keeping yourselves in good condition physically? If I address my question to you specifically it is because I think housekeepers as a class are rather heedless about the details of health. They don't take every advantage they can in the care of themselves in all particulars, and they don't have helps that come their way in connection with their work. The business woman has many hindrances and trials, but she is at least obliged to go into the fresh air morning and evening, though she may be too tired to get the full benefit of it. Still, she wins some good in spite of herself, and she has also the value of the little change of scene. But you who are keeping house get up into the atmosphere of work, go about in it all day, lie down and sleep in it at night. Do you try to counteract this monotony by taking the best care you can of yourself in other ways?

Let us begin at the question of clothes. How do you dress when you are working? Does this seem like a foolish query or one of no importance? If you will consider a little you won't think so. For my own part, I believe that much of the ease and comfort with which you accomplish your work is due to the way in which you are clad.

"I never had any use for that woman after I saw her at work in her kitchen," remarked a downright young girl to me one day. "There she was trailing about in an old silk tea gown, peeling potatoes and washing dishes. All spotty and ragged it was, and she said she was just wearing it out because it was too shabby for anything decent. I can't approve of any woman who has no more respect for her work than to do it looking like that!"

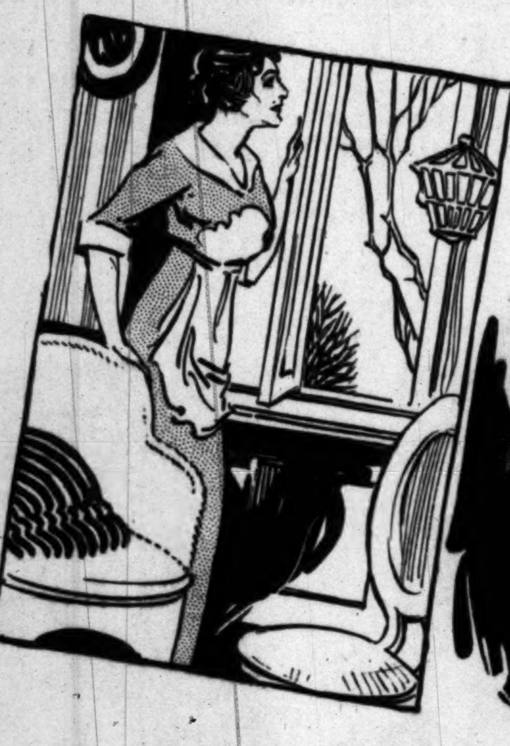
Devise a Working Suit.

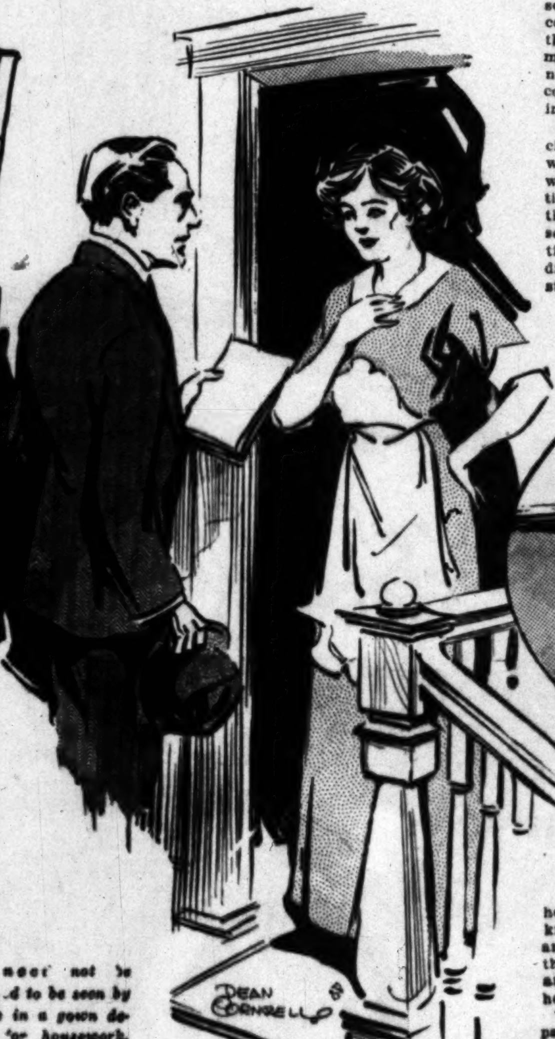
I confess I have agreed with her in a measure when I have seen women doing housework in petticoats and dressing sacks or kimonos, looking "sloppy," as a young man of my acquaintance put it. "Just plain sloppy!" he said of a worthy woman who had opened the door for him one day in a kimono. "It just hung straight, you know, with no fit to it—like a nightgown—and she was going about the house and doing her work and coming to the door in that!"

"But I have to wear something easy when I am working," some woman may plead. "I can't be all gotten up in my best bib and tucker to wash dishes, and make bread, and scrub paint!"

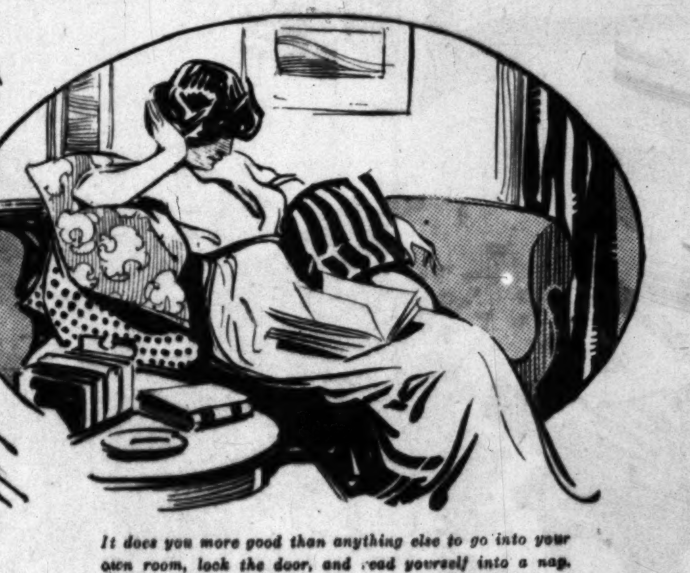
Of course, you can't. But there is something between the "best bib and tucker" and the "sloppy" kimono. Devise a working suit which will be easy, comfortable, and yet neat.



Begin the day by going to the open window and taking at least a half dozen deep breaths.



You need not be ashamed to be seen by callers in a gown devised for housework.



It does you more good than anything else to go into your own room, lock the door, and read yourself into a nap.

This is not hard work. Unless you catch cold easily your garb may be of cotton stuff, which will wash readily—a one piece frock of the sort sometimes described as housemaids' dresses, which you may purchase ready made at an absurdly small sum, or make for yourself if you are quicker with your needle or sewing machine than you are with your pocketbook.

There is nothing of the kimono effect about this garment. It fits to the figure, although it is not tight enough in the waist or the arms to tear readily or to hinder your working with comfort. The skirt is short enough to clear the ground; the sleeves are either short or cut in a fashion which enables you to turn them up without difficulty; the collar is soft, or else the neck is V shaped, in order you may not become overheated about the throat while you are doing hot work.

When you are clothed in this style, an apron to save the front of the frock from spots, you need not be ashamed to be seen by callers, any more than a man is when he has on overalls at his work. You are suitably dressed for your occupation. You are neat and clean, and what more can any one want? This sort of garb is a different thing from a long tailed tea gown which is no longer fit to be seen and so will answer for a working costume.

Challie Good in Winter.

You may be one of those who cannot wear wash dresses in winter, you may tell me. Very well, then, have your working uniform of woolen goods, making it in the same businesslike, ship shape fashion that I have recommended for the cotton frock. You will have difficulty in finding this sort of thing ready made and will probably have to get it made to order or do it yourself. Select a neat pattern, a mixed goods, if you can get it, which will either wash or else clean readily. A challie is good for this, and if it is too light you can have a cotton slip to wear under it. Provide yourself with long sleeved aprons in gingham or cambric which will protect the woolen dress from spots. It is not so simple a matter to cleanse this as the cotton frock and it holds the odors of the cooking as a wash material will not do. For this reason some housekeepers wear woolen skirts and cotton shirt waists. My only objection to this is that it is so difficult and tedious a matter to make a shirt waist look trim and neat that the wearer is prone to let it go and come to the breakfast table and her morning work far from attractive.

See to your footgear as well as to the clothing of your body. I may say, by the way, that the corset or corset waist you wear should be comfortable and well fitting. Much of your comfort depends upon this. Don't take old, run down slippers into service for morning wear. They twist and tire the feet and oblige you to work under disadvantages that handicap you from the start. An Oxford tie, with a low, broad heel, is a good working shoe, although I know some housekeepers who declare that any low shoe is wearisome to work in and that to avoid the danger of breaking down arches they wear comfortable boots in the house.

The style of the shoe is a matter of comparative unimportance. What is essential is that the shoe should be an easy fit, neither narrow in the toes nor high in the heels, but of a make which does not call your attention to your feet and ankles while you are working. I know of few minor discomforts which impair efficiency more than aching and sore feet—though I don't know why I should speak of this particular variety of torture as a "minor discomfort." I have known times when the whole face of the heavens was blackened for me by a shoe that pinched my toes or twisted my ankle or compressed the ball of my foot. Even if you spare yourself as much as you can by sitting down to all the work it is not absolutely necessary to stand up to do, there is a constant strain on your feet and you should humor them all you can and begin by putting them into sensible shoes.

Keeping in Trim.

Having discussed the manner in which you array yourself for your work, let me ask what other means do you employ for keeping yourself in condition? How about your allowance of fresh air?

If you have not thought of this before think of it now and make a business of seeing that you get all you can. Begin the day by going to the open window and taking at least half a dozen deep breaths of pure fresh air, expanding your lungs and filling them with oxygen. You have no idea with how much keener vigor you will turn to your work. You will have even more enthusiasm for it if you have taken a hot salt bath as soon as you arose and followed this either by a cold shower or spray, or if you cannot stand these, by a good friction with a rough towel and an alcohol rub. These and my morning calisthenics are an inevitable part of my daily routine and are important factors in keeping me in sound physical trim.

Don't stop taking in fresh air with the early treatment. Try to repeat the long breaths at an open window half a dozen times during the day and keep as much air as you can in the room where you are working. Yet you must avoid direct drafts. If you find a chill by lowering the window a few inches from the top, have a board about eight inches high and the width of the window that you can put under the lower sash, so that there will be a space between the upper and the lower sashes across the middle of the window. The air which comes through this opening will not pour directly upon you as it does from a window which is let down from the top.

Some housework you can do with all the windows open and the outside air admitted freely. When you are making beds or sweeping or engaged in some other active exercise you need have no fear of taking cold. If you do such work in correct style there are few finer forms of exercise. Lift the weight of the mattress or the spring in the right way, without putting undue strain on the abdominal muscles, bringing the muscles of the back and the arms into play and deepening and strengthening your breathing powers. In sweeping bear the same sort of thing in mind and use the broom in such fashion that it will develop your arm and shoulder and chest as well as your back and legs.

Always recollect that while you are doing this you must have just as much of the outside air as you can get. If the weather is cold slip on a loose sweater or flannel jacket to protect you from chill, but don't shut the windows.

Seeking Diversion Rests.

In the kitchen it is not invariably easy to get all the fresh air you wish and need. Sometimes the draft interferes with the work of the oven, or the water in which you are washing dishes cools too quickly if the window near the sink or the [illegible] is open. Some kinds of cookery must not be done in a cold room, and when a woman is standing near a hot stove there is danger of her catching cold if a current of fresh air plays about her feet. Yet even the kitchen may be aired often enough to prevent its becoming unduly close and heated.

So much for keeping yourself in good plight by methods you may follow about your home. Another kind of care you must take of yourself is by diversion. Don't try to stick too closely to your work. I don't mean that you must neglect it—if you are like most of my Cornerites I fancy there is little danger of that—but that you must recollect that the proverb about all work and no play applies to Jill as well as to Jack. You will do all the better at the regular tasks which await you day after day if you run away from them occasionally, for a mental as well as material change of scene. Where you run to is of less importance than the fact that you turn your back upon your stated employments now and then.

Perhaps you find that it does you more good than anything else to go into your own room, lock the door, put on a wrapper and read yourself into a nap. With this idea I have strong sympathy, born of long experience. Or you may have a garden which you love to "grub," or flowers in your window whose society rests you when you are weary of human beings, or you may gain refreshment by listening to music, going to the theater or to a "movie" show—or even by solitaire. Whatever it is, make a conscience of utilizing it as one of the ways by which you keep yourself up to the mark and increase your ability to do good with the least strain.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"Is a woman of 40 too old to take up a fad or to try to nurse into life one she has had in younger days? Some time ago I noticed an item in one of the papers telling of what they were pleased to call the vagary of a woman of 40 who was taking up the study of chemistry, not as a means of livelihood, but simply as a fad. All her life she had had longings to know more of it, but not until she had reached the above age and been left a widow had the opportunity come to her. The article told how all of her family were put out about it, and some of them even voiced the belief that her mind was giving way. I was greatly interested in the item, for I have reached that unromantic age and am the possessor of a fad that will not down, in spite of divers discouragements. I have always had the writing bee buzzing in my bonnet, but life on a farm, with its round of duties, puts a great dampener on literary work. Besides, it makes you forget many things you ought to know. At the present time I am exceedingly rusty, but I love to write little articles for our small weekly paper in my home town, also for the farm paper. Long years on the farm have taught me many things I would like to pass along. Now there must be many writers, and some, like myself, must be among the readers of the Helping Hand department. Won't they write their experiences? What helped them may help me. Is there some book or magazine on journalism that is no more use to the owner and could be passed along? I would be thankful for anything of the kind. COUNTRY WOMAN."

My hearty approval goes out to any woman who takes up a fad after her hard duties are over and seeks to find some such way of filling her leisure and supplying herself with a fresh interest in life. One of these days I plan to have a talk with the Cornerites on this topic. But it is one thing to devote your spare time to a study like chemistry, or a language, or anything else, and quite another to attempt to enter as a money maker a field occupied by persons who have given years of study to the profession of authorship. Do you see the difference? In the one case you are broadening your mind and increasing your knowledge with a view to the happiness and growth that result from self-culture; in the other you are putting your efforts into competition with those of trained workers. A mistaken impression prevails with regard to writing. To be an author it is not enough to have written good compositions at school, to write good letters, to be able to get your productions into a little local paper. Study of literature and language are required, an acquaintance with the best books of the world, a practice of style in writing. All these take time and toil, and until these have been given, and a great deal of hard labor in the way of producing many compositions which are done merely for the sake of practice and with no thought of publication, it is hardly worth while to aspire towards a position in the magazines or to authorship of books. Of course, now and then a genius appears, but they are so rare as to be hardly worth considering in a general discussion. I would advise you to read for your profit and write for your own pleasure, without planning to enter the ranks of professional writers. Personally I am not conversant with a book on journalism, but some idea of the difficulty of an adequate preparation for such work may be gained from the fact that at one school of journalism the course is four years of hard study, and it is reckoned one of the most severe in the institution. If any other writers wish to reply to the inquiries of this correspondent I shall be happy to give place to their letters.

Need a Wheel Chair.

"My son and I are invalids and confined to the house. We live with my two daughters, he with one and I with the other, in the same neighborhood, but we are unable to see one another. You can know what a wheeled chair would do for us. I have been trying to get a second hand one for some time, but up to date have not met with any results. We are poor people and unable to buy a new chair. Anything you could do to help us would be greatly appreciated. MRS. A. B."

There are charitable agencies and philanthropic private individuals who are always ready to help in such a case as the above, either by lending a wheeled chair or by giving counsel as to where one can be procured. Cannot some one of the readers of our department lend a helping hand by informing this mother how she can secure a chair in which she and her crippled son can get together, or perhaps make arrangements by which such a chair can be sent to her. I confess that it gives me a sharp twinge when I think of her longing for a glimpse of her man child and her inability to go to him. Will not some one who knows this feeling try to aid this mother?

Asks for Three Recipes.

"Will you kindly give me the following recipes? One for a good cold cream [the best you know], the second a way of preserving the odors of rose petals, lemon verbena, and lavender [I have heard that these can all be treated in a similar way], and a third for candied nuts, the so-called nuts glacés. Two of these I realize do not come under the heading of recipes, yet I recollect having once seen a way given by you to make a rose jar. C. M. G."

I am sorry I cannot help you about the first two directions. As you say, these lie outside my province, and I would advise your writing to some health and beauty department for instruction as to the cold cream. So far as the odors of the flowers go I am under the impression that a retort or a still are needed to preserve their perfumes. Dried lemon verbena and lavender both retain their fragrance for a long while, but faded violets do not. I am afraid the business of procuring perfumes from them is something which demands a good deal of equipment as well as of instruction. If I am mistaken in this I shall hope to be set right by one of our better taught readers, whose experience fits her to answer this query. In the third recipe, nuts glacés, I am happy to be able to serve you. Put two cups of granulated sugar over the fire in a saucepan, with two tablespoons of water, and stir until it begins to boil. Stop stirring when this point is reached and let it cook until a little of it dropped from the tip of a spoon spins a thread. Draw the saucepan to one side of the fire, put in your nuts one at a time with a pair of candy tongs or with a perforated spoon and withdraw them at once. Lay them to dry on waxed paper. If you do not have a sufficient coating with one dipping repeat the process when the first application has cooled and dried, but work quickly, as the candy soon hardens. Keep it warm on the stove or in an outer vessel filled with boiling water. A good deal of practice is required to do this work well and to the best advantage.

Four Small Children.

"There is a man trying to work his way through school here. He has a wife and four small children, a boy of 8, a girl of 5, a boy of 4, and a baby. Any one who would help these appreciative people might send food, toys, or anything that will brighten the lives of the little ones. They will have cheerless holidays unless some one helps. "O. D. A."

This appeal, I trust, may come to the notice of some one of the many who are looking about for the place where their offerings will do most good. There are numbers of such people who wish to make this holiday home bright for some one to whom it would be gloomy without their aid, and this particular case seems to furnish an opportunity for their assistance. I will give the address on application.

Bread with Plain Sponge.

"Will you kindly give me your favorite bread recipe? I found a recipe of yours for white bread that was published in the corner about two years ago. It gave full directions for setting the sponge at night and finishing it the following day. I used the recipe and it was the most delicious bread we have ever had, but in moving I have lost the recipe. MRS. H. H. L."

Bread recipes are many, and after this lapse of time it is impossible for me to say what was the exact recipe to which you refer. The directions which I give will make good bread if closely followed, and I hope they may prove to make as satisfactory bread as the recipe you lost: Chop a tablespoon of butter and lard mixed into a quart of flour, wet with a quart of warm water, add a tablespoon of sugar and half a yeast cake dissolved in a little warm water. Beat all together hard for ten minutes, cover, and set to rise in a sheltered place. In winter it will take at least six hours to rise; in summer it may require less. The surface of the sponge should be covered with air bubbles when it is ready to handle. Work into it two quarts of flour in which you have sifted a teaspoon of salt, using your hands and having them well floured. The dough should be just stiff enough to handle. Lift it to the bread board, rinse out the mixing bowl with a little warm water, and work the rinsings into the dough; flour the board, knead the dough well for ten minutes, return to the mixing bowl, cover, and set to rise. It should increase to twice its original bulk after rising from four to six hours. Knead for ten minutes more, make into loaves, filling pans half full; let the loaves rise till the pans are two-thirds full, and bake.

Apples on Sticks.

"I would appreciate a recipe for making apples on sticks. E. B."

This recipe or something like it has been requested before. Can some one who knows just what is meant by "apples on sticks" and how to make them help me out by giving the directions?

Dictionary Would Help.

"I am the little boy who wrote you a few days ago about wanting that dictionary which was offered. I am 13 years old and in high school, and the dictionary would be a great help to me, and also to my two sisters, who are younger than I. I know you must be busy attending to people every day, but I wish you could help me out in this. E. R. H."

I am sorry to tell you that the dictionary to which you refer had been given away before your letter was received, but I hope that printing this note may bring an offer of one for you especially. I will keep your name and address.

Fried Mush Made Right.

"I have something to say about that time honored dish fried mush. I suppose every old housekeeper has her own ideas, and here are mine: First, I keep on hand a supply of clean, dry bread crumbs. I dry pieces of stale bread in the oven and grind them fine in the meat grinder. Then I have a can of nice clean drippings. I say 'nice, clean,' because I have seen cans of drippings that are anything but that. I use any sort of meat fat except ham, and that I keep for potatoes and eggs. The can of drippings I always have in the refrigerator so that it cuts down hard. Then if I want the fried mush for breakfast I make the mush the evening before. To do this have a saucepan of water, salted, boiling furiously. Into this sprinkle slowly the cornmeal, stirring it well all the time. If the boiling subsides wait a moment before putting in any more meal. By this process every grain of the meal is scalded and burst, so that when the mass is as stiff as it can possibly be stirred the mush is thoroughly cooked. Rinse a pan in clear water to keep the mush from sticking to it. Turn the mass into the pan and smooth the surface with a wet spoon to prevent a hard crust from forming. When ready to do the frying have the griddle hot, but not scorching; use just enough fat to keep the mush from sticking, adding a little more from time to time. Slice the mush thin and dip each slice in the crumbs, which will make a fine brown crust. It is a great mistake to think that meal mush should boil for hours. "MRS. A."

If I have given all this space to so simple a dish as fried mush it is because it is one of the many varieties of cookery which are so easy that no one has a rule for doing them. Of the same class is the business of making tea and coffee and toast. Since every one is supposed to understand how to make them no one takes any trouble with them and the result is often either failure or a poor performance. Try mush cooked after the plan given by Mrs. A. with such [illegible] ness and I am sure you will find it a different and a better dish from that you have seen on most tables.

Needs a Reed Organ.

"In planning a Sunday school for the children in our neighborhood I find that we need a reed organ to lead our singing. Should any reader of the Helping Hand have an organ or know of one which is no longer in use and that can be given for little or nothing we would greatly appreciate such a gift. Our other expenses for equipment are so large that we can scarcely afford to invest anything in a musical instrument. MRS. L. K. C."

This seems to me a reasonable request. We constantly hear of churches and Sunday schools which are introducing pipe organs and discarding their old instruments. I hope the friends of some such organizations may see this paragraph and write to me for the address of this correspondent. The Sunday school is within the limits of Chicago, and so the organ should be sent from somewhere in that city or the [illegible]

Boy Has No Toys.

"I am sending just a few lines to see if some of the people who read this corner can do something for my little boy. He is 6 years old and can't talk and it makes him cross. He is lonely all day when he has to be left alone. My sisters go to school, two miles away, all day, and if some kind person had something for him it would make him happy. He has none."

I wish there might be a chance of this plea for the 6 year old boy who needs being seen by a specialist who could do something for his tied tongue. The most one can hope for him is that some one will hear the plea of the child who writes the letter and send him something to help pass the lonely hours. I shall look for a reply.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

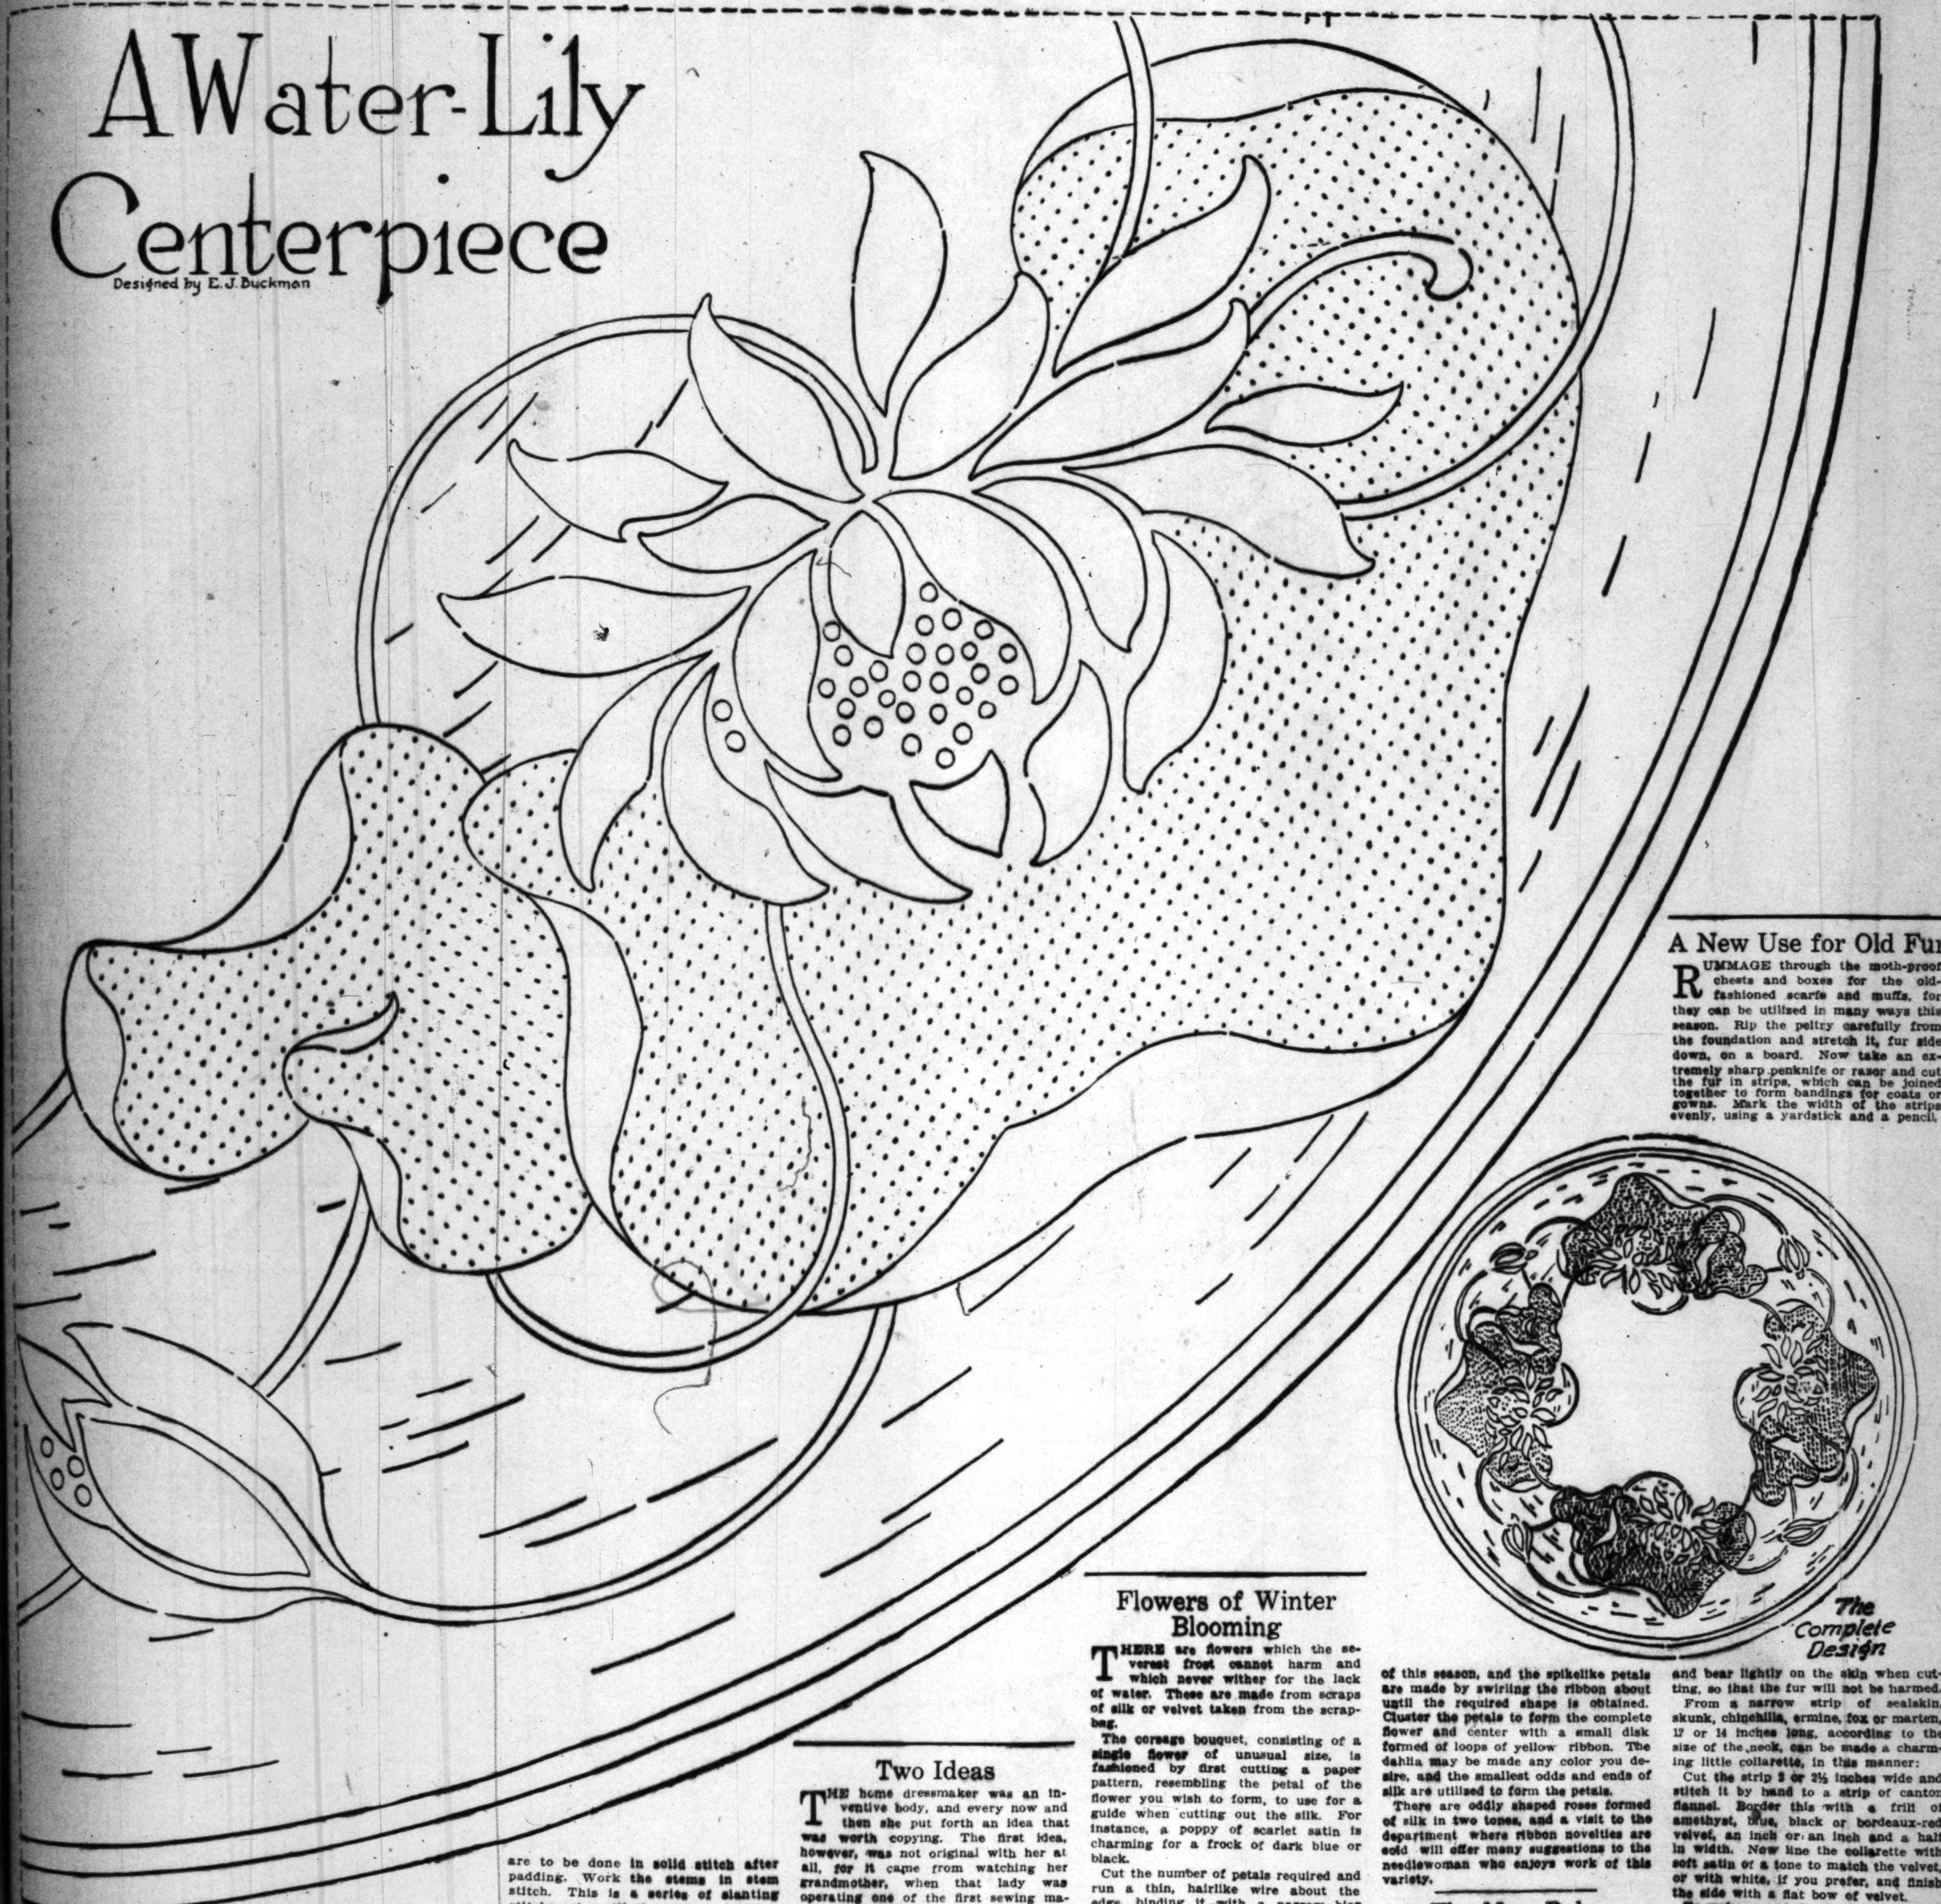
A Water-Lily Centerpiece

Designed by E. J. Buckman



One-fourth of Design

[illegible] is entirely too beautiful to [illegible] kept till summer, when the [illegible] lilies decorate ponds and [illegible]. I have much pleasure [illegible] this design to my embroidery circle today for a beginning [illegible] year. If you will just multiply [illegible] design by four, you will [illegible] how lovely the completed work will be. It is appropriate for the dining table or in col- [illegible] the living hall table. Then [illegible] can be placed on the porch [illegible] for the bowl of the real [illegible]. I would remind you of the [illegible] brides are filling the hope [illegible] with all kinds of embroidered [illegible] and that this one will bring [illegible] the face of any one who is [illegible] enough to receive it.

[illegible] tracing the design, place the [illegible] suggest the diameters of [illegible] so that they will correspond [illegible] threads of the linen. This [illegible] a perfect laundering and [illegible] in the centerpiece. By the [illegible] supplied on another part of [illegible] trace the centerpiece. You [illegible] that there is a straight [illegible] which can be left as it is or [illegible] with torchon or cluny lace. [illegible] enriches a centerpiece. [illegible] tiny spaces of dots are easily [illegible] add much to the effect with- [illegible] burdening the worker. The remainder of the design should be done in solid work to give contrast.

Pad the petals of the leaves lengthwise with darning cotton. Work with a soft, coarse mercerized stitch over the padding across the petals. White is a great favorite, but there is now being shown a touch of color with white work. This can be added at the tips of the leaves and in the center of the flowers. Make the center a collection of eyelets done in either white or yellow. French knots are also effective and quickly done with coarse thread.

Punched work is an old friend to the embroiderer. Use a coarse needle or a regular three-sided needle that comes for this work when punching holes in the material; work in parallel rows, making the lines of thread run across between two dots. When passing down to the row below pass on the under side of the goods, coming out at the dot immediately under the first one where you began. Complete the squares by working lines that radiate from the holes, and by all means do not pull the material; it will be open enough when you have punched through it the number of times in the process.

If punched work be too intricate or too long for you, make the leaves in French knots, that can be very large or small. Use coarse thread or silk for this work.

The turned-over edge of the leaves are to be done in solid stitch after padding. Work the stems in stem stitch. This is a series of slanting stitches that fill the stems. Another effective way is an outlining of each side of the stem and a filling in with lines of small backstitches. The lines around the outer edge that suggest water are to be in simple outline. Buttonhole stitches will complete the edge, and, as I said before, the addition of heavy lace will give a finish that you will not regret.

Pale green thread or silk with white is beautiful. It must be that pale silvery tint that will not be too striking, and if you shade it with white the result will be more satisfactory. The center of each flower can be pale green and the water lines green also. Add to the lace edge a note of green by taking the solid places in the design and using them for a background and working in over-and-over stitch. This has been done in many of the prize pieces shown in a recent exhibition, and the effect is most convincing.

Although this design will probably be done in white, the use of pale pink on the petals is to be commended. Be careful of the centers, as a yellow that is deep will clash with the color in the petals. The natural color scheme need not be followed. White eyelets would be effective.

I think that I have given the new year a good beginning, and I hope that I have found a ready welcome in your embroidery hearts. If this design is one of your especial pets I shall be very glad to hear from you.

Two Ideas

THE home dressmaker was an inventive body, and every now and then she put forth an idea that was worth copying. The first idea, however, was not original with her at all, for it came from watching her grandmother, when that lady was operating one of the first sewing machines. This idea was the simple act of putting about the arm of the machine, directly in front of the sewer, a band of flannel in which to stick pins and needles. The little old lady, then young and comely, took a strip of flannel four inches wide and just long enough to go about the machine arm and lap over sufficiently to be stitched fast in a seam by hand or to accommodate the safety pin which could be used instead of the sewing to hold it together. Before being put about the arm the flannel was folded in half, so that it was but two inches wide. This gave two thicknesses of flannel through which to stick pins and needles.

The second idea was quite as simple, but an original one with the home dressmaker. She was making one of those pretty lace undersleeves they are wearing now, those that reach from the elbow to the wrist. The sleeves were fulled in at the top and bottom, having a bishop effect. The sleeves were not open at the cuffs, but made to slip over the hand. This made them rather large for the wrist of the wearer after the sleeves were pulled over the knuckles. So the home dressmaker evolved the idea of placing a hook and eye on the line of gathering at the wrist just an inch or so from each other. After the sleeve was slipped over the wrist the little invisible hook was hooked into the little thread eye and brought the wrist line or line of gathering close about the wrist, all without a separation in the cuffs. Before removing the sleeves the hook and eye were unfastened and the sleeves easily slipped over the knuckles.

Flowers of Winter Blooming

THERE are flowers which the severest frost cannot harm and which never wither for the lack of water. These are made from scraps of silk or velvet taken from the scrap-bag.

The corsage bouquet, consisting of a single flower of unusual size, is fashioned by first cutting a paper pattern, resembling the petal of the flower you wish to form, to use for a guide when cutting out the silk. For instance, a poppy of scarlet satin is charming for a frock of dark blue or black.

Cut the number of petals required and run a thin, hairlike wire about the edge, binding it with a narrow bias strip of the satin. Join them together and center the flower with stamens, which are purchasable where artificial flowers are sold.

The pond lily is another flower which appears on many of the handsomest evening gowns. It is used as a corsage ornament or to catch up the skirt draperies and is made of white satin. Remnants of silk or satin can be bought at much reduced prices, and the smallest pieces are utilized to fashion these flowers. The petals of pond lilies are pointed, and for each one cut two sections from the silk, stitching them together on the wrong side. Turn them and cluster the rows of petals together to resemble the natural flower.

Fill the center with yellow stamens and the flower is ready for your gown.

A favorite corsage ornament is the cluster of small roses made by folding strips of silk, gauze or satin over a padded center. The strip varies in width according to the size of the rose and is cut on the bias. The two edges are then folded together and sewn about the center, formed by covering a piece of cotton with the silk.

Each rose is then fastened to a wire stem, about which narrow green ribbon is wrapped. Six or eight of the flowers are required for a cluster.

On a smart gown of brown panne velvet a sunflower is effectively used. The petals are of yellow satin, made double in the manner of the pond-lily petals. To form the disk-shaped center, sew short loops of brown ribbon to a circular piece of buckram. The petals are then firmly attached to the edge of the disk.

The dahlia is a flower much approved of this season, and the spikelike petals are made by swirling the ribbon about until the required shape is obtained. Cluster the petals to form the complete flower and center with a small disk formed of loops of yellow ribbon. The dahlia may be made any color you desire, and the smallest odds and ends of silk are utilized to form the petals.

There are oddly shaped roses formed of silk in two tones, and a visit to the department where ribbon novelties are sold will offer many suggestions to the needlewoman who enjoys work of this variety.

The New Baby

HAS a new citizen lately arrived and are you anxious to welcome his or her coming by an inexpensive gift? Here's just the thing! Procure a fine, small guest towel and work across one end, in the center, the word "Baby," in pale blue or pink. The script letters joined are prettier than the printed ones. By placing the script letters in the proper order to spell the word and connecting them with a lead pencil, one can easily get the joined word. A professional stamper at an art needlework store will stamp the word for you if you do not care to go to the trouble of connecting the letters. Fold the little towel so that it will go in a large glove box and leave a square vacant space at one end. Now take a pink or blue barred Turkish washcloth and fold it in a square. Tie about it, crosswise, an inch-wide pink or blue ribbon, with a pretty little full bow upon the top. Wrap the box up in a white paper and tie it about with narrow ribbon of the same shade as that used inside of the box.

How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top.

With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material and will last until worked.

The Complete Design

A New Use for Old Fur

RUMMAGE through the moth-proof chests and boxes for the old-fashioned scarfs and muffs, for they can be utilized in many ways this season. Rip the peltry carefully from the foundation and stretch it, fur side down, on a board. Now take an extremely sharp penknife or razor and cut the fur in strips, which can be joined together to form bandings for coats or gowns. Mark the width of the strips evenly, using a yardstick and a pencil, and bear lightly on the skin when cutting, so that the fur will not be harmed.

From a narrow strip of sealskin, skunk, chinchilla, ermine, fox or marten, 12 or 14 inches long, according to the size of the neck, can be made a charming little collarette, in this manner:

Cut the strip 2 or 2½ inches wide and stitch it by hand to a strip of canton flannel. Border this with a frill of amethyst, blue, black or bordeaux-red velvet, an inch or an inch and a half in width. Now line the collarette with soft satin of a tone to match the velvet, or with white, if you prefer, and finish the side with a flat bow of velvet.

To make one of the large flat muffs, it requires two bands of fur, five or six inches wide and twenty-eight or thirty inches long. The down-stuffed foundation can be purchased at the department stores, and this should be covered with messaline and then with chiffon of the same tone, which should be shirred or pleated over the foundation. At each end stitch a band of fur and finish the center with a flat bow of ribbon velvet. Three narrower bands can be successfully used for the muff, placing one at each end and the third through the center.

From three yards of chiffon or mousseline de soie, eighteen inches in width, a charming scarf can be fashioned. Two thicknesses of the gossamer material are stitched together by hand, and the four sides are them bordered with a narrow band of fur.

Two tones of chiffon may be used if you admire the effect produced, and artistic combinations are black and gold, taupe and tapestry blue, black and rose, black and white, pale blue and black, gray and rose or gold and pale blue.

It is an easy matter to make one of the attractive wraps for which the shops demand such fabulous prices. Purchase the brocaded silk or velvet and, using a reliable pattern, cut out the wrap. After joining the sections line with a soft silk and border the collar, cuffs and hem of the wrap with bands of fur.

If you only have a small amount of fur, trim the cuffs and collar. The narrowest line of fur is used to border the tunics of transparent fabrics and the hems of silk, velvet or cloth dresses, so there are many uses for fur.

IN THE GLASS OF FASHION

A THE DANSANT

HERE is a collection of smart street costumes which fashion's devotees are now wearing to the tea-dance. They are excellent examples of sartorial art and will win the instant approval of the woman interested in beautiful modes.

Terracotta peau de peche is the material chosen for the charming model trimmed with lynx. The jacket is short in front, gradually lengthening toward the back.

A short tunic of the material, trimmed with fur-covered buttons, falls gracefully from the high waist line, and the skirt is slashed in the center front. The collar, cuffs and buttons of the coat are of lynx.

Completing this costume is a chic little hat of white moire, faced with black velvet and trimmed with yellow roses.

White fox is one of the fashionable furs this season, and the gray duvetine suit has a band of this lovely white peltry forming the collar, cuffs and hem. Ornaments of twisted cords are used to fasten the jacket, which emphasizes the military effect. The double-tiered skirt is cut in circular sections to produce the flare so desirable at present.

The close-fitting bowl-shaped hat of duvetine is trimmed with loops of the same material, knotted through the center with the fox fur.

Extremely stunning is the yellowish-gray costume of diagonal serge with cuffs and vest of red peau de peche. Bands of sealskin from the high collar and cuffs and silver buttons ornament the front and back.

An oddly shaped hat of black velvet is worn with this suit.

The perfect costume of the present demands accessories which harmonize, and the fascinating sets of velvet and fur are the distinctive feature of many smart toilettes.

The gray set is of duvetine of the finest quality lined with yellow satin.

A set appropriate for theater wear is developed of old-rose-colored chiffon, shirred in soft folds over silk of the same color. Narrow bands of skunk contribute the modish note of fur to the set.

IN the last analysis, a monopoly of virtue must be denied to our ancestors who prided themselves on their Puritan code of morals and usages they were merely less well-informed d more selfish than the present gen ation. THE NEW PURITANISM

By Carrie Chapman Catt

President, International Woman Suffrage Alliance

IN the last analysis, a monopoly of virtue must be denied to our ancestors who prided themselves on their Puritan code of morals and usages they were merely less well-informed and more selfish than the present generation. Believing that we are witnessing the break-down of the old Puritanism in America, I nevertheless assert that this is one of the most truly moral ages that the world has ever known. The alarmists who see black portents in the growing frankness with which men and women talk about the hitherto unmentionable problems of society, are misreading the signs of the times. The modern American is not degenerate; he is unafraid, even to the point of smashing hoary fetiches when they stand in the way of progress.

What, after all, was the Puritanism that, finding expression in the laws of New England and the creeds of the early American churches, became established as the customs of the people? If one should go behind customs and ask for the cause of their being, it would be found that the idea prevalent at the time that strict living for the individual was a guarantee of his personal glory and reward. This represented an extremely refined form of selfishness, for we can not get away from the fact that if a man was good according to the definitions of that day he could count on receiving honor at the hands of his neighbors as well as the rewards of immortality.

A hundred years has brought an utter change in the point of view. Among those who think most intelligently, the life of most value is no longer the one which represents virtue in itself, but the one which represents social virtue. We feel that there is something ignoble in seeking personal salvation, if one does not also join the ranks of those who are seeking the material as well as the spiritual salvation of humanity.

To be specific: one of the obsolete blue laws of Connecticut forbade a man to kiss his wife on Sunday. That seems ridiculous to our modern notions. We are beginning to suspect that it might be a good thing to modify such observance laws still further, and allow men who are cooped up in offices and factories through the week to take their families out into the pure air and sunshine on Sunday. In other words, the modern tendency is against suppressing the normal and wholesome impulses of the human being, in order to conform to a rigid personal code. The old brand of Puritanism has gone forever, but upon its ruins is rising a new morality that is better and more useful, that is trying to make the world a better place to live in.

In considering this question, one can not afford to overlook those forms of popular art which have been severely criticised of late. I have particularly in mind what is known as the sex novel and the sex drama, and do not hesitate to say that a book or play in which sex is handled in a serious spirit can do harm to the community only if it is inaccurate. Nothing is to be gained by suppressing facts. The reformers of today are seeking for more and more knowledge, and they can not afford to turn their backs upon any writer who speaks out cleanly and honestly.

Of course, there is the danger of mistaking liberty for license, but those who stray in that direction are few compared with those who are strengthened by a wider knowledge of the facts of existence. Within the past generation, a tremendous influence has been exerted in Europe by a group of well known authors. Among these may be named George Brandes, who has presented the idea of free love in a very refined and inviting manner; Ellen Key, the famous Swede, who followed with the theory that love is the highest manifestation of individual destiny; and Neitzsche with his doctrine of absolute individualism. They have been followed by a host of less noteworthy men and women, and as a result of this form of education, many young men and women especially in Europe — writers, artists and professional people for the most part — are attempting to apply these teachings to everyday life.

This infection has crossed the Atlantic, and we hear rumors of a movement to make people soul free, the theorists overlooking the fact that no one can be soul free who is not master of all his emotions.

It is these manifestations which have led many clergymen, pious laymen and pessimistic moralists to lament the passing of Puritanism. But they are manifestations only, mere side issues of the great world movement that has made them possible. Nature never goes backward. Morals mean civilization, and morals are not going to be lost.

The sudden appearance of books and plays which picture graphically the moral conditions of the present time are symptoms of a fundamental change in public thought. We refuse longer to believe that ignorance of evil is a protection to any girl or young man. Such dramas as Damaged Goods by Brieux do an immense amount of good. Even the two plays which were expurgated recently by the New York police, because each had a scene laid in a brothel, set the community thinking by the shock which they created. Only by shocking some people can they be made to think.

AS much may be said for novels of a similar type, such as The House of Bondage, and for sundry recent books dealing with White Slavery, so called.

The efforts of the sincere, if revolutionary, authors of today should bear fruit in a higher standard of public morals. They will hasten the advent of a new and better Puritanism, which manifesting itself in a social form, will be free of the bigotry and individual selfishness of the old.

A BLUNDER IN EDEN

He felt as if every one in that room knew why he was dining there

FATE HERSELF had led Bobby Lorimer to the little cafe that night. He had become so thoroughly sick of the garish high lights of his accustomed haunts that the monotone of this place and its patrons seemed a blessed relief. He was glad there was no music.

Dessert had just been set before him when he heard the sound of a violin, and looked up to see that some musicians had taken possession of a little platform where there was a piano that he had not noticed.

"And this place," he muttered to himself regretfully, "was so restful."

He was hurrying through his dessert so that he might take his leave before the orchestra began to play; he knew just what it would be like. And then — an elusive note or two of prelude, and The Voice.

It was as if a silver lute held to the warm lips of Spring had blown from out a dull gray sky; a high sweet note, that trembled for an instant, broke and rippled down like fairy laughter, then hung in midair swinging upon the words of the song:

I 'm down upon the thistle!
I 'm cobweb in the air!

Lorimer looked up in astonishment. The people at the next table obstructed his view and prevented his seeing the singer. She would be young and fair and smiling. He could see that by the way the violinist looked at her as he played. He knew that she swayed rhythmically with the music, and her hands fluttered involuntarily to the tune of it. And on ran the song, gay and rhythmic and free as the hours of youth, and Lorimer gave himself up to the sheer joy of listening.

My heart will dance on laughter,
Float off upon a sigh;
You could not follow after,
And I will tell you why:

And then the gay lilt of the refrain, that afterward he came to know so well that the words sang themselves over and over, and always with that strange little tug at his heart that he could never understand. Words and voice enthralled him.

The refrain ended as it had begun, in midair, for it was too fine and elusive a thing to touch dull earth.

The people began to applaud, the singer moved to a chair — and Lorimer, watching eagerly, saw a shy, half frightened little woman, in a white lawn dress, who seemed a little surprised, a little incredulous, and ready to be very grateful for the applause if she could think they meant it.

She was not awkward, but in all her body there was an utter absence of grace; she was not old, twenty-seven or eight at most, but youthless, with a look not so much of innocence as of inexperience. She had been fashioned lithe of limb and fleet for dancing, but her feet had trod sedately the somber path of her life; her eyes were dark, for tender glancing, but were lackluster from looking out on common things, and her dark brown hair had been so primly done into a knot on the top of her shapely little head as to subdue any pretty waywardness the curls may once have had. Her expression was not sad, only the eyes and lips were queerly dispassionate, as of one who suffered the tragedy of a life lived always on the barren plain of commonplace, with never a steep breathless ascent to the heights of joy, or sudden plunge into the depths of grief. It was as if life had been at once too serious for smiling and too monotonous for tears.

AND yet, — the voice. It was she who had sung that song! Surely then, when she sang, her beauty would come to life, her youth leap up awake, and the joy return to her eyes. She was standing almost stiffly, looking gravely and speculatively about, and then, remembering suddenly her duty, smiled a queer timorous little smile which held less of assurance than her first expression. But the people wanted more of her song and in response to the applause the leader nodded to her, raised his bow, and without the least perceptible change of expression, there floated between those passive lips the high, sweet, careless refrain:

Butterfly, Butterfly,
I am your sister, aye;
Love is a thing of airy wing,
No long flights to try!

Lorimer looked on amazed. The prim, colorless little woman; but, ah, the wonderful voice that had in it the flash and dart of butterfly wings, and all the youth that she had not!

Ending, she seated herself, and the applause way again to the light hum of conversation. L could not take his eyes from her.

"Will that be all, sir?" asked a voice at his Lorimer could have sworn at him. "I have

THESE, and many more details he wove for

One of the things everybody liked about Bobby Lorimer was his straightforward way of dealing with people, and he was as straightforward with himself as with any one else. So that was why at the end of two weeks he faced about squarely and put some very important questions to himself, questions which answered themselves in the asking. He had not missed an evening at Eden, as he had fancifully named the little cafe to himself, since first he heard The Voice. Even against his will the memory of it lured him back again night after night. He pleaded business as an excuse for breaking other social engagements, and his friends had begun to wonder if things were going wrong with him in a financial way.

LORIMER had thought very little of love, and when it had come into his mind at all it was as something remote and having to do vaguely with his future. He had hardly expected it to come in just this guise, but since it had come so, he made no effort to evade or deny it. He knew now, he was in love with this slender girl who had sung her way into his heart; in love not with the girl she appeared to be, but with the girl he knew her to be in his innermost heart. There was nothing more to be said, or rather there was a great deal of vast importance to be said.

To a man such as Lorimer the matter of a proper introduction was not difficult. He went about it simply. At the club he made inquiry and discovered that John Cressey, a fellow member, had a silent partnership in the cafe, and he sought him out that afternoon. It was easy to bring the conversation around casually to Miss Ritchie, the name the steward had given him.

Cressey had been out of town, had only just returned, but the night before had heard her sing for the first time. He did not know who she was; it was the manager's idea to have the entertainers since every one else had them, and he believed that one of the musicians had recommended Miss Ritchie.

"It's too bad, with that voice, that she has n't some personality," he said, and Lorimer marveled how the man could be so blind. One day the whole world would see her loveliness.

When a little later he left Cressey, he had his promise of an introduction that night. Lorimer had said something about his sister wanting some talent for a musicale.

That afternoon he walked on air, with no definite plan or thought, only waiting for the time to pass, and finally, fearing to go too early, found himself at his favorite table a quarter of an hour later than usual.

When he went in she was singing, — a difficult, [illegible] aria, — and a swift light of recognition came into her eyes as they met Lorimer's for an instant; her voice faltered on a high note, and then she deliberately turned her head away and finished the song. But as she sat down she sent a quick, shy glance toward his table, and then began looking over some music she held.

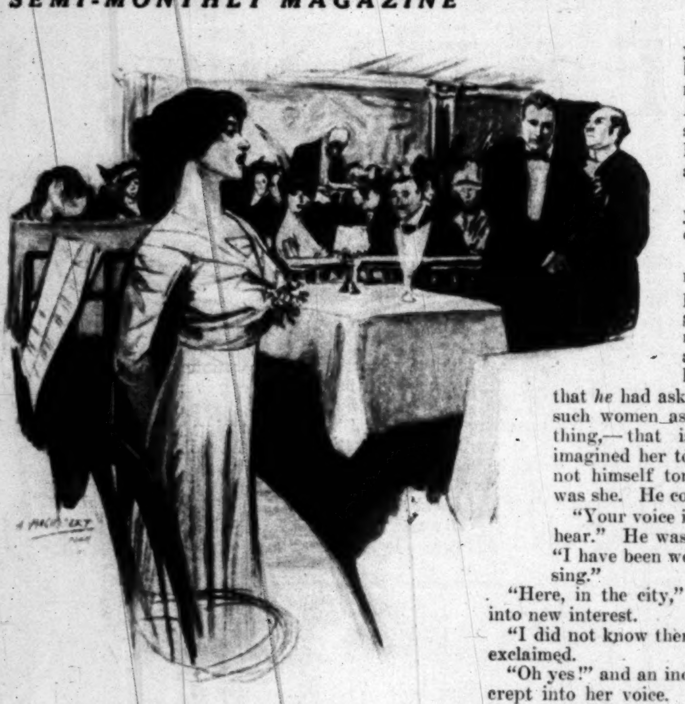
When finally Cressey came in, he talked for a few minutes with the steward, caught sight of Lorimer, nodded and came toward him. He spoke to Miss Ritchie as he passed, and she looked up and smiled her rare conventional little smile. She watched Cressey attentively until he sat down with Lorimer, when she became suddenly self-conscious and looked away quickly.

Lorimer could not tell whether she sang better or worse than usual tonight; the atmosphere of the place seemed to be surcharged with a sort of expectancy. Everything was as usual, nothing extraordinary; and when at last he followed Cressey up to where she sat he felt as if every one in that room knew why he was dining there that evening.

After the introduction and a few commonplaces, Cressey, with an apology, left them alone. Lorimer seated himself at her side. He had not thought it possible to feel so awkward. He did not know exactly what to say, so he said the most obvious thing:

"You have a wonderful voice, Miss Ritchie," he said. He must make her understand; she must not think he was flattering. A queer expression came into her eyes.

"You flatter me," she said.



The prim, colorless, little woman; but, ah, the wonderful voice!

It was not the thing she said, so much as her way of saying it that shocked Lorimer. Her voice was higher than he had expected, and the tone was almost flippant. It both disconcerted him and put him at greater ease. He had not expected this, — yet he hardly knew what he had expected. Perhaps she was only embarrassed.

"No," he told her sincerely, "it is not flattery; I have come here night after night to hear you sing."

She laughed lightly, — a little too lightly, he thought.

"Only to hear me?" she asked, with an attempt at coquetry.

"I had never been here until you came."

"Yes, I know that; the steward told me."

The steward! Every word she uttered was like a blow, shattering his ideal. She had been discussing him with the steward! He could not believe it of her. He saw that a flush had suffused her cheeks, and she was nervously fingering the music.

"The steward told you I never came here before you began singing here?" He hoped she would explain; he must have misunderstood. Again she laughed, a high staccato laugh that irritated Lorimer. It was so plainly affected.

"Certainly; I noticed how you always listened, and I was curious, so I asked about you."

With every word the metamorphosis grew more complete; the gentle, fine-souled girl he had watched night after night was vanishing and another personality was taking her place. He remembered that he had asked the steward about her; but such women as she did not do that sort of thing,— that is, women such as he had imagined her to be. Yet, he argued, he was not himself tonight, and no more, perhaps, was she. He could not let her go so easily.

"Your voice is worth going much farther to hear." He was sincere in his praise at least. "I have been wondering where you learned to sing."

"Here, in the city," she said. He was surprised into new interest.

"I did not know there were such masters here," he exclaimed.

"Oh yes!" and an incongruous note of braggadocio crept into her voice. "Mother always gave me the best, and she said there was no use taking me to Europe to study when there were just as good teachers to be had at home. And, we have never been sorry — you have heard the result yourself."

The pretty speech that was evidently expected did not come, for another part of Lorimer's dream had gone crashing. Her life then had not been as he had pictured it; the struggle with poverty, the unsympathetic family. Her mother had always given her the very best, and she might have gone abroad to study! He almost laughed as he thought of the tragic picture of his imagination. He was now seized with a new curiosity about her, — her appearance of poverty, her curious indifference, — what manner of life did she lead? He would ask.

"Your mother — is she still with you?"

"Yes, —" she began, and then hesitated an instant before she added, "but she is away just now and I am staying with friends at the Graystone."

FRIENDS: He had not imagined her having friends, much less living with them; and at the Graystone! A fashionable apartment house in the best district. It was inconceivable then, if it was not necessary, why she sang in this place.

"Why," he heard himself asking, "do you do this — sing here at Ede— at a cafe?" he hastily caught himself.

"Oh, because I like it! I meet such lovely people here," and she smiled archly at him. He noticed that her eyes were very bright and very hard. "Why, if it had n't been for my singing here I should never have met you!"

At last the miserable truth was upon him; she thought he was beginning a flirtation with her and she was like all the others, only worse. The whole affair suddenly sickened him. The odor of food and the clatter of dishes and the glare of unshaded lights all at once smote his senses.

The place was impossible, the people stupid, bourgeoise, and the girl at his side, — what a fool his silly sentimental imagination had been making of him! Cressey came up just then, and with the briefest and most perfunctory of goodbyes, they left the girl's side.

As they moved away, Cressey asked: "What do you think of her?" and Lorimer answered dully: "Oh, they 're all about the same, these entertainers! What this one gains in voice the others make up in style."

Near the door he turned aside into the telephone booth and called for a number.

"Not Bobby Lorimer in the flesh!" cried the charmingly modulated voice at the other end of the line. "Wherever have you been these last few weeks?"

"Oh, I 've been spending a lot of time on a most tiresome piece of business; but it 's finished now!" he told her.

"Come right on out, we 'll be waiting. There are a half dozen people here you know."

"Expect me in twenty minutes. Jove, it 'll be good to be back among you again!"

SPEEDING UP THE AMERICAN HEN

By Edward I. Farrington

Photographs by the AUTHOR

IF EVERY hen in the United States should lay one more egg a year, the annual production would be boosted by more than thirty million dozen. That is, classically speaking, a consummation devoutly to be wished — especially by family heads, to whom the five-cent egg is a standing offense.

Frankly, the American hen is by no means doing her duty. She is n't keeping pace with the times. She must be speeded up or fresh eggs will climb into the French artichoke and the alligator pear class. Already Kansas is canning "cracks" and "dirties" and preserved eggs have been imported, according to the news dispatches, from the land of the heathen Chinee.

After all, though, the trouble may be with the man behind the hen rather than with the hen herself. As now constituted, the laying fowl is pretty nearly an artificial creation, a kind of machine in feathers, yet withal a very delicate machine, which must be handled with skill. The man who can make her lay has a right to boast.

An Incubator House Made of Field Stone — To the Left — an Automatic Feeder

Experts all over the country are probing the secrets of the hen, trying to facilitate the egg-laying habit. All the experiment stations are at it. Therein, too, lies the reason for the egg-laying contests now in vogue. Out West instruction trains known as "egg specials" are being run for the benefit of the farmers. Even U has a chicken ranch a few miles from the White House making his own experiments.

Some of the results are startling. Certain hens selected known breeders to compete in the great egg-laying match Connecticut, produced not a solitary egg the whole year through owners supposed they were faithful, conscientious birds. They shape, the comb and even the song of laying hens. It remained trap nest to uncover the wretched deceit.

On the other hand, Oregon has produced a pullet which eggs in twelve months. She figures as hen "C-543" at the state and holds the world's record to date. There is gloom in Missouri Lady Show You had previously achieved a year's total of 2 feats stand out in marked contrast to the work of the average hen point was cleverly illustrated at a state fair not long ago. Side were two wire baskets, one heaped high with nice brown eggs with but the bottom covered. Over the former was tacked this 259 eggs — the number laid by one hen in ten months.

General View — Second International Egg-Laying Competition Plant at Stor To the Left is Shown the New Way of Brooding Chicks

Over the second basket was also a sign, and it read:

69 eggs — the number laid by the average hen in ten months.

That was an object lesson which the farmers and the back-lotters not likely to overlook. They are the people who supply the with eggs, anyway. Unfortunately, they are the hardest to get course, the hen which lays 250 eggs or more in a year's time bird — perhaps always will be — but 150 eggs is not too high for any tyro.

There is a lot of individuality about hens and about hen men try to impose cut and dried rules on one or the other, you are find yourself in figurative hot water. Yet there are certain which have been pretty thoroughly tried out. There is no example, that the day of the warm house has passed. Such house debilitated flocks and poor layers. Men who used to have dows and double doors in their poultry buildings have knocked the glass and leave the doors open half the time, although in weather they drop curtains over the windows

SYNOPSIS—Reuben K. Pitcher, having embarked in the lumber commission business for himself, and having cleaned-up a few thousand dollars on his first deal, boldly contracts with Henry Peets, Manager of the Washington Box Factory, to sell its entire spruce box output. He pays $2500 down, agreeing to pay a corresponding sum within thirty days. Then he begins to question his ability to put the deal through—and sees ruin suddenly staring him in the face.

REUBEN K. PITCHER bade Mr. Peets a touching farewell and returned to his hotel, where the first person to accost him was one Billy Allen, Purchasing Agent for the Amalgamated Canneries Company, of California. Pitcher had an inspiration.

"Hello, Billy," he said, "come up to buy boxes?"

"Yep," replied Allen. "Looks as if the apricot crop will swamp us this year.

"Pretty hard to place orders right now. Most of the box mills are pretty well loaded up with futures."

"Well that doesn't worry Billy Allen," the purchasing agent replied, blandly. "I know where I can lay my hands on a hundred and fifty thousand ready-made boxes and only waiting for our brand on one end."

"You mean the orders made up for the Golden West people before they failed?"

Allen smiled. "I suppose you want me to tell you my business, eh, Rube?"

"I hate secretive people," Pitcher retorted. "See you around the hotel later, I suppose," and he went up to his room.

To him here an hour later came Henry Peets, with an egg-sucking expression of countenance.

"Say, Pitcher," he began lamely, "about that canning stock I just sold you. I've just received a pretty fair offer on it. How'd you like to tear up that contract I gave you and take a thousand clean cash for your afternoon's work?"

Rube Pitcher only grinned. "Mr. Peets, business is business. This is a game of the survival of the fittest, and I was never accused of puling sentimentality when playing it. When I bought your shook this afternoon I took the most desperate chance I could ever take. So did you. Well, the cat's hopped my way and I'm going to gamble on the market. I'm sorry for you, but it can't be helped. You might carry my compliments to Billy Allen and tell him I'll sell him those boxes sixty days from now. I'll take five thousand for my bargain then."

HENRY PEETS sighed and retired. Presently he returned. "Say," he spat furiously, "if I ever get on my props I want you to handle my account for me." And he ducked out again.

The following morning Rube Pitcher took passage on a lumber schooner for San Francisco to save expense. He knew the skipper, and had declared himself eligible for a pass.

Upon his arrival in San Francisco he briskly fell to work in his chosen field of endeavor, although his very first move was to arrange for the transportation of his box shook from Gray's Harbor to San Francisco on a steam schooner due on the Harbor in about forty days. This matter attended to, and having received a written promise from the vessel owners to freight his beautiful kiln-dried box shook below decks, where no seas could possibly come aboard and wet it, he started blithely on a selling trip into the southern part of the state and was gone two weeks. When he returned to his office he found a letter from Billy Allen awaiting him. He replied to it in characteristic fashion:

> My Dear Mr. Allen:—
> There are a great many more apricots in this fair state of ours than you seem to think. I have just been traveling around a little and I guess I won't sell my boxes for a few weeks yet.
>
> Very truly yours,
> REUBEN K. PITCHER.

Billy Allen made no reply to this letter. He was afraid to, for there are certain statutes in force designed to insure the purity of the United States mails. Instead he conceived a passionate desire to spend an hour a day in Rube Pitcher's office in a vain endeavor to point out to that young man the error of his way. To all of which Reuben K. Pitcher smiled and pointed to his office calendar, upon which the fifteenth of September was marked with a large red cross.

"That," said Mr. Pitcher, "is the date my boxes are due in San Francisco. Call on me September fifteenth and I'll talk business with you."

"Promise me you won't talk to anybody else first," pleaded Billy Allen.

"I will — provided you promise me you'll take the entire lot off my hands at the same price I am offered by your competitors for lots of ten thousand."

"Show me their written offer, and I'll meet it."

"It's a bargain," declared Pitcher. "Now leave me alone until September fifteenth, because I want to give due thanks to a very merciful Providence for the grandest crop of apricots in ten years."

SLOWLY the month dragged along. Since the day of his return from his northern trip, Rube Pitcher had not seen Queenie once. He had called her up the night of his arrival in San Francisco, only to learn that she was spending the week-end out of town, and before her return on Monday, he had taken an early train out on his two weeks' tour of the state. Upon the completion of this trip, when he again called her on the 'phone, she had left for a month's vacation in the Sierras. They had, however, corresponded, although their letters, in view of the status of their rather nebulous love-making to date, were more or less perfunctory and fairly free from endearing terms. Until his soul should be released from its burden of boxes, it had occurred to Rube that it might be just as well to permit his love affair to drift along in a state of uncertainty rather than clinch the matter with a definite proposal of marriage by mail. So he contented himself with sending Queenie flowers and books and fruit, and writing twice a week — letters that evinced a warm affection and admiration, but nothing more. Mostly he wrote about his business and his hopes and aspirations for the future. He did not have much time to devote to this correspondence, for he was hustling hard for orders with which to load up his mill and give it something to work on when the saws should be turned over for the first time.

THE vessel which was to freight his box shook south was delayed in loading by a longshoremen's strike, and it was not until the sixteenth that she was reported loading. She sailed on the nineteenth, and on the twenty-second her owners called Pitcher up. A wireless from the vessel had informed them that she would be due in San Francisco early next morning. She would proceed first to Oakland Long Wharf to discharge her deckload of shingles; then return across the bay to discharge Pitcher's box shook on a San Francisco wharf, and Pitcher was requested to call up the Chief Wharfinger's office and make arrangements for a berth for the vessel. When he did so, the vessel was assigned to the bulkhead between Howard Street Pier No. 1 and Howard No. 2; whereat Pitcher fumed, for, by reason of the boxes being discharged on an open dock, he would have to engage a watchman to guard them until they had been drayed to the cars and shipped down into the Santa Clara valley. Despite the clear weather all along or in front of the perches. They have cut their expenses, increased their profits and seldom have to fuss with roupy hens.

The fresh-air type of house has revolutionized poultry keeping. Such houses should be at least twelve feet deep, though, with the perches at the back. The common shed-roof pattern which the average man builds in his back yard is about as good as any. Made with single boarded walls and covered with roofing paper, it ought not to cost more than a dollar for each fowl to be confined in it. The renter can buy a ready-made portable house and take it along with him when he moves. No man likes to donate a hen house to his landlord.

The farmer will pay a long price to get the best blood into his cattle, while he ignores his feathered mortgage lifters. Yet breeding is as important with poultry as with horses and cows. An Englishman has come over here with a lot of White Leghorns and has walked off with most of the honors at Storrs. He knows how to breed. He has already speeded up his hens.

No one but himself knows the Englishman's formula, but there are many Americans who would like to. On general principle, the pullets which lay first in the fall and heaviest in midwinter are the birds to use as breeders, but not that season. Right there is where many amateurs make their first great mistake. They try to pick out the pullets which have laid heaviest all winter and set their eggs. What is the result? Why, the eggs hatch poorly, while the chickens are anaemic and unprofitable. Naturally enough, too, if you stop to think about the matter. A heavy laying hen has so exhausted herself by February or March that she is quite incapable of producing strong and virile chicks. Save those pullets until the second season, pen them by themselves and allow them to take their own good time about laying. Then they will give you some chicks worth while, provided they are mated with a well-bred cockerel.

JUST here come eugenics as applied to poultry. With all stock breeders great store is set by the sire, yet for years the poultry experts breeding for eggs devoted most of their attention to the female of the species. Read the reports of the Maine state station to see how badly this plan worked out. Of late the experts have revised their theories. They tell us now that as much or more depends upon the cock. To get more eggs, therefore, you use a male from a pen of extra prolific hens. He transmits the egg laying tendency to the pullets which he sires. This is the latest secret of heavy egg production, an open secret, as you see.

Yet our chanticleer has no cause to boast himself, for likewise it has been decreed that when the hatching season is over he shall be incontinently banished. The average farmer believes that the hens lay better when there are a few roosters to boss them around. Actually, they yield more eggs when the "hens only" sign is up. Some progressive egg farmers never have a male bird on the premises, which is an innovation, but made feasible by the new plan of selling day-old chicks. They simply place an order for as many chickens as they will need and rid themselves of all incubation troubles.

SCORES of inventors are devising new things to sell poultry keepers. The back-lotters are the best buyers, but occasionally the professionals get interested, especially in something which seems to economize labor. If a poultry keeper works all the time it is not because he is enamored of work. Now, the ordinary brooder will safely accommodate fifty chickens. A new kind will care for nearly a thousand. Practical breeders looked askance at it when it was first introduced; it promised too much. Now, however, they are beginning to use it and have time to go fishing. For my part, I was as skeptical as the others until I saw one of the brooders and heard the testimony of the horny handed old farmer who was using it. It is really a little stove so arranged that it deflects the heat to the backs of the chicks as they gather in a great circle around it, stretching themselves out luxuriously on the warm sand.

A difference of ten eggs a year from each hen in a back yard flock may mark the line between profit and loss. So may the time of year when the majority of the eggs produced by the hens are laid. In winter they will bring sixty cents a dozen; in summer as little as twenty-five cents. If the birds are confined, the summer feed bill will not be much less than that of winter, while the income will be more than halved. The aim, then, must be not only to get more eggs but to get them at a season when it is contrary to the plans of Nature for hens to lay. Fortunately, the laying tendency is flexible. Breeding and management bend Nature to man's will.

PULLETS to lay heavily in winter should begin before the snow flies. Of late there has been a lazy tendency to postpone hatching too late in the spring. March and early April is the proper hatching season. October is the month for the first eggs to appear. Pullet eggs laid in September are usually small. It is an imposition on a customer to ask the regular price for them. Some stores now display pullet eggs marked at reduced rates.

Pullets should be in winter quarters by the first of October. Moving them later will check the egg yield. When laying birds must be shifted from one house to another, it is well to make the change at night and to omit the evening meal. If an abundance of grain is given in the litter in the early morning, the hens will be too busy satisfying their hunger to observe the new surroundings.

Every effort should be made to keep the flock cheerful and contented. The psychology of poultry keeping is of more importance than is sometimes realized. Fright, harsh treatment and unpleasant quarters have disastrous effects on the egg yield. One Leghorn breeder declares that the passing of a stranger through his long laying house will cut down the number of eggs laid that day. Nobody gets into that house at the height of the laying season except the poultry keeper.

The birds must have exercise to be kept in normal condition. That means that they should be kept busy scratching in a litter of straw or leaves five or six inches deep for their grain ration. His satanic majesty finds plenty of work for idle hens to do — and it is n't laying eggs.

A Blunder in Eden

the girl at the desk to make the change for him, and then flung out the big doors almost angrily in his haste. Outside he took three rapid steps, and then stopped as suddenly as if some one had called his name. From within had come The song faintly, like an echo, and Lorimer, forgetting everything else, stepped into the shadow, listening. When the song was finished he did not move, but still stood in the shadow, thinking.

It was the big doors swinging outward that roused him. He stepped out of the way, and a slight figure in a large coat slipped past him to the street. She did not see him, and he watched her with confused emotion. At the curb she paused.

"She'll take a taxi to the Graystone," he said to himself, with more bitterness than he had thought possible to him.

But no taxi-cab came to a stop at her signal. Instead Lorimer saw her shiver slightly and button her coat closely about her throat, for the fog was chill. Then she turned and began walking down the street. All at once he realized that she was not going where he had expected her to go. She was going away from the direction of the Graystone!

Half an hour later the pretty hostess of a gay party in a fashionable up-town drawing room, glanced up at the French clock, and frowned.

"Where can Bobby Lorimer have gone? He was to have been here long ago."

At precisely that moment a girl, walking rapidly, turned into a street where the houses huddle together as if to give each other courage to stand up any longer. Half way down the block she let herself into one of these houses with a latchkey, climbed the stairs and entered a room at the top of the house. There was faded paper on the walls, faded carpet on the floor, and on the window sill stood a pot with a flowering hyacinth.

She closed the door carefully behind her and called "Mother!" Her voice was low, patient, with a tired note in it. A faded, listless woman came in from the adjoining room.

"Why, Ellen, what are you home so early for?"

With a weary movement, the girl threw her hat on to the table that stood in the center of the room, and answered:

"I didn't feel well, so they let me go away." The mother looked worried.

"I hope it's nothing that 'll hurt your voice."

The girl whirled on her fiercely, wildly.

"My voice!" she cried, and the words launched themselves at the woman like blows in the face. "Always my voice! I hate it! I wish I never had a voice! What good has it ever done? I tell you, I hate it—" and then, struck by her mother's look and frightened by her own vehemence, she stopped short. Never before in her life had she uncovered so much of the fire that had fed her ambition and perseverance through the long years; but tonight the coals had been stirred and the flame leaped high.

Bewildered, alarmed, her mother looked at her as if she were a stranger, and the girl, seeing the look, withdrew into herself.

"Don't mind me, Mother," she said, "I'm just sick tonight. I'll be all right tomorrow. You know I did n't mean what I said."

"Well, Ellen, I never thought, no matter how sick you got, that I 'd live to hear you say that, after all I've done for you, after all the sacrifices the family's done, savin' and scrimpin' and goin' without things to train your voice; and you know we always expected you to be singin' in grand opera by this time and here you are singin' in a restaurant, and I've never complained. Why, any other girl with your advantages and your voice, would at least have married some rich man by this time."

"I know — I know," murmured the girl dully, "any other girl——"

"Well, I never could understand it, Ellen, you 're not a bad lookin' girl, and it does seem to me that down there you 'd have chances to get acquainted with lots of nice people; if you 'd only try a little, push yourself a little, put yourself out to be nice to them, make them think you are somebody——"

"Mother!" The word was a command. "Can't you see that I'm not anybody, that a man wants a girl to be young and pretty, and laugh and do something besides sing! I 'm only a voice, — I couldn't even pretend to be like other girls!" It was a torrent of words, tense, at the breaking point, and when she stopped speaking she shivered down into her chair, her slight body convulsed with the great, hard wrenches that brought the tears. The mother stood looking at her helplessly, like a frightened child who has come near to tragedy for the first time.

A bell rang loudly, imperatively, from below, bringing both women up like an electric shock.

"I guess it 's the rent man," said the mother, flurried and embarrassed. "He was here today, but I did n't have it."

The girl began fumbling in her purse, while the mother pressed the electric button that opened the door below. Some one came up the stairs, along the hall, and there was a knock at the door. The girl opened it, her eyes still anguished and wet with tears. She did not care for the rent man, or for any one in the world, — had she not at least the right to her sorrow?

Then Lorimer spoke, and what he said and the manner of saying it were a paradox; but no one of the three so much as thought of it that way, for one of them was too astonished to think, and the other two gave no heed nor had they need of such poor things as words.

"You lied to me, and I almost believed your lies!" was what he said.

Every Car Needs a Maker

NOT only to design and build it. Not only to give it the right features, the right material, and the right workmanship, and to leave out what should not go in. But, most of all, every car needs a maker after it has been sold—after you have bought it.

After you have put your faith and money into a car, then is when it needs a maker standing behind it with the financial strength and the moral determination to make good on every promise that his advertising or his salesmen held out to you before you bought.

How Owners Suffer

When a car loses its maker, through failure or otherwise, its market value drops 50 to 90 per cent instantly. That car becomes discredited, commanding neither price nor respect. Nobody wants it, least of all the unfortunate buyer.

More than 25 makes of cars have lost their makers within the year. Thousands of owners suffered financial loss and annoyance. Guarantees became worthless. Repair parts could be secured only with difficulty, even for cash in advance. And the maker's much boasted "service" proved to be a hollow promise, with nobody at the maker's plant to express regret, much less to make good.

What's Most Important

Find out, before you buy a car, whether the maker is solvent and is likely to stay solvent. That's more important than to know the specifications of his car. The maker who is solid, who will be in business next year and the year after, is invariably a maker whose car has the substance that gives satisfaction. But the best car in the world isn't worth having if its maker is in danger of being wiped out. Just keep that in mind.

You Need This Book

Look up the maker first. Then find out about cars. We have summed up the present situation in the automobile industry in a booklet that you ought to read before you buy any car. Ask for Book No. 22: it includes car description.

The Scotchman Scored

JOHN BUTLER YEATS, who paints portraits and, incidentally, is the father of William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet, is a regular patron of a certain New York restaurant. Among the habitués of this place, he has acquired a reputation as a ráconteur.

"In my part of Ireland," he tells, "there was a noisy Scotchman whose abuse of everything Irish riled the neighbors considerably. At first, however, he refrained from bragging about Scotland, and we decided to wait until he should be guilty of that indiscretion before acting drastically.

"The chance came at last. He had been swearing at the Irish peat fires, the Irish rain and the Irish spuds, and ended up by saying that, 'Hoot mon, Scotland was verra deeferent! It was a land flowing with milk and honey.'

"Well, we went for him. Scotland, we pointed out, was known to be a barren waste inhabited by starvelings, and the Biblical quotation he had used could not have been more outrageously misapplied.

"He looked us over with his canny eye. 'Ye 're wrang,' he said, 'and I con prove it. Scotland flowed with milk, and maybe honey, all the time that I was there. I left when I was ten months auld."

A LITTLE FLYER IN BOXES

the coast, he dared not run the risk of a shipwreck in a sudden fog, so he insured his shipment for its full value.

His next move was to make a cursory investigation of the market conditions. His discoveries overwhelmed him with delight, for the factories which had taken orders for additional cannery stock were far behind on their deliveries, the canners were squirming under the enforced wait, and there was absolutely no doubt in Pitcher's mind that his little flyer in boxes was going to net him not less than five thousand dollars net, at the very least. He had a shrewd notion where he could place ten thousand boxes, so he telegraphed an offer at a price slightly higher than the market and proffering delivery immediately. The offer was promptly accepted by wire; whereupon he took down his telephone and called up Billy Allen. When Allen came to his office he handed him the telegram.

"I hate like sixty to do this, Mr. Allen," he said, and grinned wickedly, "but since I've just sold ten thousand at that price, I guess that's the market. I'll sell you the remainder of one hundred forty thousand boxes at that figure."

"I'll take them, Pitcher. Usual terms of two per cent for cash — in thirty days, or net sixty."

"Oh, I'll do better than that, Mr. Allen. I'll give you four per cent for cash in ten days, or three per cent for cash in thirty days. I cannot afford to wait sixty days for my money. It's a thirty-day sale at the latest, or the boxes go elsewhere."

"Cash in ten days after arrival of cars at destination, you thief," replied Allen, and gave him a written order for the stock.

"You really ought to pay for the cost of branding those ends, Pitcher," he continued. "You've held me up right to the last minute so you could skim the cream off the market, and now we'll have to run those ends through our own branding machine at the packing house. You'll pay for that branding, young man, or you'll never get another order from the Amalgamated Canneries while I'm purchasing agent."

"We'll see about that," Pitcher retorted, as Allen departed in high dudgeon.

REUBEN K. PITCHER was much elated. He had delivered his boxes in the very apex of the season and he was now about to reap the profit of his foresight and daring. Until Allen had given him the order he had not realized how heavily this box deal was weighing on his soul. For weeks he had not slept more than four hours nightly, for he had boxes on the brain. He had become nervous and distrait, and loss of appetite had ensued, and now that the strain was over he was aware that he was about all in. He sat at his desk the entire afternoon, a feeling of lassitude heavy on him, and at five o'clock when he closed down his desk, the reaction from the nervous tension of the past month had set in and Reuben K. went home to his boarding house absolutely fagged. He had a violent headache.

That night he was taken with severe chills, alternating with fever, and in the morning he was too ill to go to his office. So he called up his stenographer and informed her that he would not be down that day. From her he learned that the steam schooner carrying his box shook had just passed in.

"Call up the owners," he instructed the girl, "and tell them to discharge that box shook on the bulkhead between Howard No. 1 and No. 2. I'll be down tomorrow and have the stock drayed to the railroad." Then he crawled back to bed and had another chill.

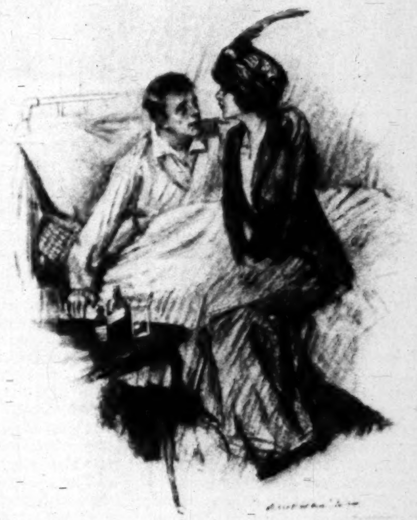
At luncheon when his landlady came upstairs with some light broth, his condition was so alarming that she insisted upon sending for her family doctor. Pitcher protested that he wasn't ill, but "just a little run down," delivered a scathing diatribe on the medical profession and announced that he would be feeling quite himself again by the following morning. In fact, he said he had to be feeling better by then. Nevertheless, she disregarded his instructions and sent for the doctor, who came, took his temperature, examined his internal economy through a stethoscope and informed him that he had a grand little case of double pneumonia.

"TO THE hospital for you, young man," he said, and stepped out into the hall to telephone for the ambulance. He had scarcely reached it and taken down the receiver, when Pitcher, wrapped in a bathrobe, stood shivering beside him.

"I've just GOT to call up my office and leave some instructions, Doc," he began, but the doctor waited for no more. He sprang at Rube Pitcher, picked him up and carried him back to bed.

"You stay there," he shouted belligerently, "if you want to live. Never mind business. That can wait."

"I think," protested the patient feebly, "that you're a horse doctor. You don't know a sick man when you see him. Listen, you big brute. This is important, and if you don't do what I tell you to do, I'll beat you out of your bill. You call up my office — Main 2341 — and tell my stenographer to call up — Hodgdon & McCurry — the draymen, and have them — dray that box shook on Howard Street bulkhead to the S. P. railroad — and consign it to — get that, Doc? — to the Amalgamated Canneries, Packing house 43 — Mindoro, Cal.——"



"You wonderful woman!" shrieked Reuben K. and grasped Queenie around the neck in his excitement

He fell back exhausted, and thereafter, for two days he did not refer to the matter again. The doctor called up Pitcher's office as directed, but the line was busy. Pitcher's stenographer was taking of his absence to gossip over with a girl friend.

Reuben K. had been making lant fight of it, with the odds against him, and just before he into delirium against which he been fighting for hours, he turned white face toward the doctor whispered:

"I bought a lot of box shook — cannery stock. Stood to make five or six thousand on it, but they discharged it and rough-piled it on Howard Street bulkhead and the rain — it's been raining on my boxes for days — and you can't wet that kiln-dried stock and sell it. The Amalgamated people won't take it — they can't afford to put out — their high-grade goods in a dirty package — they've spent millions advertising — it's like wrapping a roll of — fresh creamery butter in a newspaper — and expecting top notch prices — oh, Queenie, sweetheart — I've been sent to the cleaner's for fair."

"You dear old scout of fortune," the girl whispered, and bending over she kissed him on both eyes. "Why, you aren't ruined at all. I saved you."

"Don't try to jolly me up, Queenie. I'm through, I tell you. If I'd only had a bright girl in my office — instead of the boob I have — but you see, I was as poor as a church mouse — I couldn't pay the price for brains — and that girl couldn't understand what I was up against ——"

SHE silenced him with a love slap. "Hush, silly boy. I knew what you were up against and I attended to it ——"

"You!" Reuben K. Pitcher's eyes popped out until it was a safe bet one might have knocked them off with a stick. "You!"

"Certainly. Old J. B. Skinner came in the afternoon of the day your boxes were discharged on the wharf. He said he'd been looking at the weather map and the barometer up at the Merchant's Exchange, and that we'd have rain before nightfall. And do you know what else that miserable old man said, Rube? He said: 'That fresh young Pitcher has a lot of fine box shook discharging on Howard Street bulkhead, although the good Lord only knows how he hornswoggled the manufacturer out of it, or where he's going to get the money to pay for it. And the young fool has it on an open dock, and if it rains to-night, exit Mr. Pitcher. His boxes won't be worth kindling wood.' Well dearie, that made me so mad I resigned then and there, and when I rang you up to tell you about it, your stenographer told me you were home sick, you poor darling. Then I rang up the weather bureau and the weather man said it was going to rain cats and dogs that night, so I went down to that sail loft in Stewart Street — you know, Rube, where old Skinner always buys the sails for his vessels — and I rented a ——"

"You rented a lot of old sails and had 'em spread over my box shook!" shrieked Reuben K. Pitcher, and grasped Queenie around the neck in his excitement.

"Exactly, Reuben. And not a minute too soon. The steamer had the last of it out at six-thirty, and we got the last sail on at seven, and it commenced to rain at seven-five. But I was bound that that miserable old J. B. Skinner shouldn't have the laugh on my Reuben boy. I hate these 'I told you so' people, and I knew the rain couldn't get through that heavy canvas, and ——"

"You wonderful, wonderful woman!"

"Yes," continued Queenie calmly, "and after that I went down to your office and took charge, and as soon as it ceased raining a Mr. Billy Allen came rushing in and said if you didn't get these boxes of his shipped out, he'd cancel the order. So I called up the drayman that does Skinner's work, and as Mr. Allen had given me shipping instructions, we shipped them out as snug and dry as they came in. Then I found a memorandum of the Amalgamated's order in your desk, and I billed them out, and here's the check. It came in this morning's mail, less four per cent for cash. That's unusual, isn't it dearie — four per cent for cash?"

"Not when you have to have the cash, darling. Oh, sweetheart, sweetheart, you've saved me — you've made me want to live again — and get back into the fight. Oh, it's good — to know — that all the women — aren't dubs — like that stenographer of mine."

"I discharged her, you know," said Queenie sweetly. "I could do the work for you and I thought we might as well cut down expenses. And I didn't think she'd do, Rube."

"She wouldn't, Queenie. When you go back to the office again, dear, please go over to the Marine National and get — one of those blanks — giving a person authority to — sign checks. Then you fill it out in your own name, and rustle up a — notary public and bring him out to — the hospital and I'll sign that bank paper so you can draw checks against — my account. And pay that drayman — want to keep our credit good — and send a check to Henry Peets, at Hoquiam, Washington, for — twenty thousand on account — and wire him a nice little note — and say that as soon — as I get out of — hospital I'll send him — the balance — quick. Poor Peets! He's busted, but we'll save him yet, and I'll show him — how to make money — in boxes; he knows how to manufacture but — he's chucking his profits into the stove wood pile. And as for old J. B. Skinner — I'll get my hooks into him — yet, and when I do — I'll come away — with some of his tail feathers — see if I don't ——"

HE paused, for lack of breath and gazed at Queenie. When he had, in a measure, recovered his strength after his long speech, he grinned his old, cheerful grin, and continued:

"And — another thing, Queenie. Buy yourself a peach of a diamond solitaire — five hundred bucks, and charge it to expense, and — then get a wedding ring — oh, no, you can't do that; we have to go to the marriage license bureau — together — that'll have to wait — and delays are so dangerous. Aren't they, Queenie?"

"Never mind the solitaire, dearie," she said. "I'll be content with the wedding ring. You'll need that five hundred in your business. And by the way — that Billy Allen person deducted a hundred dollars from the invoice I sent him. He said it was up to you to pay for the branding of his boxes and you'd stung him deep enough as it was."

"Well, Queenie. I wish you'd write Billy Allen a nice note to-morrow and tell him to look at his confounded old boxes before he grabs off a hundred dollars of my hard-earned profits. Why, — dad burn that man's picture — I knew he'd have to take my boxes and — it's such a good joke on Billy — tell him I borrowed one of his brands from another factory — and ran his brand on a hundred and forty thousand boxes — before I sold 'em to him!"

THE award for the roofing of the Palace of Machinery building at the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, was made in competition with other brands from all over the United States and is a triumph of merit that Southern California should feel proud of. The building is 967 feet long by 367 feet wide and required 28 miles of 32-inch roofing.

Wherever you see a roofing advertisement remember that its words of self-praise and description came from the original advertisements of the Malthoid Roofing makers. Thirty years ago we said of our roofing all the nice things that are now said of every other roofing.

These "others" have stolen our words—imitated our methods—but they cannot duplicate the quality of Malthoid Roofing—it always was the best and always will be.

Out-of-Date System.

Dr. John Henry Gray is the head of the department of economics and political science in the University of Minnesota. On December 17, before thern section of the California ers' Association, he delivered a so full of philosophic wisdom on actual facts that his re- ought to be printed and put the hands of every person inter- in the subject of education in United States. His subject was Past and the Present," and he pointed out that in the past reaching down to yesterday our schools were still following the Greek system of centuries before the Christian era.

In the Greek system followed so generally until our own day the curriculum included little outside of what is known as "the humanities." This meant literature, mathematics, and scarcely anything else. Literature of course included philosophy, and the mathematics of the schools was more or less theoretical and very little practical.

It is clear why this should be so, and just as clear why Dr. Gray is demanding so emphatically a change in the subjects pursued in American schools. In the past, until quite recently, there was no such thing as an organized system of industries, but all the mechanical arts were carried on by the trade system under individual efforts. There was another reason. In the past until quite recently the plain people had no place in the schools. They were meant for the so-called "higher classes," and the work was chiefly to prepare men for the professions or for artistic pursuits, and in the professions one may well include statesmanship and the study of philosophy. Here is where the parting of the ways comes between the past and the present, and the diverging lines separate farther and farther as day follows day. The public schools of America are particularly institutions where the plain people receive their training. Not one in a hundred of the youth who attend the public schools is intended for an artistic or a professional career, but they have to earn their living and score their success in life in industrial pursuits. The industries of our time are organized on magnificent scales, and only those thoroughly trained to enter into the competition can hope for success.

There is another reason for these changes in the public-school system demanded by Dr. Gray. The apprentice system which once prevailed in modern industries carried on through the trade system and largely by individual effort has suffered annihilation at the hands of two influences. Among the most largely-organized industrial systems of the day looms up trades-unionism, and this system cuts down the possibility of apprenticeship to such small limits that it will not provide a sufficient number of trained artisans to carry on the work in our rapidly-expanding industries. Then these industries, organized on such an enormous scale, call for ready-trained operatives and make no place because of press of time for apprentices.

It is strange in a country so marked by the greatness of its industrial system, so marked by the general intelligence of its people and by their freedom from the restraint of traditions, we should lag so far behind other countries in this necessary educational reform. What this reform would mean would be the confining of the primary schools to the elementary subjects of education, including those popularly known as "the three R's," supplemented by a little geography, a little physiology and less history. Then at about the age of 13, industrial subjects would be taken up, segregating the pupils according to taste and ability, and really constituting a series of apprentice schools where the plain American boy and girl might learn a trade. Of course this system would in no way annihilate the humanities, now known as cultural studies. The pupils who have a taste in that way and show ability in these branches of education would find their proper place under the new system, and concentrating upon them would become more proficient than under our present system.

New Tariff and the Farmer.

Be not deceived, fellow-citizens, the new tariff is on trial and has not been acquitted of injuriousness to American interests yet, whether the injury is intentional or unintentional.

The other day the low-tariff people made a great outcry because corn from Argentina had been laid down in American ports at 10 cents per bushel less than the current rates for domestic-grown corn.

In the first place, the Argentina corn is not so good as that of Iowa, Kansas or Illinois, and in the second place the lay-down price at import points is not the consumption price in the interior of the country. The low-tariff papers figured out a saving of 13 cents per capita on this lower rate for corn.

If the average family of four does save 13 cents per head, but little more than half a dollar a year, that is not a large item in American life.

But that is not all. If the market drops 10 cents a bushel, it means a loss of $225,000,000 to the farmers of America.

Iowa was one of the States where Republicans went crazy crying for lower tariffs, and it is the greatest corn State in America. Kansas followed in order, with its insurgent politics, and its farmers stand to lose by this reduction in the market price of corn. Then comes Illinois, and so on all through the Central West, where the farmers are likely to rub the cobwebs out of their eyes and go back to Republicanism, with its protection of American industries.

Oldest Drama Extant.

A dispatch from Madison, Wis., about two weeks ago informed readers of The Times that the students in the State University were about to stage the book of Job. Prof. Kallen of the university, who had the staging in hand, remarked that he had not dramatized the work, "but simply restored it to the form in which it was originally written for the ancient Hebrews."

Then the reporter who sent the information out to the world added the remark: "This is different from the opinion of most of the big men in literature today."

The "big men in literature today" may differ from the university man of Madison, but he has with him the biggest literary men of the past. Among these is Thomas Carlyle, who holds the book of Job is the oldest specimen of drama extant. It would be impossible to tell where the book originated, but it is far older than Moses, and the writer knew not only human nature, but the geographical features of the whole world as known in Moses' time and a good deal later.

How About Your Resolutions?

have again made some reso- for a new year. What do amount to and what good will do! That depends on you. felt very virtuous when you them; convinced yourself you were doing penance for and meanness, your blun- and failures during the past really had a little fit of repentance with the pass- the old year. That ought to some good of itself. You something of the kind to you to your senses once in a squandered a large part of last year, in spite of your of a year ago. And you did make an effort to do it was because you were to do so, or merely for personal gratification. You been a spendthrift—and you it—not only of time but of money. You have been selfish and indifferent to the comfort of others. Altruism is a word of which you never knew the meaning. The definition in the dictionary would have been of no use to you. It takes something more than cold type to impart the meaning of that word. Altruism requires sunshine and warmth for its development. It will not grow in the cold, sordid soil of selfishness.

If the latest death in the family of the years has impressed you as it ought you will be a better man this year. As said before, it all depends on you whether you are to profit by the occasion or not. You may have adopted the best kind of resolutions, but if you proceed to forget them as you did last year, it would have been better for you never to have made them. Better never make a promise than to make one and break it. When you say you will do a thing and don't do it you make yourself a liar; that's breaking a promise. A resolution involves a promise and a decision to do or not to do something. When you make a resolution and don't keep it you show yourself to be not only a liar but an imbecile. You can't be trusted and you have no sand.

It takes sand as well as good intentions to make New Year resolutions worth anything. Old Father Time is gray and weazened, but he has sand; he does not lose his gait. In fact, his gait increases every year. He whirls us along with this little terrestrial ball faster and faster. He has the mile-a-minute automobiles, motorcycles and flying machines, the fastest ocean liners and lightning express trains and the rest of the human creations which we think are able to "go some," all left in the dust on the trail behind him.

If you are going to make anything of yourself you will have to shift your old car into the high gear and put your foot down on the accelerator, resolutions or no resolutions. Old Daddy Time is not going to stop and wait for you—not a single second. He is going to keep his place at the head of the procession. It's a case of "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost."

The resolutions will serve as a road map, such as the Automobile Club of Southern California supplies to its members, but they won't be of any use to you if you forget or neglect to look at them, and go ahead blindly following your old instincts and habits. Maps and road signs are to be read and their directions observed. Otherwise they would be more useful for fuel. Neglect to observe them and before long, but after it is too late to get back before dark, you will find yourself away off the road in the desert—and your gasoline all gone. Then you will discover that the desert has more sand than you, and you will become another contribution to the countless "wrecks of time."

California Mineral Output.

THE Golden State has not lost its riches any more than its people have lost their cunning. The total mineral output of California for 1913 over-runs that of the previous year by about $4,000,000, reaching in round numbers a total of $95,000,000. Petroleum holds first place, with 93,500,000 gallons, worth $43,500,000. Gold comes second, with a yield of $20,000,000. In percentages the cement product outstrips the others, with $8,000,000, an increase of 25 per cent. over the previous year.

The Olive Industry.

LATEST statistics at hand show an investment of about $7,000,000 in olive growing in Southern California, and the annual crop reaches a money value of $2,250,000. There are more than 20,000 persons who gain a livelihood in this industry. They packed last year 120,000 cases, and the current price for pickling olives is $75 a ton on the trees. The average income to the grower is put at $40 an acre.

Building in Southwest.

CAREFUL estimates put the amount of money invested in new building in Southern California during 1913 at $75,000,000. Of this sum there is credited to Los Angeles $31,500,000, and to other cities from which definite figures are receivable $20,000,000 worth of construction is reported. The cities from which definite reports are received running over $1,000,000 are: San Diego, with, in round numbers, $6,800,000; Long Beach, $4,000,000; Pasadena, $2,720,000; Santa Monica, $1,050,000. Running from at least half a million to short of a million are Venice, with, in round numbers, $850,000; Santa Ana with $680,000; and Glendale with $635,000.

City Building Record.

AT THE opening of the last decade of the last century the building record in Los Angeles city showed the issuing of 878 permits at a cost of $1,890,005. In 1895 the record had risen to 2462 permits, and the money invested to $4,930,473. Then came a falling off, the figures running under $3,000,000 a year, until the opening of the current century, which showed for 1901, 2730 permits, costing $4,381,855. In the year following the number of permits nearly doubled, and the cost more than doubled. For the two following years the permits ran to 7000 each, or nearly that, and the cost was over $13,000,000 each. With the year 1905 the permits jumped to 9543 and the cost to $15,482,067. The next year showed a falling off in the permits, but the cost ran to over $18,000,000. Then followed three lean years, beginning with the panic one of 1907, when the record went back five years or more. But in 1910 the permits reached 10,738, and the cost $21,684,100. Nineteen hundred and eleven followed with a large increase, showing permits issued to the number of 12,408, and a cost of $23,004,185. The year 1912 showed a tremendous increase, with 16,453 permits and a cost of $31,366,357. At the beginning of 1913 the "experts" all prophesied great things for the year. These great expectations were fulfilled until about the last quarter of the year, during which there has been a remarkable falling off in business. But in spite of this the year will stand with a high record to date, permits numbering, in round numbers, 16,500, and the cost $31,500,000.

California's Mountains.

THINGS are wonderful principally by comparison. There are sixty or more lofty mountains in California rising more than 13,000 feet above sea level which are not considered sufficiently noteworthy among all the surrounding wealth of mountain scenery to have even received names, according to the United States Geological Survey. Any one of these mountain peaks, if situated in the eastern part of the United States, would of course be visited by millions of people. But California has seventy additional mountain peaks more than 13,000 feet high which have been named, or 130 in all, as well as a dozen rising above 14,000 feet.

We Like Walnuts.

THERE is perhaps nothing risked in making the statement that California is the largest producer of Madeira nuts, usually called English walnuts, in the world. Whatever may be the correct statement as to production, the people of the United States lead all nations in the consuming of this fruit, last year making a record of 60,000,000 pounds. This, according to the experts who deal in statistics, exceeds the entire production of the world. There are but few parts of the world where the nut flourishes well enough to make it a commercial proposition. These regions are in France along the Rhone, in Italy around Naples, and in China in portions of Manchuria, and Southern California, the largest producer of all. According to the statisticians who study food values, this nut is one of the most nutritious foods known to the human race, a small handful being said to contain more nutrition than a pound of the best beef.

Great Rice Growing.

RICE promises to become a staple crop in California. Its cultivation was begun in the damp lands along the Sacramento by Japanese farmers a few years ago, and proved very successful. Now Americans are taking up the industry, and it has extended to Kern county in the San Joaquin Valley, where in the old bed of the Tulare Lake one company is about to plant 1000 acres. A beginning was made here a few years ago and proved successful. Those engaged in this venture say that in their opinion Kern county will soon furnish enough rice to meet all the demand of Southern California. It is significant that the promoters of this industry are the Crown Columbia Paper Company. Thus one industry begets another, for if rice culture results favorably, the manufacture of rice paper may be looked upon as a foregone conclusion.

Beautiful Southland Homes.

THE beauty of the homes in Southern California, particularly in Los Angeles and its suburbs, is a subject of never-failing interest to permanent residents as well as to newcomers. It is a common thing to read records like the following: Gen. C. M. Spitzer, a banker from Toledo, O., has purchased a lot on the corner of Andrews boulevard and Third street, running 300 feet on the first thoroughfare and 230 on the other, making about an acre and three-quarters of ground, for $45,000, with the intention of constructing a magnificent mansion on the new purchase. The whole neighborhood is full of fine houses with large grounds beautifully adorned.

Using Irregular Surfaces.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA in its landscapes is anything but "flat, stale and unprofitable." It is neither one nor the other. But the people who lay out towns, cities and tracts often combine all three undesirable qualities. In many parts of Southern California towns and cities the streets should have followed the contour of the natural surface instead of spending huge sums of money in reducing the hills and filling the valleys. This process, however necessary in the business center, is detrimental rather than beneficial in residence districts. Out on the corner of Hoover and Vendome streets the owner of an irregular lot 275 feet on Hoover by 250 on Vendome, with a flat-iron shape and very broken contour, has been puzzled as to how to utilize his property. He has very sensibly decided to let the ground stand in its natural form and improve it with a number of flat buildings perched along the sides of the incline. In this way he will have an enchanting outlook from all his flats, perfect drainage, and a great many other desirable features.

Alaska Gold Deposits.

THE geology and mineral resources of a part of the Yukon-Tanana region, Alaska, including the gold placers of Rampart and Hot Springs, are described in a report just issued by the United States Geological Survey as Bulletin 535, by Henry M. Eakin.

Placer gold was discovered in the Rampart district probably as early as 1893, and since 1896 systematic mining has been carried on, the first claim worked being on Little Minook Creek. Later, as the area being prospected increased, placers were located and mines developed on the tributaries of Baker Creek, and still later on Sullivan Creek and neighboring streams tributary to Patterson Creek.

Prospecting on the tributaries of the Yukon and Tanana west of the productive area has revealed the presence of gold in a number of localities. Although much ground is held on some of these streams, especially in the Gold Hill district, the presence of gold in commercial quantities has not been demonstrated. In the Gold Hill district this may be due in great part to the facts that very little besides annual assessment work is being done and that what is done is largely futile.

The scene of greatest activity in mining in the Rampart and Hot Springs districts has shifted to the south as successive discoveries have been made. The Rampart district yielded its greatest output in 1906 and 1907. The placers along the north margin of Baker Flats reached their maximum production about the same time, but have not fallen off so rapidly as the Rampart district. The Patterson Creek locality has steadily increased its production since the [illegible] were begun, the season of 1911 recording the largest output in its history.

The stream gravels have furnished the greater part of the gold output of the Rampart and Hot Springs districts.

Protected by Bees.

[New York Sun:] Ralph Dawson lives alone in a hut fifteen miles northwest of Palisade, Neb. His nearest neighbor is four miles away. He makes a living by raising garden truck and chickens; he also keeps bees.

Two men, apparently tramps, approached Dawson's little home in a deep draw near the French River. Dawson is suspicious of all visitors and refused to open his door. The men withdrew, but returned in a short time with a heavy piece of timber with which they tried to batter down the entrance.

The honey bees became excited and began to sting the tramps. Just as the door was about to give way the bees became more vigorous and the intruders were forced to cease beating down the door and protect themselves.

But the fighting bees were not to be driven off and the tramps began a retreat. One of them ran to the French River and escaped the attacks by plunging into the water. He swam to the opposite bank and disappeared. The other ran in an opposite direction with hundreds of bees after him. Dawson says both men were screaming at the top of their voices as they disappeared. They did not return.

Dawson has left the bees an extra large amount of the honey for the winter because of their valor. He has purchased a revolver and a shotgun and will reinforce the bees if unwelcome visitors approach his hut again.

Mules Still Needed

[New York Sun:] The mule always will be a necessity in the army despite improvements in motor trucks, according to army quartermasters, who are having their troubles in an effort to find a sufficient number of suitable horses for the military establishment.

The quartermasters say that the automobile has finally had its influence on the horse, and there is a distinct falling off in production. If a sudden emergency should arise it would be impossible to supply the army up to war strength with high grade mounts. A more liberal appropriation by Congress would enable army quartermasters to purchase enough animals to supply the military at peace strength.

The motor truck also is affecting the supply of draught animals, but that has to do mostly with the mules, so far as the army is concerned. However, the mule always will be a necessity for service with troops in the field. Army motor trucks will be useful for supplying the column in the rear.

In fact, neither of the or Moqui reservations, either of which singly is larger than some of the Eastern States, even before they were extended to their present dimensions and abandoned permanently to these tribes, contained an important settlement of whites. The nearest and only approach to white occupation of the region was the small Mormon colony at Tuba, ninety miles north of Flagstaff, where by means of irrigation a few families contrived to eke out a precarious livelihood. Before the days of the railroads Tuba was the only permanent settlement along the old wagon trail between Utah and the Mormon colonies at Snowflake, St. Johns and the White Mountain country of eastern Arizona. On account of friction with the Navajos the Tuba settlers a few years ago sold their lands to the United States Indian Service, which has utilized the site for an Indian school.

From Tuba to the northeast corner of the State lies a veritably untrodden waste, the least-known portion of the United States. There is scarcely a road or sign of white habitation in its entire breadth of 150 miles. It is the very holy of holies of the Painted Desert, given over to a few wandering Navajos and Pas-Utes, as fantastic in their strange garb as ever an Arab on his native heath.

To the north and east as far as the eye can reach and then melting away in the purple haze of the distance extends a riot of color intensified under a burning sun into endless streamers of every tint and hue known to the palette. And there, too, is the riot of form, great fractured mountains and mesas chiseled into infinitely varied designs across which the endless belts of color rise and fall in pleasing undulations. And it is silent—absolutely voiceless. The very air "a solemn stillness holds"—a stillness portentous and saturnine. Avoided by and unknown to the whites it has all the charm of the primitive. Hidden here and there in its abysmal canyons and riven hills stands a lone hogan—the winter home of an outcast Navajo family. In crannies and caves hollowed out of the sheer walls of cliffs and canyons at remote intervals are the quaint homes of the old cliff dwellers, long since deserted and fallen to decay. Otherwise, it is void of the evidences of human occupation.

A few years ago one of the most important groups of prehistoric ruins in the Southwest was discovered in this region. Its existence had often been suggested in the traditional tales of the Moquis, but they were loath to reveal its whereabouts, probably for the reason that it was the ancestral abode of some of the living clans of the tribe, who held it in sacred veneration, their priests or shamans returning there on certain occasions to worship at the old shrines of their fathers, as is the wont of the pueblo stocks. Aside from preliminary examinations made by Edgar L. Hewett of the School of American Archaeology, and by Dr. F. W. Fewkes of the Smithsonian Institution, these ruins have never been scientifically investigated. So important are they regarded from a scientific standpoint that they have been set aside as the Navajo National Monument.

Four or five years ago a special agent of the United States Department of the Interior made a trip into this untrodden part of the State in search of renegade Indians reported to be starving. Instead of finding the distressing conditions expected, he succeeded in promptly getting lost. After wandering aimlessly about for a few days he finally found his way out, encountering in his peregrinations Pah-Ute and Navajo women and children, who in his opinion had never before seen a white man.

That whole portion of the State north of the Moqui villages and of Chin Lee is in fact but little known. Outside of the few government Indian schools, trading posts and missions, it is doubtful if the region harbors a single white person. It is a rich field for the ethnologist and archaeologist, and parts of it are said to abound in forest and other natural resources.

As little known perhaps to the people of the State and yet fully as interesting is that part of Arizona lying between the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and the Arizona-Utah boundary line, an area of more than 8500 square miles, equaling in size the State of New Jersey and forming parts of two counties, Mohave and Coconino, Kanab Creek serving as the line between the two. To reach this part of the State from either Kingman or Flagstaff, the county seats respectively of Mohave and Coconino counties, is a difficult and dangerous undertaking, necessitating a long drive overland and requiring as much or more time than a trip from the same points to New York City by rail. From its entrance into Arizona from Utah on the north to the point where it crosses the 114th meridian, whence in its southward course it forms the Arizona-Nevada boundary line, a distance of nearly 300 miles, the Colorado River with its magnificent series of canyons has but two practical crossing-places over which the northwest corner of the State can be reached from the south, one Lee's Ferry upstream a short way from the entrance to Marble Canyon, the other Pierce's Ferry at the mouth of the Grand Canyon near the Arizona-Nevada line.

From Flagstaff to Lee's Ferry—named after John D. Lee, who concealed himself there after the Mountain Meadow massacre, of which he was one of the instigators and for which he was finally executed—it is 150 miles by the old wagon road, and from Lee's Ferry to Fredonia, the only important settlement in the Coconino county portion of "the strip," it is perhaps 100 miles more, this latter part being by way of the Vermillion Cliffs, the Pariah Plateau, House Rock Valley, the Buckskin Mountains, the ancestral home of the Pah-Utes, thence into Utah and finally back into Arizona to the little Mormon settlement of 150 people on Kanab Creek, Fredonia, the farthest and most difficult of access from its county seat of any village perhaps in the United States.

During President Roosevelt's administration "the strip" was made, by executive proclamation, a national game preserve, all classes of wild animals native to the region not yet extinct being found there in great abundance. It contains further two forest reserves, the Kaibab and the Dixie, and a part of one Indian reservation, the Kaibab, given over to the Pah-Utes. Parts of

And when the rugged oak tree bends before the driving storm.
I love you when your cloudless skies spread comfort o'er the plain,
And when the storm-chased clouds pour down their torrent floods amain.
I love you when the sun comes up o'er earth's high eastern wall,
And when at night he sinks to rest, a fire-

I love your laughing rivulets
Where nature all her beauty sets,
Your every leafy flower-decked nook
By every babbling rock-bound brook,
Where something sweet from every sod
Blooms bright as Aaron's magic rod.

I love you, California, in sunshine and in shade.
I love you with devotion more than man e'er loved a maid,
The league-long rollers of your seas of heavenly sapphire-blue,
Your far-flung mountains' towering heights
in tints of royal hue,
The golden glow of mustard spread o'er hillside, plain and dell,
The goldenrod that crowns your streams that through your valleys swell.

Anemones in spring days blow
And roses rivaling the snow,
And poppies like a butterfly
O'er many a league of landscape life;
Thus rainbow California smiles
Like sorceress spreading magic wiles.

I love you, California, where wheat fields'

Spread far and wide o'er hill and plain. I love you when the fold
With tinkling bells at eventide lulls like the peace of God—
The peace once brought to our dark world
by Jesse's glorious Rod.
I love you, California, where deserts lonely

Their glistening sands beneath our feet and bright stars overhead.

O wondrous land of the Far West,
Of all best lands the very best,
Where following seasons come and go,
Where men may reap e'en as they sow,
In confidence and peace. I say
Fruit follows toil as day does day.

O my loved California, the richness of your soils
Assures their fruit abundantly to every man who toils;
No plowman turns your sod in vain on up-
land, plain or vale;
In all the good land of the West the harvest must prevail.
He sows in hope to reap in joy, as sure as day is day,
As in the garden of the Lord, as the old prophets say

If Paradise was half as rich—
They laud that garden overmuch
Lost by old Adam's greed—
Then Adam's fault was great indeed.
For California thee to buy
Would cost at least an apple pie.

I love you, California, with love as death is strong,
The glories spread o'er many a page in story and in song.
Poet and bard thy praises sing, prophets and priests relate
Heroic deeds wrought by the sons of thee, loved Golden State.
Thy sunbeams make the blood run red and pulses faster beat,
And all the blessings from the skies beneath thy bright suns meet.

Round Zion goodly hills may stand,
And in that ancient promised land
The milk and honey flowed apace
For God's elected favored race;
But Golden State, God cast thy lot
In full as rich and happy a spot.

Unto thy hills I lift my eyes, my well-beloved State.
I love thee from thy snow-capped peaks unto thy Golden Gate,
Thy rills and purling brooks are dear unto my mind and heart,

THE LANCER

I ALWAYS take a consuming interest in the annual Reunion des Gastronomes. This is a band of epicurean brothers who spend the rest of the year sampling the possibilities of the various gastronomic delights offered by the great hotels and their greater chefs in order that they may select the one which is to be honored with their annual function. Once a year this exclusive society meets together in some part of Europe to eat a dinner which is the quintessential essence of what a dinner should be. Every last detail is the most exquisite of its kind and the very zenith, the latest possible achievement in the art of cookery is offered for the delectation of the experienced palate.

Last year Paris proved to be the mecca of the epicurean but this year it was in London that the greatest chef was to be found. The dinner took place just before Christmas and its menu was duly chronicled that lesser gourmands might marvel—and envy.

Aristocratic Stomachs.

ONE must respect the Reunion des Gastronomes, inasmuch as they have succeeded in refining the revolting process of eating. The average banquet, and particularly the domestic Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, are really a disgusting exhibition. Fancy a collection of decent, civilized people sitting down with the deliberate intention of gorging their fill, overloading their stomachs, shoveling down food and liquid—and, forsooth, calling it pleasure!

An idealist of my acquaintance recently assured me that the reason he had never married was that once he had seen his divinity eat—and these divinities have a way of eating with disgusting zest—it robbed her of the last vestige of romance. Eating, he said, was a thing that should be done in private, like cleaning one's teeth.

But then, of course, he had never been to a gastronomes banquet. These men are no gluttons. The color of the flowers, the tint of the wall paper, the quality of the linen, china and silver, the ventilation of the room, and the form and quality of the sounds that must intrude upon their ears are quite as important factors to the epicureans as the cookery. And their standards demand quality, not quantity. Your epicurean never over-eats himself, nor drinks too much, for that matter. He has, in fact, raised the vulgarity of eating to among the arts and robbed it of its indiscriminate gluttony, its revolting animalism.

If we will, we can all be gastronomes. One can be a gastronome on bread and milk, by insuring that the bread and the milk and the dish and spoon with which it is served are all of superfine quality, that our own person is clean and dainty, that a flower to suit our mood is within range of our eye.

The Concomitants.

YOUR genuine epicurean will assure you that one of the most important factors for the subtle enjoyment of good wine is clean hands. If the hands are washed immediately before drinking, with a soap which exhales a particular scent, the wine is immediately enhanced in taste and quality. As one raises the glass to the mouth the subtleties of the perfume mingle with the wine. The sense of smell plays so large a part in the sense of taste that no dish is ever served to the gastronomes in which this has not been taken into consideration.

Then comes the importance of appearance. No epicurean would ever allow the entire bird, or the revolting leg of meat, or the whole fish to appear before the diner. If we must eat live stock the fact should be disguised as far as possible. And for the rest, small delicate portions are served with as much regard for artistic appearance as for flavor.

In short, the gastronome must have to be tempted to eat at all and then the process becomes refined and poetic. Yet these men are annually ridiculed by the coarse journalistic mind which regards itself as less gluttonous because it is content to eat in an evil-smelling restaurant with raucous sounds designate as music marring the restfulness of the night.

After all, eating is one of those things which all of us must do during our tenure here on earth. We are always busy perfecting the manner in which other things are done, always improving on the old ways, always refining the various processes by which we must live. Our modern method of cleaning our teeth, our modern soaps, our modern baths, our modern table implements—all these things are a great improvement on the methods of our ancestors. Why, therefore, should we not endeavor to raise the standards, improve the method of eating? It would appear that the gastronomes have set themselves to elevate the most important branch of living.

Stomachic Ineptitudes.

ALL the same, the most despicable thing on earth is a weak stomach. I have no great admiration for the Englishman's head but his stomach commands respect all the time. It is perfectly amazing what the Englishman can eat with impunity. And the man who is master of his stomach instead of allowing his stomach to run him, as is the case with so many Americans, is a person to be treated with honor.

I recently traveled to and from Europe on English boats and the meal schedule impressed me tremendously. The average healthy Englishman—there were dozens of him on board—commences the day with an early cup of tea and a slice of bread and butter taken into his cabin at 7 a.m. by a spruce little stewardess. Breakfast at 8:30 a.m., which starts with fruit and proceeds via porridge, fish, ham and eggs, sausages and potatoes and coffee to toast and marmalade. At 10 a.m. they bring beef tea and crackers on deck, just to stave off the gnawing pangs of hunger until lunch time, which is 1 p.m. That is a ten-course affair. At 4 p.m. we have afternoon tea cluding bread and butter and real meal of the day is, of course, which is a fourteen-course cludes everything. Then, if one late enough, the steward gests hot chocolate and buns just to keep one going until early cup of tea.

Now it must be admitted that ach that comes scatheless through that kind, with the ship lurching humorously on the frisky waves particular brand of oily, that one associates with some stomach. It is a rare American ach indeed, that can sail the ordeal. I did my best for my country and appeared at every abashed. But I had to cut out tea and the late chocolate and mediate beef tea, wherefore of mine was seriously concerned health. Still, I regard myself man now. And to have whole-fidence in one's stomach is to tered a most important branch of
I repeat, there is nothing so a weak stomach.

He felt sure the people to see it if he only had the right if he did not have the right thing not matter much where it was "The play is the thing," and the play story, and the Mission Play has greatest stories that theater ever heard. It is a true story evidences of reality supply it with potency, and when John McGroarty the story into a pageant-drama of success, but as Father Junipero had journeyed from San Gabriel mission Dolores in the days should the reincarnated Serra the pathway of the old fathers, and that is one reason why the "Mission Play" is now going on its journey. As the Mission of Our Lady of the Angels came to Los Angeles, so the Mission Play comes to this city.

Again, there are many who cannot secure the additional price of a round-trip ticket from Los Angeles to San Gabriel; neither can they, after their day's labor is over, take the time for two car rides and reach an out-of-town point to hear the wonderful story that every Californian should be acquainted with.

When such people of our city as John F. Francis, Superintendent of City Schools; Bishop Conaty of the Catholic diocese, Mrs. C. Modini-Wood, the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, Dr. Brougher of the Temple Baptist Church, Bishop Johnson, Stoddard Jess, the Rabbi Hecht, and hundreds of others write requests and indorsements to hear the "Mission Play" in Los Angeles, it is time that both management and author should heed the call, and so for a limited period from the first of January, with the Mission bells ringing in the New Year, until the night of the 17th of January, excepting Sundays, the Mission pageant-play will be heard here.

When one reflects that here is a play without a villain or a heroine; when the hero, if he can be so called, is the reverend figure of Father Junipero Serra, when he faced the Spanish cruelty and the Indian ignorance and fought his battles with only love and reverence, patience and the cross, one wonders at the success of this play. It is the American "Passion Play," the American Oberammergau; it might even be called, in its poetry and beauty, the American "Parsifal." It is not only a play for San Francisco or Los Angeles, it is a play for America. Amid the turmoil of great cities, where the strife of the markets is most incessant; in sordid manufacturing towns, where tired men and women live out their lives beneath skies that seem a million miles away from California's of heavenly blue, this "Mission Play" should be performed, and they should know what is the sweetness and the glory of the Golden State. Some day they will come to see it; then in the morning they will say, "Never a fairer day dawned upon the earth," and in the evening they will see a world transfigured in the light of setting suns. Then this fact will break in surprise and gladness on their souls.

The "Mission Play" is steeped in poetry; it is not only its phrases, "sweet vale," "sunkissed hills," "sunset wave" and the like, that touch your inmost soul, simply, naturally, sincerely, without attitudinizing or bombast; it is the feeling which runs through it all. It is the spirit which possesses it. This is romance. It is such romance as to many of us has seemed all our lives, before we came to California, to belong to an unreal world; a world of imagination and dreams; at most a world centuries dead and gone, which can never come to life again; but it is all real, and it is here. Romance is in the air we breathe, for this is California, and the Mission Play is California.

What matters it if the Christmas Century has many pages written by that greatest of modern writers on California, Henry Van Dyke, and illustrated in the Century's most artistic manner? What matters it if the London Graphic and the London News devoted two pages to it, or the Theater Magazine, giving not only space to reading matter, but page cuts as well; that the Paris Figaro likewise treated it in a generous manner and the magazines of St. Petersburg, Vienna, Madrid, Berlin and Florence vied with one another in telling the story to their interested readers? It still remained the story of romance, of history, of religion, whose monuments still stand at each point where they were built, mute evidences of early California greatness which the modern church, school and family hearth are still keeping alive; but best of all and most delightfully told is the story of their birth, their rise to greatness, their eminence and their decline by Mr. McGroarty's "Mission Play." This is not some foreign land of which we have had to read in books, this land of the palm and the pine, with its Spanish names and Italian air and Latin romance and Greek delight in beauty. It is America, and it is all our own. California is one of the stars on our flag; its growing greatness is our strength. The gold in its mountains and rivers is our wealth; its sinewy manhood and beautiful enfranchised womanhood are as red blood in the veins of the American Union. Its power today, its promise of tomorrow, and the pride and patriotism of its people are the imperishable possession of the American citizens wheresoever born, and only to hear Father Junipero Serra—or George Osbourne for him—speak the word "California" in the "Mission Play' 'is a benediction.

Down by the Sea.

It is fun to be here when the tide comes in
With a rush, and a roar, and a terrible din;
It is fun to jump through the biggest billow
And lie at rest on a foamy pillow,
And to float on the top of the sea.

It is fun to be here when the tide goes out
What fun it is to wander about,
And hunt for stones with a lucky ring,
And delicate seaweed, and everything

THE SOUTH AMERICAN INDIAN—NEW CITIES WHICH ARE GROWING FASTER THAN ANY IN THE UNITED STATES—MIGHTY NATURAL WONDERS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KINGSTON (Jamaica.)—I have stopped off at Kingston, on the Island of Jamaica, on my way to South America. I am now in the center of the Caribbean Sea. Two days later I shall be at Panama, and within a month I shall be amid the volcanoes and snows on the top of the Andes. I am just starting out on a tour of 25,000 miles through our great sister continent, to write a series of letters for The Times. I expect to visit the principal countries of South America, going down the west coast from Panama to Patagonia, traveling for months in the Andes, investigating the possibilities of the South America desert, and writing of all the countries which face the Pacific. Later in the year I shall go around through the Strait of Magellan, or over the mountains to the great republics which lie on their eastern slopes, traversing the mighty plains and traveling up and down the principal rivers.

During this journey I shall describe the countries as they are today, and the mighty changes now going on in their civilization and industrial development. I expect to travel over all the new railroads, to describe the new factories and mills, to go down into the mines, and to show the wonderful increase and the enormous possibilities of South American trade.

The Continent of the Future.

The new South America! The words make my blood tingle when I think of its future. South America is the great undeveloped world of the nineteenth century. It is the treasure vault of the universe and the mighty coming bread basket of the human race. Argentina alone could supply enough wheat to feed all mankind. The plateaus of Bolivia and Brazil added to Uruguay and the Argentine may in the future be our chief sources of meats, and the minerals of the Andes—silver, gold, copper, and tin—are practically inexhaustible. As to cultivable land, South America far surpasses our own great continent which lies at the north. North America has the more square miles, but a vast part of it is all snow and ice. South America is good all the way through from Caracas in Venezuela to Punta Arenas on the Strait of Magellan. The distance is 4600 miles, or as far as from San Francisco to Japan. The country is flat from east to west. At its greatest breadth it is 500 miles wider than the United States from Boston to San Francisco, and the most of it consists of mighty plains so fertile that they rival the valleys of the Nile or the Ganges in their potential possibilities.

Some Big Things in South America.

We are accustomed to boast that we have the greatest country on earth. North America seems about the only big thing on our hemisphere and the United States, in our opinion, stands out as prominently there as the boil on one's nose. We have no conception of the immensity of the vast continent which lies at the south, nor of the mighty countries which are there in the making. The man on the street thinks of Brazil only as a far-off locality, of minor extent, from where comes the coffee he drinks of a morning and the rubber tire which eases his motor car ride to his business. The truth is Brazil is so big that it could cover the whole of the United States proper as with a blanket and have good lands left over equal to ten States the size of Maine to tuck in around the edges. Little Ecuador is twice as big as Illinois, Peru is ten times the size of Missouri, and the low shoestring of Chile if laid out in one block would more than equal seven States as big as Ohio, Virginia or Kentucky. Argentina has one-third as much land as the United States, and nearly every foot of it will raise grass, grain or meat. Bolivia is ten times as big as the whole of New England, and Colombia is bigger than France or the Spanish peninsula.

The most of these countries are white men's countries. Even those which lie in the tropics have vast tracts of land so high above the sea that their climate is delightful all the year round. The whole of central and eastern Brazil is one vast plateau, and the southern part of that country is noted for cattle and grain. It is so popular with the Germans that they have settled there by the hundreds of thousands. The country has become known as West Deutschland, and it has German cities and towns, while regular steamers from Germany call at the ports.

You might think that the white man could not live as far down as the Strait of Magellan. That strait is a thousand miles farther south than Cape Town, in Africa. It is away down on the globe, below Australia and New Zealand, and nevertheless its climate is so mild that cattle and sheep can feed out of doors there all the year round. The great Island of Terra del Fuego is now devoted to sheep, and the whole country about is a summer resort compared with the lands of central Alaska. As to that part of South America, I speak from personal experience. I have been at the Strait of Magellan in the heart of midwinter, and have tramped around in the mud, the weather being so warm that there was no frost in the ground. I do not mean to say that this is so all the time, but the winters are mild.

Filling Uncle Sam's Bread Basket.

Speaking of the sheep at the strait brings us to the investigations I hope to make as to whether South America cannot cut down the cost of our legs of mutton and our tenderloin roasts. There is no doubt that frozen meats can be shipped from there to our country and be served just as fresh as though they came from the farm. I have seen them loading ships with frozen mutton in New Zealand for London. The distance between the two countries is far greater than that between New York and South American ports. Nevertheless, the meat sells readily in the markets of Europe, and the same is true of the beef which goes to London from the Argentine pampas. There is no reason why the vast sheep and cattle ranches of southern South America should not aid in the supply of our American markets and still less reason why we should not get cattle from the selvas of Venezuela and Colombia. I am told that Bolivia has so many wild cattle that beeves sell in parts of the plateau for $2 or $3 a piece, and that some of the cattle are killed for their hides and the meat thrown away.

Paraguay has fine pasture lands, which are now sold by the square league and some of which are being exploited by American capital, and the same is true of interior Brazil.

The bread possibilities of South America are almost equal to those of the meats. Argentina has potential wheat lands as great as those of the United States and Canada combined, and it now exports thousands of tons of grain every year to the countries of Europe. Uruguay is shipping grain, southern Brazil raises wheat and Chile has vast estancias devoted to the cereals. There is probably a great future for the highlands of the Andes as to the varieties of such products, and our cultural Department has sent down to investigate what can be done. I am also going into the meat countries to to the government on the cattle and upon other foods which may be the United States. I expect to vestigations along the same lines, as to report upon what they have News for the American Farmer.

Another part of my mission is to how farming is done in the various tries and to report upon new fruits which may possibly be used country. The Andes Mountains home of the potato, and upon the of Bolivia there are many varieties are unknown in North America. these date back to prehistoric common people ruled by the raising "spuds" long before thought of and every tuber of the variety we eat has a genealogy whose roots are buried in the Andes.

Further down the mountains have a vegetable known as the is a tuber with branches ground tree, and there may be equal to that which Luther when a boy, and from that tinued his investigations fortune.

I want to investigate the off the coast of Peru, and nitrate fields of the great desert, which now so largely trogen for our American farms. erts have already yielded million dollars' worth of that

Just before I left Washington a chat with Logan Waller Page of of Public Roads, he asked me pieces of the road material and to him in order that they may be with a view to new discoveries as to road material for our United States highways.

It was at Cuzco that the Incas had their capital and there they worshiped the sun in a temple which was roofed with gold plate. It was from that region that Pizarro and the Spaniards got their shiploads of gold and silver, and it is believed that vast quantities were secreted by the Incas and buried in lakes and other out-of-the-way places. I am told that there are many traditions as to where these lost treasures lie. I shall report upon these through my Indian interpreter, and I hope to give some idea of the possible localities.

The Mines of the Andes.

I shall also write about the actual live treasure vaults of the highlands. I shall go through the mining regions and show something of the big things now going on. The Andes are peppered with silver and gold from the isthmus to the strait, and of late several of the republics have been exporting vast quantities of copper and tin. A large percentage of all the tin now used in the world comes from Bolivia, and the copper mines there are just at their beginning. Many of the old silver mines of the Andes are now yielding copper. This is so of Cerro de Pasco, which is now being operated by American capital, and also of the silver mountains at Potosi in Bolivia. As to gold, Bolivia is one of the treasure vaults of the universe. It has already yielded over a billion dollars in gold, and it is said to have tin enough to supply the world. In some parts of the A es there are also precious stones. Colum   gives us our most beautiful emeralds, and Brazil was the chief source of our diamond supply before the great mines of South Africa came to be known.

The Indians of South America.

Another field of investigation will be the Indians of South America. We are prone to look upon our own land as the chief home of the red man. The truth is, the United States was never thickly populated before the white man came, and its Indians never surpassed in number, it is said, more than 500,000. Some authorities put the population at 250,000. South America has always had millions of Indians, and they are of as many different kinds as we have peoples in America. There were the Incas, who were highly civilized, and who were the rulers of many other tribes, some of whom served as hewers of wood and drawers of water. In the north lived the Chibchas, who had an organized government and considerable civilization. They were skilled weavers, dyers and potters, and they had paved highways and suspension bridges. They lived in houses and erected temples, and were also expert at tilling the soil.

In southern Chile were the Araucanians, a tribe so brave, it is said, that it has never been conquered, and in northern Peru or Ecuador were the Caras, another warlike tribe which had a high civilization. Today the descendants of these Indians are mostly in servitude. I shall see some of them in the plateau of Bolivia, in the Aymaras who use llamas as their beasts of burden and who raise the alpacas from which we get the fine wool of that name. In Paraguay I shall see the Guaranis, who have mixed with the whites and become largely civilized and who now own farms and ranches, and in Patagonia I may co   in o contact with the Tehuelches, the t   of the red men, many of whom are over six feet and of mighty proportions.

In addition to these there are savage tribes in the Paraguay and Amazon basins, many of whom go almost naked and some of whom are head hunters. I have had chances to buy heads cured by these Indians several times before on my travels, and I am told that one can get a human head, shrunk to the size of a fist, in some parts of interior Ecuador for $100.

Big Cities of South America.

When I traveled over South America fifteen years ago the biggest town on the continent was not larger than the Baltimore of today. Since then many of the cities have been increasing more rapidly than any United States municipality, and now there are two cities of over a million. The largest Latin city of the world is Buenos Aires, the capital of Argentina, and there are few places in the world which compare with it in richness and beauty. At the last census it was larger than Philadelphia, and it is now estimated to contain more than 1,800,000. At its present rate of growth it will soon surpass Chicago, and it promises to be one of the most beautiful cities of this hemisphere. Within the past few years tens of millions of dollars have been spent upon city improvements. The congested business sections have been cut through to make wide avenues, and magnificent public buildings have been erected. The city has one newspaper building which is said to have cost $5,000,000, and it has fine residences and palaces galore.

Rio de Janeiro has now more than a million population, and it has within a very few years spent more than $100,000,000 on municipal improvements. It has taken advantage of our health work at Panama, and has wiped out every vestige of yellow fever, so that it is now as safe for the traveler as any town of the world.

Santiago de Chile is growing, and its famous public park, situated on a little table mountain in the heart of the city, is one of the wonders of landscape gardening. Montevideo is a gem, and there are other cities which can give points to us in modern civic improvements and in municipal government.

Great Natural Wonders.

It would take more than a letter to even mention the natural wonders of the South American continent. There is no mountain system except the Himalayas which compares in grandeur with the mighty Andes, and there is no river which is equal in volume and in its vast number of navigable tributaries to the Amazon. South America has the highest lakes in the world. Take Titicaca, which lies between Peru and Bolivia. That lake is two miles straight up in the air above the level of the sea, and it is as big as Lake Erie. It has snow-capped mountains about it, and its islands are filled with the ruins of unknown civilizations. The falls of the Panama in eastern Brazil are said to surpass the Niagara in their wonderful features, and the branches of the Amazon have mighty cascades almost unknown.

The Gateway to South America.

I am sailing tomorrow for the Isthmus of Panama to see the canal as it looks at its completion. I saw it first more than seventeen years ago. Then the French were in charge, and they had 3000 negroes at work. I visited it again when Uncle Sam began to organize his force under Engineer Wallace, and I have been on the ground from time to time while the greatest army of laborers the world has ever known, under Col. Goethals, has been plowing down the mountains and damming the streams. The great ditch has now separated the continents, but at the same time it has tied their peoples and the countries more closely together, and it will for the future be the great gateway from one to the other. My next letter will describe it as it looks today and as it will look when the ships go through.

"I am not of your faith, Padre, and I have not come to confess, though I have sinned and am sorry. Will you give me advice as a friend?"

"Si nino, have it your own way. You have been a good child, if you have not been a holy one."

"I have seen God always around me; it has not seemed necessary to go to look for Him. But last winter He was angry with us—I don't know why—and He sent His frost and spoiled many of our crops."

"He has His own reasons, child, be sure of that."

"I suppose He has, Father, but it's hard to find them."

"Don't try. Trust Him, nino."

"I am afraid I didn't, Padre. The money stringency followed the frost, and I was in a hard fix. I got angry; I was determined to get level with someone. I had good security, but the bank would not lend me money, so I faked up some oranges that had been touched by frost and shipped them. They were not badly hurt, Padre, but they ought not to have gone. I would not have sent them ordinarily, but I was mad. I have always had a good name as a shipper of honest stuff, and I got them through on my name. Now I am sorry."

"It bad, nino. You must make amends at once."

"Yes, Padre, but it's too late. They are shipped."

"They must no each the market. Those oranges of yours, they are marked, eh?"

"Yes, Padre, the boxes bear m mark. I shall lose my good name, but th s not the worst. I shall injure the whole valley."

"Those oranges, they must not reach the market. They must be stopped."

"But, Padre, I should have to pay the freight, and there is no money. None."

"That freight bill, nino, is it much?"

I named the amount.

"Not much in good times, nino, but a great deal in bad ones, like these. You have tried the banks, you say?"

"Yes, Padre, but they would not shell out a cent on my security, though it is good and unincumbered."

"You have friends in the valley, nino; will not they help you?"

"We are all in the same fix, Father. Money is tight."

"I know, my child, but those oranges must not reach the market. Stay here for a while. I must go away and think it out."

The good old priest went and left me alone. Yet not alone, either. It was a glorious day, and the Padre's garden was full of life. A crimson-throated hummingbird came and sucked honey from the scarlet blossoms of a dwarf grevillea; a carmine-breasted linnet offered up full-throated praise to the New Year; and an industrious gray-brown Californian towhee scratched the soft ground for worms, like a miniature hen. All were indifferent to the money stringency. Man alone, I felt, was dependent on the miserable rise and fall of the money market.

I was awakened from my reverie by the soft tread of sandaled feet on the gravel walk. The priest entered, placed a hand on my shoulder and put into my hand a small leather sack.

"Take it, nino, and recall those oranges," he said. "Don't bother to count it now, you will find it is enough. As soon as you are able, give it back to me; there are always children who want it."

"But, Father, you have no security," I said, with tears in my eyes. "I will go home and bring you the deed of my ranch."

"There is no need, nino. If you did not repay me—but I know you will—I should never take your means of livelihood. Go now, nino, and recall those oranges.

He gave me his hand, and I raised it reverently to my lips.

Where Conspira Met.

White Webbs Park, whose footpaths are in dispute, is the center of two interesting legends.

Local tradition has it that White Webbs House was one of the meeting-places of the Gunpowder Plot conspirators; and it is at any rate certain that Fawkes was a frequent visitor there. And apparently the house was of a kind to lend itself to plotting, for the commissioners who searched it after Guy's arrest reported it to be full of trap-doors and passages, presumably secret.

This house was demolished in 1790, but some portions of its outbuildings are probably embodied in the King and Tinker Inn, for which the story of King James and the Tinker is claimed. This legend, to which, by the way, Enfield is not the sole claimant, tells how the King, separated from his hunting companions, came across the tinker, who, after some familiar conversation, expressed a wish to see the monarch.

He was bidden to mount behind his new friend and look out for the only man who kept his hat on when they rejoined the hunting party, and in course found that he had been sharing t ing's horse.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] "I am very glad to meet you again, Miss Dowsley," he said when they had been introduced to each other.

"Again?" she replied. "Why, have we met before?"

"Well, perhaps we haven't exactly met before, but you tickled my chin with your feather for about an hour one evening in an elevated car."

A Morning in a Montessori School at Rome.

By Amanaa Mathews.

WONDERFUL WORK.

FORTIFIED with our official permission to visit a Montessori school, granted at the offices of the Roman Society of Good Building, our little party of California women boarded a green tram entitled "San Lorenzo." We had been asked which of the schools we desired to visit, and had chosen San Lorenzo without hesitation, as the original institution and the one to which is still attached the greatest sociological and humanitarian interest. The schools established later are, however, of more technical interest to teachers, since this earliest school is no longer under the personal direction of Dr. Montessori.

We passed through the old city gate of San Lorenzo. When we alighted from the tram we found ourselves in a neighborhood which bore all the marks of the traditional slum. The streets were exceedingly muddy, the small shops mean and poor; every window was festooned with drying clothes; the people we met looked bedraggled and forlorn.

From this street we passed with startling abruptness through a doorway into a courtyard with a tiny park of grass and trees. Two little boys were diligently hunting over this parked space, picking up the smallest scraps of paper or orange peel and consigning this refuse to a box in one corner of the court. Five stories of windows looked into this cheerful spot. Some of the windows had lace curtains; red rugs were swung out to air from others. It seemed as if the street outside must be a long way off—perhaps a confused memory of some less happy city.

Thus we were brought to a forceful understanding of the splendid foundation laid by the Roman Society of Good Building for Dr. Montessori's beautiful work. Here matters had followed the usual steps in the evolution of a typical slum. Buildings intended for a more fortunate class had come into the possession of the very poor. There had been that sort of subdivision which leaves most of the rooms dark and unsanitary with the customary back tenements added in what were originally the breathing spaces. Subletting, overcrowding, disease, immorality and crime flourish in such an environment. The Good Building Society is transforming these wretched habitations into model tenements and at the same time educating the tenants to their proper use. The transformation in the people is said to equal that in their environment. We noted how few and small were the scraps of waste collected by the two small boys and we marveled.

On the first floor, just off this court, we found the Casa dei Bambini. It is attended by the children of these reformed tenements. After our credentials had been duly accepted by a pleasant-faced directora in black dress and tan apron, we were admitted to an ante-room hung about with pink aprons to each of which was attached a white collar.

Next we entered the schoolroom itself. Our first impression was the continuation of the pink and white color scheme. All the children in the room, boys and girls alike, were attired in pink-checked pinafores and large white collars. These collars were not the stiffly-starched or celluloid affairs which constitute one of the trials of the British schoolboy. They were of soft thin material quite ornate with pink lace and embroidery. Each pink pinafore bore its owner's initials across its front embroidered in red. The aprons in the ante-room belonged to the tardies who kept appearing all during the first hour.

Our second vivid impression was of cordial little hands extended to us while every child in the room piped up: "Buon giorno!" A remarkably pretty little witch of 6 years made a dash for the blackboard.

"Brava bambina!" exclaimed the teacher. "Let us see what Gemma will write."

Gemma inscribed the sentiment which follows, not in a childish scrawl, but in the most perfect, well-formed script imaginable:

"Oh, come sono contenta de conoscere queste gentile signore. Gratzie tanto della cara visita."

Among ourselves we mustered sufficient Italian to make out that the youngster had written.

"Oh, how glad we are to know these charming ladies. Thank you so much for this dear visit."

The children ranged in age from 3 to 6. All the forenoon we watched them actually going through the educational stunts which have made famous the name of Montessori, and be assured, they seem even more wonderful in the actual performance than when read about in the magazines.

A boy of 6 built the "long stair" with sticks painted in alternate bands of red and green. These he whisked about, reeling off meanwhile an apparently impossible amount of arithmetic.

Then a little girl was given bits of cloth of various textures. She named them first with her eyes open. Blindfolded she went through the exercise again and, moreover, named articles from our handbags, even distinguishing coins of various denominations.

Some blocks of wood were brought and none of our party could distinguish between the weight of those cut from pine and those from some darker wood, yet a blindfolded child of 5 separated them with rapidity and accuracy.

Meanwhile, slates had been distributed and crayons instead of slate pencils. Many of the children were drawing what they chose and writing the names of the objects depicted. Of their own accord they kept running to show us their work. We noted flowers, fruit, houses, steamers, trains, a dirigible balloon, Garibaldi, and a Turk. One boy came up with an excellent map of Italy, and waxed eloquent describing it. He told us what cities we would pass through in leaving Italy, showed us her islands and pointed out the seat of the recent war. The directora said that he had learned all this in a "poesia."

Next we were shown with children of differing development the several stages by which the Montessori infants master writing and reading earlier than the other infants of the globe. To begin with, even butter-fingers of 3 and 4 could put graduated cylindrical insets back into their holes. Those a bit more advanced could fit more elaborate series of geometrical insets into place. Then tracing these on paper and coloring the tracings calls attention to outlines. The children pass on to script letters of sand-paper mounted on smooth cardboard, learning these by touch and sight. The next step is cardboard letters with which we saw them build any word on demand. We were invited to suggest words, which the directora repeated to them so slowly as to be almost separated into their phonetic units. Fortunate babes to be born into a language of immutable phonetics.

A pupil is is now ready to do what Dr. Montessori calls "exploding into writing." Why not? He has all the data and is surprised and delighted to find himself in possession of a new accomplishment. The writing is large at first, but we saw notebooks in which these infant phenomena had inscribed exquisite script of ordinary size.

There was a mild hum all over the room of the children talking to their mates as they worked. We saw no trace of mischief; not one seemed to have either time or inclination for such frivolity. According to all accepted standards, however, the room was noisy. Sometimes the directora checked it somewhat; again she used what was almost a shouting voice to talk above it.

After a while she went to the blackboard and wrote the single word "Silenzio!" The children began by calling out each syllable after her, but by the time the word was completed they had grasped its import. Instantly they were transformed into cherubic statues with their hands behind them. This condition, however, was not long enforced. They were put through calisthenic and breathing exercises. This was followed by a motion song about the hands and what they can do, but not personifying the fingers into little pigs or fanciful little workpeople as a kindergarten song would have done.

Some large balls were carried about the room to show points of the compass and different positions of the sun.

By this time our sentiments could only be expressed in terms of candy; so we sallied forth to find some sweets. It was not a promising neighborhood in which to hunt for the luxuries of life where people evidently had rather more than they could do to provide themselves with the necessities. In exceedingly broken Italian, we asked advice of a good-natured and gallant policeman, who escorted us to the very door of a little grocery. The proprietor and all the neighbor women who were there buying pennies' worth of maccaroni took a similarly cordial interest in us and our object. The purchase was successfully consummated, and we hastened back with our package.

The directora distributed the candy to the children, now quiet and passive. We did not hear her give any injunctions regarding it, but each child said "grazie" (thank you,) and made no move toward it except sometimes to arrange the pieces more artistically. Admirable babes! At last came a word of permission—not to eat it—oh dear no! but to put it into their pockets. We were actually relieved to note that in the case of the very youngest, mere babes looking to be less than 3 years of age, its pocket stay was short.

The next distribution was of napkins and spoons, and in this the children assisted. We naturally looked to see them served with some sort of lunch. Imagine our amazement to observe that the treat consisted of a tablespoonful of olive oil apiece varied in some instances by emulsion of cod-liver oil! This, we learned, is provided by the Roman Society of Good Building. Many of the children are undernourished, and these oil doses are considered extremely beneficial. There was not a wry face. The infants showed neither eagerness nor displeasure. Whether they like it or whether they merely accept it philosophically as "all in the day's work," we could form no idea. Now for the candy! Not at all. A few nibbled daintily, but most of the forty went to their homes at noon with the treat still untouched.

The programme led on to other wonders of which we had read. Children of 6 had climbed the "long stair" of the arithmetical sticks and were doing about second-grade work on slates and paper. Indeed we were informed that these children upon leaving the Montessori school at 6 or 7 can enter the third year of the public schools.

Silence and closed eyes were enjoined. From the doorway the directora whispered the names and one pupil after another ran to her in a most engaging trot with his little hands held behind him.

In the Montessori system reading follows writing. When the children can write, why should they not read what they have written? Reading aloud from books comes last of all, as Dr. Montessori considers it the most difficult. Some of these children read to us from books, but we were more interested in the famous silent reading. This is employed to connect the mechanical exercise of reading with the sense of what is being read.

Folded squares of paper were distributed containing more or less elaborate instructions regarding some act or acts to be performed. The children read these silently and then proceeded to carry out the directions given. Usually there were several of these performances going on at once like a three-ringed circus, but often all paused to watch some one affair of particular interest.

One boy called out four of his companions and put them through a little calisthenic drill. Another organized a game with a bird flying about in a circle of children. This was the only touch of the kindergarten appeal to the imagination which we saw during the whole morning. This seems to be one important fundamental difference between a Montessori school and a kindergarten. Dr. Montessori thinks the other has been overdone, but then she is herself eminently of the scientific type of mind.

We saw also the painting and the color exercises with tablets wound with colored silk. They handled eight colors with eight gradations of each color.

The smaller ones practiced tying, hooking, and buttoning with frames especially designed for the purpose.

The morning closed with the recitation for our benefit of quite long poetical selections by one and another of the children.

At a quarter before 12 began the ceremony of doffing the pink aprons, each youngster unbuttoning another and being himself unbuttoned. The little pink butterflies were now mere moths in d colors, although their poor stood above him and swore, tenderly. 'Man, you shouldn't be you ought—but here you were ALL 'there.'

"The ordinary man doesn't think much about death. Once in a while he looks out of his window and sees a funeral going by, and he wonders a little; once in a while he hinks of it when friends go, and he finds he's pretty gray. In such ways it comes slow. It's when you're in your prime, with life and ove and friendship ahead of you that it hits hard; to be blotted out like a candle, here and gone, and by another man's hand!

"They thought of these things, all of them xcept Maintland. The men went to separate orners; Mason was bowed over something hat was the picture of a young woman with a baby in her arms. No one saw the picture, but they knew what it was. Mason was hiding his grief like a man, but it was choking him.

"Maintland chatted with the stubby uard in a broken Spanish-American lingo hat no one could understand, even himself. He was telling him some yarn about what would happen to them if they shot him and his friends, when Laquilo came in again on his last visit. He had come to say good-by.

"He had no chance to see the suffering of the other men, for Maintland greeted him like an old friend and begged another cigarette. He shook hands with Laquilo, and told him, among a lot of other rubbish, that he'd have the frying pans of hell good and hot for Laquilo when he showed up.

"Laquilo blinked a little, and his stiff black hair quivered as he shook his head in a quandary as to what kind of man Maintland was.

"Maintland drew out of his pocket a dark, worn bit of dice with which he and his fellow prisoners had played away the day, and stumped Laquilo to play some 'dago' game.

"Laquilo said something short and sharp, his white teeth flickering between his dark lips.

"Maintland turned to his fellows. 'Boys, this bowlegged son of perdition says that we can toss up this, and the man who gets the right number will be released; he can take the road by here plumb into the camp of the U. S. A.'

"They were up on their feet in an instant.

"'He'll stick us when he gets us out!' Reed said.

"'No, he won't,' answered Maintland; 'he's sworn by his saint; that's good. He wants to watch you fellows suffer a bit while the thing's going on, and when you find out you ain't the man, savy?'

"'God knows I will! I do now! My old heart's going. Gee, but I'd like to see the old—' Graves said, trying to cover his real feeling.

"'Dry up, Red! Ain't it hell enough without bringin' up— Say, how is it? All game?' Maintland asked.

"'Yes, yes; you shake, Jeff. We'll take a number; if it comes up our number, we stay; if it don't—' Reed suggested.

"They counted up; Reed one; Mason two; Graves three; Maintland four.

"Maintland made ready, but he stopped. 'I can't see the dots—they've been polished off; I'll have to go out.'

"He lingoed away at Laquilo, who was watching it all with smiling eyes, and Laquilo agreed.

"Maintland went out into the corridor and knelt down. 'All ready, boys, for the shot?' he called.

"Three sounds that were intended to be human came back. He grinned up at Laquilo, and said something about his friends having bad throats.

"His sinewy hand went forward, and the dice spun and dropped. He scooped it up and chucked it into his pocket.

"'You lucky devil, Mason, you go! Give my regards to the boys an' tell 'em I wish I could trim a few more of 'em at a game of poker; there'll be too many good poker players where I—tra, la, la—what's the use? I must graft another one of Emil's fumigators!' And he proceeded to do so.

"Laquilo was watching him, an odd expression on his face.

"Maintland came back behind the grating to give Mason a few requests to deliver, and for the first time the man's iron nerve seemed to give way. He sort of gagged as he tried to talk, and drew off into the heavy shadows of the cell. At last Mason went, after a handshaking and farewell in which there were tears that none attempted to hide.

"Maintland got the next surprise, for Laquilo, after an earnest consultation with a dark man who seemed to be in a position of authority, called Maintland out and said a few words to him. Maintland seemed dazed, but his friends saw his pleasure. He turned back to the grating.

"'Boys, I'm let go, too; Emil is afraid my spirit will haunt him and ask him forever for a cigarette; so I go,' he said, and hurried away as if he could not stay for farewells.

"Reed and Graves drew together in a corner. There was nothing to be said.

"The long night began its march of time.

"The wind freshened and brought the men a little relief from the oppressive stench and heat of the narrow room; but they did not pay attention. They were thinking of the sunrise and a few things that were to go with it.

"In the corridor the guard dozed against the wall, woke up, and dozed. Graves watched and longed for just the chance to knit his fingers in that short throat—a wish in vain; the bars could not be passed.

"Graves, sitting in the darkness, felt something hit his hand; he rubbed it—it was damp dirt. A little more fell, and some hit him on the face.

"With a shock that made his heart jerk with pain, understanding came. Some one was throwing dirt through the barred window as a signal.

"Touching Reed gently, but significantly, Graves crept to the window; looking out, his lips dry and his heart pounding with a tremendous hope, he saw a dark mass come up slowly, then something shadowy went through the bars. He touched it and thrilled—it was a human finger. He slid his hand down and touched a ring—Maintland's ring! He remembered what Maintland had said about the bars.

"Quivering, he crept back to Reed and pressed the man's hot, sweaty palm; in it he traced the letter 'M,' and Reed's sudden start showed he understood.

"With careful eye on the guard, and in between his periods of waking, Graves stole to the window.

"One by one the bars were removed from their fastening in the soft brick of the outside, softened with the wind and air of many a year.

"Carefully, with every nerve keyed to the highest effort, they worked through, and were eased to the ground by a powerful figure. They followed that figure through shadowy places for miles, it seemed, before it paused and turned.

"'Well, boys, smells some better out here, eh? Cut out the thanks; we've got to go careful now. Follow me!'

"Behind the tireless figure they went on. They were following the regular road. Now and then they had to hide and wait for some group to pass; swinging off, they took a narrow trail, and Reed almost fell over something. He bent and gasped, 'It's a man!'

"'Yes,' Maintland answered, 'he's the guy they sent with me; but I had to get back to you boys, and I knew he wouldn't go; so I had to leave him there. I'm sorry; but this is war, and it's hell—for the other fellow.'

"'Reed and Graves began to stumble, for their nerves had been under a terrific strain.

"Suddenly, sharp and clear, a challenge rang out—in the sweetest tongue on earth; and Reed and Graves, strangling with sobs of joy, ran toward the lights that welcomed them—the camp-fires of the left division."

Stevens cleared his throat and reached for a match to light his cigar anew. His brown face was tense with some inner tension.

"Real names, Steve?" one of the group asked who knew him.

"No, not—exactly; I was Graves—I didn't intend to give it away, but I live that over so when I think of it that I can't hide it," answered Stevens.

"But," one of the quiet men about him asked suddenly, "how did Laquilo happen to let Maintland go?"

Stevens smiled. "I forgot that. You see, Laquilo was a fighter himself, though a devil, and the way Jeff treated him got Jeff in with him; then, too, Laquilo understood a little English—enough to get our scheme with the dice. He saw Jeff toss up the ivory; and when it came down—we got this out of Jeff with difficulty long after—it read four, his number but he called two, Mason's number.

"That caught Laquilo. It was a brave man's stunt, as I think you'll all agree," he added, and smiled as silence followed.

As a matter its nearest accessible railway Utah, 150 miles north Communication with the out- is hence a difficult and tedious matter. This was instanced during the last election in Coconino county, when the returns from all the precincts except far-away Fredonia showed a difference of but two or three votes between the rival candidates for Sheriff, leaving as it did the result dependent on the vote cast at that place, the report of which did not reach Flagstaff until a week or ten days after the election, much to the disappointment of the two candidates who were rather dubious about accepting the felicitations of their friends proffered in the meantime.

Aside from a few of the older Mormons in Eastern Arizona who have traveled back and forth to Utah over the old wagon trail by way of Tuba and Lee's Ferry, some half-dozen sheepmen around Flagstaff who have bought sheep in southern Utah and trailed them into Arizona, crossing the herds over the Colorado River boats at the ferrys, and possibly one or two prospectors, it is doubtful if a dozen persons can be found in the State who have ever set foot on "the strip."

Excepting the few actual settlers "the strip" is probably best known, of all Arizonans, to a woman, Miss Sharlott M. Hall, than whom there is no one better informed of things relating to Arizona. In the capacity of Territorial historian, a position unfortunately now abolished, Miss Hall made a journey by wagon over a greater part of this section of the State interviewing the pioneer settlers and collecting data in preparation for a history of the State which she hopes to write at some future time.

Another portion of Arizona that is little known and which contains much of the romantic, historical and picturesque, is the White Mountain or San Carlos Indian Reservation, lying in the east-central part of the State and including portions of five counties, namely, Graham, Gila, Pinal, Navajo and Apache, occupied by and set aside for the White Mountain, the Chiricahua, the Coyotero, the Pinal and the Aravaipa Apaches, some of these clans being the most bloodthirsty and treacherous of all the North American Indians, and who, scarcely a generation ago, under Victoria, Geronimo and others in their atrocious forays against the white settlers struck terror to the heart of every pioneer rancher.

Its altitude ranges from 3000 to 11,000 feet above sea level, the area between the 5000 and 10,000-foot levels being forest-clad and containing some of the most beautiful scenery in the State. Here and there limpid streams wander down between the tree-clad slopes, while in the open glades between the widely-scattered pines lush grasses cover the ground surface in a rich blue-green canopy. The air, redolent of the fresh leafy incense, is as stimulating as wine. And standing there, it may be from the rhythmical crooning of the wind in the trees or the lilt of birds in the woodland fastnesses, there comes to you the irresistible lure of it all, a lure that strikes a responsive chord in every soul that has not been deadened by the fleshpots and potations of our artificial modes of living. Along some of the streams remote from trails and roads may be seen here and there a few oval-shaped houses, or "campos," the summer homes of the Apaches. Near by are rudely cultivated tracts planted to corn and melons. Lower down the mountain slopes the country becomes rougher, the vegetation changing to the giant cactus, the mesquite, the poly-verde and other semi-arid species. It is these portions that are the least known and where some of the untamed followers of old Geronimo are said to live and brood in sullen silence, cherishing their eternal hatred for their white conquerors. For one to seek out alone these isolated retreats would be an extremely hazardous undertaking.

A Holiday Trip Down the Coast.

By Haven Charles Hurst.

A CHRISTMAS HIKE.

IT HAS been my good fortune to have spent many holiday seasons in the open on this western coast. But I still think my first Christmas hike was the best of all. It certainly was a trip well calculated to thrill a tenderfoot, and to instill into his breast an undying love for the country he was exploring for the first time.

There was at that time—and the same remains true today—no more unvisited strip of land in all the Southwest than that lying along the seacoast south of Newport Bay, and extending for perhaps some fifteen miles to where the waters of Trabuco Creek meet and mingle with the tides of ocean. On this coast one travels alone, and rarely sees a human face till his journey is done. There is, indeed, one settlement on the shore, that of Laguna, midway down the coast.

It was to this charmingly out-of-the-way place that a newly-arrived friend from Iowa had been invited to spend Christmas, and to bring his friend along. How eagerly we looked forward to that trip; what laying of plans and consulting of maps! We even bought a tide table and studied it. Having filled our heads with distances and directions, we concluded that we could travel from Newport and arrive, if we were reasonably diligent, at Laguna in time for the big dinner Christmas Eve.

We left Los Angeles in the early dawn, and while the morning mists were sliding slowly up the vast wall of the Sierra Madre, our car sped southward through the suburbs, past little farms and wooded eucalyptus lands, to the sea. Rounding the base of Signal Hill, the trolley line follows closely the ocean's shore, and then and there two tenderfeet became acquainted with the Pacific at close range. Our back-East eyes and minds had to stretch quite a bit that morning to take in the vast scenery through which we passed. On our right was the ocean, with Catalina lying in full view, and on the left, across the marsh lands and distant valleys were more mountains than we had ever seen before, with snow on their topmost peaks.

The now thriving beach city of Newport was then a quiet little fishing village, and was the only scene of life along the shores of Newport Bay. Even our arrival did not seem to stir things up very much that morning. But we did not mind that. We felt that we were indeed getting away from the crowd and the woes of civilization. On all that great inland sheet of water there was not a sail to be seen, nor a boat of any description, save the one at the little dock, which was to carry us across to the shores of Corona del Mar. Very different is the scene today, where launches sputter in all directions, where rowboats go in fleets, where motor boats speed up and down the water lanes. Now the yachtsman spreads his white sails, and the canoe, migrating from its classic home on the Charles River in the far East, and from Belle Isle, is seen on this western water in ever-increasing numbers.

Our craft that day was a little side-wheeler, propelled by steam, and has no doubt long since gone to the port of missing ships. But it carried us securely down the stretches of the great empty bay, past the untenanted shores where there has since sprung up as if by magic the great resort called Balboa, queen among the beaches. A desert then of sand and water and lonely shore line, it now is enjoyed by thousands of nature lovers every summer.

Our brave craft landed us safely at the farther side of the bay, with our bags and our lunch, and at once paddled back whence it came, and we were alone—but not lonely, for seals poked their heads above the water and gazed at us, and porpoises went wheeling by, and overhead were always the gulls. Out on the bar at the inlet the surf came charging in, in white rollers of foam, and rocky point reared its crags above the sands of the beach. It was a beautiful and entrancing scene, and one which has never lost its charm, though often revisited since that initial trip.

Here, from the heights of the San Joaquin hills the country slopes to the sea, ending in sheer cliffs whose mighty palisades wind away in many a cove and promontory as far as the eye can reach.

Who shall describe the varied beauties of that coast, its pebbly stretches, its smooth sand beaches, its giant causeways of mighty rocks, tumbled from the cliffs above; its towers and turrets in stone, its ancient lava beds, once flowing in molten masses, and strewn everywhere shells, barnacles, kelp, broken timbers, rusty irons, or an anchor from some long-lost ship—the debris of the sea? To add to our entertainment the retreating tide left numberless pools in the rocks, nature's own aquariums, green with moss and seaweed. Here, beneath the crystal-clear water might be observed starfish, sea urchins and anemones. Limpets clung to the rocks; tiny fish darted about, in terror at the peering eyes overhead, while numberless tiny crabs dragged their little shell houses over the bottom of the pool.

At one point in our travels we came to a place where a whole fleet of jellyfish had been floated ashore and left stranded by the tide. There were literally hundreds of them, beautifully streaked and marked, and varying in size from that of a saucer to a foot and a half in diameter. In all my walking trips along the beach since, I have only occasionally met with jellyfishes, and then only with a single specimen at a time. Neptune was especially generous with his treasures that day.

We proved this, moreover, by the number of shells we found. Of the rare and beautiful bubble shell we found many perfect specimens. These shells are so delicate that they seldom reach the shore in an unbroken condition. Scallop shells we found in abundance, and the well-named razor-shell. Many coffee shells were added to our collection. At that time fairly numerous, they have since become very rare, and one might walk the beach for miles today without finding a single specimen to reward the most diligent search. Of abalones we found many, the small specimens very perfect in form, but the larger ones much weathered from lying on the higher part of the shore, and quite colorless. Aside from shells there were many pebbles and rocks of peculiar texture to be gathered, and masses of white coraline rock, so that the bags with which we had provided ourselves for this very purpose were soon assuming a portly form and becoming matters of some weight.

What with our searching for shells and loitering we had made slow work of our journey, and it was nearly dark when we passed through the little settlement of Laguna. The sun was just sinking behind the purple peaks of Catalina Island when we arrived at the bungalow on the cliff which was our destination.

The lady of the house gave the two tramps a royal welcome, and after a short rest we stepped outside to see what we could of our whereabouts in the little of daylight that yet remained. Also we wished to watch "hubby," who we were informed was down on the beach hunting for abalones.

We found that the house sat on the very edge of a cliff some seventy-five feet in height, and commanded a wonderful view both up and down the coast and out to those beautiful islands lying on the water in the west. A footpath led down steeply to the beach where the cliff broke into a confused mass of rock. This flanked a charming little sand beach, which in turn led to another confused mass of boulders reaching out into the surf. It was a wild and inspiriting scene and painted in glorious sunset colors.

We soon found our host. He was wading breast-deep where the sea entered a cavern in the cliff. Old clothes fit only for a good soaking and much patience are the concomitants of an abalone hunt; also a short iron bar with which to pry the "foot" of the animal from the rock, for it can and does stick tighter than a mustard plaster. Said host had been very successful in his search, and we all ascended to the house. Here supper was under way. We smelled the aroma of coffee, and many sizzling noises came from the kitchen. Meanwhile the abalones must be prepared. They were carved from their shells and the solid meaty portion sliced into thin strips. These were then pounded for a long time to make them tender, for your abalone is a very tough customer in his native state. They were then fried in a preparation of corn meal.

Climbing over rocks all day and walking along the shore with the salt breeze in one's face is very conducive to a vigorous appetite, and we were certainly ready for the feast provided. It was a meal to appease any appetite. There was roast duck, wild duck from the neighboring marshes, for the piece de resistance; abalone for a novelty and new gastronomic delight, and a whole tableful of more common viands, ending with a huge pumpkin pie—made from sweet potatoes.

After supper we gathered about the fireplace. It was Christmas Eve in California, Christmas Eve on the shores of the Pacific, whose surf sent up subdued thunderings from the beach below in lieu of the blizzard wind's shriek to which our eastern ears were wont to listen. The fireplace was fearfuly and wonderfully made, a mosaic of stones of all colors and shapes, and all gathered from the beach. The driftwood that burned therein the shore line also produced; its gathering had added zest to many an otherwise lazy afternoon. Here in this out-of-the-way corner was everything to man's hand. The good old ocean furnished stones for his buildings, driftwood to blaze in his fire, and sea food for his larder. It offered, moreover, to the eye pictures no artist could paint, and to the spirit and mind of man an uplift found not elsewhere. No wonder people love the sea.

Many stories were told of the country round; of the carpet of flowers laid by the rains on the hills; of the different aspects of the sea and shore in sunshine and in storm; how even the beach was in continual change, the sands piled high today by some strong tide, and carried away tomorrow to build new land elsewhere.

Our sleep that night was filled with sea dreams, for the roll of the surf was an accompaniment which we were little used to. But we secured rest enough and were ready to come forth when our host called us the next morning to go fishing. We dressed quickly and stepped outdoors. Could this be Christmas Day? Where was the biting air, the frost, the fairy fields of snow? In their stead were green hills, an ardent sun just entering an unclouded sky, and everywhere the breath of May. Down at the foot of the cliff the surf dashed white on the rocks.

Provided by our host with stout cane poles and strong line and hooks, with abalone for bait, we climbed down the trail to the sea and fell to fishing off the rocks. Heretofore we had fished in still waters, as the ghosts of many deceased Iowa bass and catfish might testify. But this was a different kind of fishing. Here we dropped our lines in the seething turmoil of the surf, where it boiled among the huge rocks. It seemed as if any fish therein would have his brains knocked out instanter. But the fish were there, and we soon were busy lifting them into a quieter element. Sheepshead and rock bass and eel of great size we secured, and a few black perch. None of these varieties had we ever seen before, and the sheepshead especially was a wonder to us, with his protruding teeth and bright black and red bands alternating across his body. As for the eels, it was like fishing for boaconstrictors. Mine host had told of their trick of whipping their tail around a seaweed or rock and holding on when caught. This I had demonstrated to my own satisfaction. I got a tremendous bite, pulled until I saw an eel's head show above the water, only to have it disappear. I pulled with a steady strain for the next five minutes, when suddenly said eel let go and out he came.

In short order we had enough for breakfast, and they were soon ready for the pan. It was a novel breakfast for Christmas morning. Steaming hot platters of fish and of eel and of abalone, and what was more wonderful in our eyes, a heaping dish of crisp red radishes newly picked from a garden at one side of the bungalow. I do not believe that very many people the country over have had the pleasure of catching their own fish breakfast on a Christmas morning. Kellner, chalk another mark on the scoreboard in favor of California climate!

Soon after breakfast we bade our kind entertainers good-by, shouldered our bundles of curios, and resumed our journey down the coast. All nature seemed to be celebrating the holiday; the white gulls circled overhead, and off shore a whale showed his huge bulk, blowing a fountain of spray high into the air. We walked steadily, for we realized that there must be less of loitering and more of

Good Short Stories - - Brief Anecdotes Gathered From Many Sources

Compiled for the Times.

A Useless Pause.

"TO OPPOSE the new woman is like opposing the tide with a broom. Better still, it's like Calhoun Clay."

The speaker was Dr. Horace C. Newte of Denver, who has for a long time been championing the slashed skirt on the ground that it makes for hardiness and prevents cold.

"Calhoun Clay," he resumed, "was getting married. Little and lean, he stood at the altar beside a tall and robust bride of 180 pounds or more. The ceremony proceeded regularly until, in the bride's reply, the words 'to love, honor and obey' were pronounced.

"At this juncture Bridegroom Calhoun Clay held up his right hand. A pause ensued. In the silence Calhoun said: —

"'Excuse me, pahson, but Ah would have us wait a moment an' let de full solemnity o' de words sink in—especially de last two. Ah's been married befo'.'"—[Chicago Record-Herald.

Restricted Childhood.

SHEFFIELD INGALLS, Lieutenant-Governor of Kansas, believes in giving Young America a full chance to enjoy all there is in wholesome boyhood play. He tells the following story to show how some youngsters are hampered:

Gordon, 7 years old, was playing bandit, and for some time had been staggering around as if badly wounded, without actually toppling over as a victim of the imaginary bullets of his playmates. A neighbor, watching the game, called to him:

"Gordon, why don't you fall down?"

"I can't," answered the boy, crossly; "I ain't allowed to. If I had my old pants on I'd have been dead long ago."—[National Monthly.

When One is a Crowd.

"THE very presence of so many police in Dublin makes for hilarity," says the London Times. "They are so ridiculously big they speak as though from Olympus. A policeman told a friend of mine the other day how he had 'moved on' a man in Grafton street. 'I seen him standin' there be Noblett's shop, an' I says to him: "Look here, me fine fellow, you move on out o' this now. I've been watchin' ye this long time an' ye're up to no good." "I wasn't here five minutes ago," says he. "I don't care whether ye were or not," says I. "You move on now, without any more oul' chat or I'll charge ye." "What's my offince?" says he. "Ye're loiterin'," says I. "Isn't every wan else loiterin' as well as me?" says he. "You're collectin' a crowd," says I "How could I be collectin' a crowd," says he, "an' there only meself in it?" "Go on out o' that now," says I. "If I say wan's a crowd, wan's a crowd."'"

Felt at Home.

HE HAD been around from church to church trying to find a congenial congregation, and finally he stopped in a little church just as the congregation read with the minister:

"We have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done."

The man dropped into a pew with a sigh of relief.

"Thank goodness," he said, "I've found my crowd at last."—[Ladies' Home Journal.

Just an Exchange.

THE talk in the lobby of a Washington hotel turned to horses, when Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia smilingly recalled an incident.

Rambling along the road one morning, a colored party named Rastus met his neighbor, Sambo.

"Look yeah, Sambo," he excitedly remarked, "did yo' know dat somebody done gone steal Deacon White's hoss las' night?"

"Yo' doan mean it, Rastus!" exclaimed Sambo. "Did dey find any clew to de thief dat done de crime?"

"Yes, dey suah did," answered Rastus. "In de stable whar dey took de hoss from dey find a quo't bottle full ob gin."

"A quo't bottle full ob gin, eh?" returned Sambo. "Good! Den de deacon doan lose nuttin' on dat hoss."—[Boston Advertiser.

Honest Cal.

YOUNG Mayor Hunt of Cincinnati said the other day of a notorious political boss:

"They who call this fellow honest have to stretch the truth a little. They have to stretch it like the old colored farmer of Paint Rock.

"This old farmer said to a young chap:

"'Look heah, Calhoun, Ah don' min' yore co'tin' mah gal Lillian, but Ah'd ruther yo' wouldn' come round mah house no mo'.

"'Time fo' de las' time de bridle wuz gone, and now as Ah has use fo' de saddle Ah'd ruther yo' wouldn' come round no mo.'

"'Ah don' say yo' hain't honest, for Ah b'lieves yo' is; but sich cu'is things happens while yo's in de neighborhood; so, jes' don' come round dis house no mo.'"—[Chicago Record-Herald.

The Answer.

APROPOS of Senator Depew's declaration that in his young days in Peekskill marriages were very happy and comfortable on $1000 or so a year, Millicent M. Atwood, in an anti-suffragist address in Baltimore, said:

"The cost of living is higher now than in Mr. Depew's young days, and it is impossible for a Bryn Mawr or Vassar girl to live a happy married life on $1000 a year.

"A Vassar girl once refused a $16-a-week bank clerk. He groaned and said:

"'You wring my heart.'

"'I'd rather wring your heart than wring your clothes, the Vassar girl calmly answered."—[Chicago Record Herald.

A Businesslike Suitor.

"NO-O, he isn't the sort of a husband I should have chosen for my daughter, but I think perhaps he'll get along in the world all right."

"What way does he differ from the man you would have chosen?"

"When he proposed to my daughter and she had told him to see me, he sent me a note telling me where his office is and what his office hours are, and asking me to drop around and see him when convenient."—[Houston Post.

Coming To Herself.

ON ONE occasion Dr. Francis Warner was trying to bring back to consciousness a woman who had had a paralytic stroke.

His efforts seemed likely to be in vain. For a long time her utterances were only the ravings of delirium, but all at once she sat up in bed, looking straight at Dr. Warner, she cried out: "Oh, you funny old man!"

"Ah!" said Dr. Warner, cheerfully. "Now she's beginning to talk sense!"—[Pearson's Weekly.

But This Was Different.

MR. SEABURY came home from the office one night and told his wife he had been to see the doctor.

"He said I was all tired out," said Seabury, "and he thinks I ought to go away on a fishing trip."

"But, of course, you don't believe him," responded the wife.

"Why not?" queried Seabury, in surprise.

"Well," said Mrs. Seabury, "you didn't have any confidence in him when he told me I ought to go to Europe."—[New York Times.

Billy's Ingratitude.

"A RICH man can be a Christian while he's got his money, but he ceases to be a Christian when his money gets him."

The speaker was Secretary Bryan; the occasion a Washington dinner.

"Old Billy Bones was a rich man," Mr. Bryan continued, "whose money had got him. Billy was in the lumber trade.

"One day he was bossing a lumber crew that was guiding a lot of logs down the river. Suddenly the log Billy stood on slipped and rolled over. Billy sank in the deep and icy water.

"But a young Canuck plunged in from a near-by log, and, at the risk of his life, saved the old man. The youth naturally expected some reward for this heroic feat, but Billy only nodded a gruff 'Thank you' and went his way.

"When, the next week, he turned up at camp again, the young Canuck approached him.

"'Monsieur,' he said, 'I see you fall dans l'eau—een ze vawtaire—and I save your life. The pourboire, the reward, n'est ce pas, monsieur——'

"'Look a here, young feller,' he interrupted the stumbling youth, 'if you'd been tendin' to business as you'd orter, you wouldn't ha' seen me fall in!'"—[Washington Star.

Why Prayer Was Unanswered.

M'CARTHY got into an argument with Casey about the efficacy of prayer.

"Oi can't see that there's anything in it," asserted Casey. "Oi never got anything out of it."

"Well," said McCarthy, "don't you know when there's a war it's always the people that pray that win the fights?"

"How about the Chinese?" asked Casey. "They're great people to pray, and yet they got licked, and licked bad."

"Oh, well," explained McCarthy, "no wan could understand thim whin they prayed."—[London Spectator.

John Bull Abroad.

THE Paris Liberte has discovered the most "nervy" of English tourists—always a self-confident race. This man entered a well-known restaurant, accompanied by two little girls, ordered a bottle of mineral water and three plates, and began to eat sandwiches, which he had brought with him in his pockets.

The manager, overcome by this outrage, approached him, and said: "I should like to inform you that this is not a——"

"Who are you?" interrupted the Englishman.

"I am the manager," was the reply.

"Oh, you are the manager, are you? That is good. I was just going to send for you. Why isn't the band playing?"

Fixing the Blame.

"AUNTIE, when you were a young girl were you very pretty?"

"Yes, my child, very pretty."

"Were you popular?"

"Oh, yes, very popular. I was the belle of the neighborhood."

"Didn't any young men ever come to call on you?"

"Oh, yes, my dear. Lots of them."

"Then, auntie, why is it that you never married?"

"Nobody ever proposed to me, my dear."

"Why not?"

"I don't know. But I've often thought it must have been the high cost of living that scared the young men off in those days."—[Detroit Free Press.

SHE was angry, and her face revealed the fact.

"What is the matter, dear?" said her husband, as he entered the kitchen.

"You see that?" she replied vehemently, as she raised a mixing bowl in which she had just broken an egg. "That is the second bad egg I have found today. I believe Jim Fletcher keeps all the bad ones he gets in his old store for me!"

"Well, you shouldn't get angry about it, Nellie," said her husband soberly. "You ought to have more sympathy."

"Sympathy!" she echoed. "What do you mean? Sympathy for Jim Fletcher?"

"No, for the eggs," he replied. "Think how long they must have been tryin' to be good."—[Lippincott's Magazine.

They seemed to be the hugest things I had ever laid eyes on outside of the ocean and the mountains. Fremont seemed ridiculously small to my childish eyes, beside them. He was very thin at the time. He and my father became pretty good friends, and had considerable personal correspondence. I remember Fremont very well."

"But about Cahuenga?" I again reminded him.

Don Romulo laughed quietly. "Well, in that great engagement of Cahuenga, there was only one killed—a little donkey. I have forgotten on which side he belonged." And the humorous twinkle returned.

"Was there any resistance offered by the Californians on the morning of January 12, 1847, when Lieut.-Col. Fremont, with his mounted battalion, rode over that twelve-mile stretch of plain into the Cahuenga pass?"

"It might have seemed to threaten," replied Don Romulo, with his quiet smile. "There was every appearance of a numerous and well-entrenched army, with a plentiful supply of formidable artillery. Above the walls of the fortress the points of spears and flying pennons appeared in such numbers as to create the impression, and cause an attacking army not to rush inadvisedly upon its fate. A truce party was sent out to meet Fremont. The Californians, under command of my father, Gen. Andreas Pico, knew that they were not in a position to offer resistance. But they purposed to carry the affair through with dignity, and not to capitulate on the terms which they knew would result if the truth were known. And the truth was the Californians were neither numerous, nor well-equipped. But Col. Fremont made an agreement with Gen. Andreas by which my father and his men were able to retire quietly with such possessions as they deemed advisable, leaving the arsenal of Cahuenga in the hands of Fremont." And again the clear eyes took on the good-natured twinkle that seemed to reflect itself in the eyes of the painting above.

"Then Maj. Bell's account of the episode is true?"

"Practically so. Very few of the histories give an account of it in any detail."

Maj. Horace Bell gives rather a humorous account of settlement between the two commanders. "Gen. Pico proposed to disband his army at Cahuenga," he says, "the officers retaining their private arms. All of the arms, artillery and munitions of war belonging to the Mexican government at Cahuenga should be delivered to Col. Fremont, and he was to be permitted to march without opposition to Los Angeles. After the treaty was signed, Gen. Pico was to have two hours in which to stack his arms and retire his forces from the fortifications. Then Fremont was to march in and possess the spoils. On the other hand, Col. Fremont agreed that the army under Gen. Pico should be permitted to retire peaceably to their homes, and should there remain unmolested, and certain officers who, under Cerbol Barelas, had in September previous violated their paroles theretofore given, should be pardoned; and to this the gringo commander pledged the faith of the gringo government."

Maj. Bell goes on to state that Gen. Pico, with not over forty followers, retired from the fortifications at Cahuenga, the "gringo" conqueror marching in to reap the reward of his victory. The two batteries of artillery consisted of a dozen California live-oak logs, mounted on so many carretas. The further spoils were one old blunderbuss with a date graven on its brazen barrel that "suggested former service in the siege of Granada;" two old flint-lock Spanish horse-pistols, and about forty Mexican ox-goads with flaming red pennons attached.

"I dare say it was something of a disappointment to Col. Fremont," remarked Don Romulo pleasantly. "No, no, my dear, of course I wasn't there—that is, on the ground of 'battle.' But I have heard the story over and over again from my father. And even after this episode, the friendship between him and Fremont was continued at a later date."

Fremont, in his "Memoirs of My Life," gives the following account of the Cahuenga encounter:

"We entered the Pass of San Bernardo on the morning of the 12th, expecting to find the enemy there in force; but the Californians had fallen back before our advance, and the pass was undisputed. In the afternoon we encamped at the mission of San Fernando, the residence of Don Andreas Pi who was, at present, in chief command of the Californian troops. Their encampment was within two miles of the mission, and in the evening Don Jesus, with a message from me, made a visit to Don Andreas. The next morning, accompanied only by Don Jesus, I rode over to the camp of the Californians, and, in a conference with Don Andreas, the important features of a treaty of capitulation were agreed upon.

"A truce was ordered; commissioners on each side were appointed, and on the same day a capitulation agreed upon. This was approved by myself as military commandant representing the United States, and Don Andreas Pico, commander-in-chief of the Californians. With this treaty of Cahuenga hostilities ended and California was left peaceably in our possession, to be finally secured to us by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848."

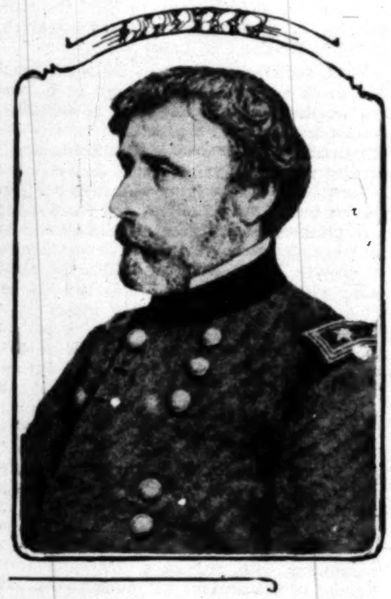
"I am glad to say," writes Commodore Stockton, "that, by the capitulation, we have recovered the gun taken by the insurgents at the sad defeat of Gen. Kearny at San Pasqual."

Willard's history of Los Angeles states that Jesus Pico was sent into the camp of the Californians to urge their surrender to Fremont, rather than to Stockton, for the sake of securing better terms. The articles of capitulation were ratified by the opposing generals on the 13th of January, 1847, "at the Cahuenga ranch house, only a few miles out of Los Angeles." A part of the walls of this house are still standing at the opening of the famous pass of Cahuenga.

"It was agreed that the Californians should surrender their artillery and public arms and should take the parole not to assist in carrying on war against the United States. Such as preferred to go out of the territory into Mexico would be allowed to depart, and those that remained were to be pardoned for their participation in the rebellion, irrespective of whether they had been under parole or not. Until the treaty of peace should be signed between the United States and Mexico, no resident of California was to be compelled to take the oath of allegience. The 'public arms' thus secured amounted to a handsome total of six muskets and two diminutive cannon, the 'woman's gun' and one other."

Other histories kindly shroud the paucity of the spoils. This comes the nearest of any to Maj. Bell's dozen California live oak logs, one blunderbuss, the two old flint-lock Spanish horse pistols, and the forty Mexican ox-goads surmounted by their flaming red pennons.

Whatever the facts of Cahuenga, the unquestioned friendship of the opposing commanders remains, as also does the unquestioned and intrepid spirit of the "Pathfinder."



Variable and New Stars.

Prof. Eric Doolittle, answering a question about stars in the Christmas number of St. Nicholas, says:

"There are many stars of the sky which vary in brightness in a remarkable manner. Every star is a great hot sun, millions of times larger than our little earth, and some of the stars which look to us to be single stars are really two suns so close together that they look to us like one. Sometimes one of these stars is very bright, and revolving around this bright star there is another which is less bright. And sometimes the darker star passes regularly between the bright one and us, and so hides the bright star partly from us. In the northern sky there is such a system called Algol, or the Demon Star. Every two days and twenty hours the darker companion hides the bright sun partly from our view, and so cuts off five-sixths of the light of the bright star. We see the star growing dimmer and dimmer for about three hours; at the end of this time the center of the darker star is directly in front of the center of the bright one. Then the darker one moves steadily past the star, and in time the star that had been dimmed shines out in full brightness. A little less than three days afterward we see the same thing happen again. But none of these stars shine so bright as first magnitude stars, nor are they made so faint by the darker star as to be wholly invisible to the eye.

"Sometimes a 'new' star blazes out in the heavens. Perhaps, when this happens, a dark star has 'plowed' through one of the nebulous clouds in space, and its surface is thus heated by friction from a dark crust to a brilliant vaporous mass. Or perhaps when we see such a new star it means that two stars have run into each other, or passed very near each other. Exactly what happens when one of these new stars shines out we do not yet know."

Bulletin on Acacias.

VALUABLE PUBLICATION BY THE GOVERNMENT.

NO OTHER bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture in recent years is of so great importance as one just out of press, entitled "An Economic Study of Acacias" by Charles Howard Shinn, Forest Examiner. This bulletin is of peculiar and unusual value to the people of this State, as it is written by a Californian from a California point of view, based upon the lifelong experience of the author among these trees. Prof. Shinn was formerly, for many years, upon the horticultural staff of the University of California, was inspector of forestry stations for that institution a quarter century ago and therefore had under his direct charge many of the experiments with acacia planting of which he writes in the bulletin under consideration. Though close to the allotted "three score and ten," Prof. Shinn is a Native Son of the Golden West and his father before him was a noted horticulturist, introducing to local culture many of the fruit-bearing trees that have since so materially added to the fame of California.

With such an author, in intimate touch and close acquaintance with all of us who are workers in the same field, this bulletin cannot fail to prove a great and lasting benefit to the whole State of California and a careful perusal of its contents cannot result otherwise than in a fuller and deeper appreciation and a far wider use and more extensive planting of this great family of wonderful trees, than which none are better adapted to growth in all parts of California under more widely-varying conditions than is possible with any other genus or group.

Scattered over the world are about 150 species of Acacia, in addition to more than 300 native to Australia. One important species, Acacia koa, is native to Hawaii, and a fine specimen until recently stood in Elysian Park, close to the main drive through the so-called "Botanic Garden." The bulletin states that a careful canvass of California nursery catalogues showed the remarkable number of 103 species for sale in this State. This is a far greater number than "ye editor" would have expected to find or is familiar with, though a close and active student of the acacias for many years. The statement is also made that there are more acacias and more kinds of acacias in Golden Gate Park than at any other one place, consisting of about half a million trees in sixty species. A most interesting and instructive record is given of the successful efforts to bind the Golden Gate sands through use of the shrubbery species of acacias and Albizzia lopanta, the latter voluntarily creeping down almost within the ocean spray. More of this work should be done along our southern coast beach resorts, and this department will aim to give, in following issues, a list of some of the species, known to thrive under local conditions, that will arrest the shifting sands in local territory, whether these are close to the sea or some distance away.

DATE NURSERY AT THERMAL.

Imported Date Palms in California.

AS SHOWING the extent of commercial date-growing in California we give herewith an illustration of a nursery at Thermal, in the Coachella Valley, containing 13,000 imported date shoots. These must remain, in nursery rows, under observation and examination of United States customs inspectors, for the period of one year before removal is allowed, and only then in case they are clear of any and all diseases and insect pests. More of these palms were brought to the United States in 1913 than in the entire previous history of the industry.

A Fine Pine.

ONE of the finest pines for local use, one that should be planted with the tried and approved Pinus halepensis, is P. excelsa, from the Himalayas. There is no stock of it for sale in local nurseries, so far as the writer is aware. If any grower has a stock of it he is indeed fortunate for the few trees known locally are certainly jewels in the great collection of pines known here. It is of a rich bluish-green with both branches and leaves long and pendulous, of a loose graceful habit, a splendid palm for the home grounds and very hardy in California.

[London Opinion:] Mrs. Baye: She is simply mad on the subject of germs, and sterilizes or filters everything in the house.

Visitor: How does she get along with her family?

Mrs. Baye: Oh, even her relations are strained.

A Gigantic Native Coreopsis.

NEARLY every reader of these columns knows Coreopsis lanceolata and its varieties, common as they are to the gardens of every State and nearly every country.

There is native to Southern California the giant of the genus, though very few indeed are familiar with it. It occurs sparingly on the Channel Islands, and is still more rare along the coast from San Luis Obispo to Santa Monica, and grows nowhere far from the sea. It has a hard half-woody bare stem often three to four inches in diameter and four to six, rarely more, feet in height. The leaves and flowers are all borne in a tuft at the apex of the giant stalk. It is now known to science as Coreopsis gigantea, though for many years considered a Leptosyne.

CLEANSING PROBLEMS.

White, Silky Materials.

[New York Sun:] As all sorts of white silky materials are apt to be yellowed by continued laundering the following plan is worth trying:

Procure a piece of good quality white soap, make a strong cold suds, immerse the article and allow it to soak for half an hour. Then wash the silk well between the hands, but do not rub it on a board. If there are any badly soiled spots scrub them lightly with a soft brush. Rinse in several waters until not a trace of soap is visible, squeeze out some of the water, shake the silk well, though gently, and hang it where the air will blow on it; do not let the sun shine on white silk. When nearly dry, take down the silk, fold smooth and press on the wrong side with a warm (not hot) iron until perfectly dry.

Never twist or wring silk to get out the moisture; simply squeeze it gently between the hands.

Pongee and light-colored rajah may be washed in the same way; only wait until they are bone-dry before the ironing begins.

Milk for Gloves.

A simple and effective way to clean kid gloves is to draw them on the hands and go over them with a clean cloth dipped in skim milk, says the New Haven Journal-Courier. Wear them until quite dry. Or moisten a small sponge or piece of cloth in skim milk, rub it on a cake of castile soap and with this sponge the gloves until they are quite clean. Wear until they are dry.

To Freshen Coat Collars.

[National Magazine:] Apply turpentine to the soiled places letting the fluid dry, and apply more several times, then gently scrape off the loosened dirt. Wet again with turpentine and scrape, repeating this until all spots have been removed. Then sponge with a clean cloth and turpentine, or better still, alcohol or chloroform, and wipe dry. A fresher and smoother looking surface is obtained when alcohol or chloroform is used, as these two substances evaporate more quickly than does turpentine.

To Remove Mud Stains.

Carbonate of soda will remove the most obstinate of mud stains. Rub off with a cloth or flannel dipped in the soda, then press the wrong side of the fabric with a hot iron.

IN THE BATHROOM.

Decorative Tub Cover.

[Baltimore American:] A covering for the bathtub made of some thin, inexpensive material will be found a great aid in keeping the tub clean. It may be made of white and blue cloth, or any color which predominates in the room, and of percale, calico or white cheese cloth, with the hem feather-stitched in the desired color. It should be cut one-fourth of a yard larger than the tub and additional allowance made for the hem to permit of its being drawn completely over the rim and held close about the tub by means of a rubber elastic run in the hem. If a fancier finish is desired, space may be made in the hem by a second stitching half an inch below the other stitching, and the drawstring run through this space, which will leave a frill below.

To Cleanse Brush and Comb.

Draw enough warm water in the washbowl to cover the bristles, but not the back of the hair brush, add three or four tablespoonfuls of ammonia (household, not bath, ammonia,) shake and swish the brushes around in the water, then rinse in a similar mixture, lastly, rinsing again in hot water, then stand the brushes in the sun by an open window, bristles down, on a towel, to dry. Whisk brooms, clothes brushes, shoe brushes and any other kind, may be cleansed in the same manner without injuring the backs or breaking the bristles.

To clean combs one may remove all dust with a hairpin or piece of paper, then scrub with a nail brush in soapy water, to which a small amount of ammonia has been added. Rinse in hot water and then in cold water. It is better not to wash a comb very often, as it is apt to make the teeth split. Dry cleaning is usually the best. Push a stiff piece of paper or thin cardboard between each tooth, working it backward and forward, or a fine string may be moved up and down between the teeth.

PACKING AND MOVING.

To Protect the Hat.

[Indianapolis News:] If a hat must go in a trunk, sew it firmly to a square of cardboard and tack the corners securely to the bottom of the tray. Cover the hat with tissue paper and put crumpled wads of the paper all about it to help hold it in place.

Tagging the Furniture.

A lady who is an efficient housekeeper says that her practice in moving is to tag every article of furniture before it leaves the old home. She has already planned where each thing is to go in the new home, and thus heavy articles do not have to be moved a second time, but are carried in to their new position by the movers.

HEARTSEASE.

Domestic Contentment.

[Boston Cooking School Magazine:] In further pursuit of domestic contentment, perhaps the new and even the old recruits in the connubial ranks can do no better than cultivate that other saving grace—tact. Insignificant and unassuming though it appears, it still remains a matrimonial blue ribbon winner and can boast an unblemished record of some of the happiest victories.

The Symphony.

God, musing, made the law, his instrument,
And set the wheels in motion with his word;
And law evolves the changing universe,
Self-moving, self-adjusting, self-sustained.

Law swerves not its action, varying not
One jot nor one iota in its course;
It sets the whirling atoms in the deeps,
Fashioned upon the pattern o' the suns,
And sows the empyrean with circling stars,
From unplumbed systems in the atom's depths
One method and one purpose govern all,
To that immeasurable and ultimate Star
Which is the sun of all the ordered spheres
That move in music round the Throne of God.

Wheel within wheel revolving ceaselessly
The mighty system followeth the law,
In one divine, unbroken harmony;
One, in the atom's boundless depths revealed;
One, in the framework of this earthly form;
One, in the Star of Heaven immeasurable!

Diseases to Which Poultry is Heir.

By Prof. F. H. Stoneburn.

Prevention Easy.

CURE MUCH MORE DIFFICULT TO ATTAIN.

POULTRY flesh is, unfortunately, heir to many diseases, and poultrymen must expect more or less mortality among their flocks. In some cases the percentage of deaths runs so high that all profits are lost; in others the death rate is so low as to be negligible. The difference is due to several things—vigor of the birds, method of housing and management and the sanitary precautions adopted.

Let it be thoroughly understood that prevention of diseases is better than cure. It is easier to keep disease away from the flock than to overcome it if it once secures a foothold. The adoption of very simple precautions will usually keep the birds in vigorous health.

Primarily, select fowls of the health type. Cull out and market the weaklings. The latter are usually poor producers, and are a menace to their healthy companions, since they are more susceptible to disease. It will almost invariably be noticed that the specimens lacking in vigor are first attacked, and from them the disease, if contagious, is communicated to the rest of the flock.

Then see to it that the houses are dry, well ventilated, free from draughts and clean. Remove accumulated droppings at frequent intervals. Also damp, filthy or musty litter. Give no mouldy grain or other unsuitable feed.

Finally, disinfect the quarters from time to time, using freely any good commercial disinfectant or whitewash. Keep the feed and water receptacles clean by scalding or washing with strong disinfectant. Vigorous birds so cared for will usually remain in good health unless exposed to disease through the introduction of stock secured from other sources. The latter danger may be avoided by quarantining in separate quarters all purchased stock until certain that it is entirely free from disease.

Poultrymen are divided in opinion as to the advisability of treating sick birds individually. In the opinion of the writer, it does not pay to do so unless the specimen is unusually valuable. Flock treatment for simple disorders is advisable, since this requires but little time on the part of the poultryman. As a rule, if a bird is so sick that it requires individual treatment the chances are that it will not be of much further value even if apparently cured, and the time and money spent in "curing" it will be largely wasted.

Most experienced poultrymen recognize the truth of the above, but the amateur is more than likely to hold other views and become converted only after costly experience. It must be confessed that it does require considerable nerve to consistently destroy ailing birds, and it takes much time to convince the beginner of the advisability of such a procedure.

It must not be drawn from the above that simple colds, chickenpox or ordinary digestive disturbances are sufficient causes for signing the death warrant of the affected individuals, but true roup, cholera and other stubborn and contagious diseases assuredly are.

If any sick birds are to be treated, a hospital should be provided. Any small coop or room will serve the purpose, provided it is dry and sunny. This should be fitted with the required number of small cages and food and water dishes for each. If the cages are numbered and the equipment for each given a similar number, it will be an easy matter to keep the latter from being returned to the wrong cage.

All uneaten food, surplus water, droppings and litter from the hospital should be so disposed of that there will be no possibility of the contagion spreading. The hospital and everything in it should often be thoroughly disinfected. Dead birds should be burned. Ailing individuals should be removed from the flock the instant they are observed and destroyed or placed in the hospital, according to circumstances. Delay in this may result in serious loss.

A few of the diseases which attack adult fowls during the fall and winter months are discussed below and accepted methods of treatment outlined. Most poultry-supply houses carry proprietary remedies especially prepared for the treatment of these diseases, and many poultrymen prefer to use these instead of going to the trouble of having special prescriptions compounded.

Simple colds are common and need cause no trouble unless permitted to develop into something more serious. When neglected they often change in character and become difficult to handle.

The cause of colds, or simple catarrh, is easily ascertained. The disorder frequently appears during changes of weather, especially when the atmosphere is damp. Exposure to cold, dampness in the house, overheating in crowded coops at night, all bring it on. When pullets are brought in from free range in the fall and placed in tight houses the trouble is very likely to appear.

Prominent symptoms are dullness, diminished appetites, watery discharge from eyes and nostrils. The latter is often called to the poultryman's attention by the accumulation of dust and fine particles of litter about the eyes and nostrils, this material sticking in the discharged matter.

Quick and simple treatment will often cause the trouble to disappear. Ventilate the buildings freely. Let in plenty of fresh air and sunshine. See to it that the litter is free from dampness. Use permanganate of potash in the drinking water, just enough to turn the water a deep wine color. (This treatment used during weather changes will often head off an epidemic of colds.)

In many cases kerosene oil is effective. Pour a small amount into the drinking water, covering the whole surface with a film of the oil. When drinking the birds get the oil into throat, nostrils and about the eyes and beneficial results follow.

Bronchitis is distinguished by rapid breathing and cough, followed by a peculiar rattling or bubbling in the throat. This is most easily observed when the birds are on the roost. Inhalation of dust i cause bronchitis, or it may result i development of an ordinary cold.

Treat as for colds. Give a drink made by steeping flaxseed In severe cases give ten drops of in a teaspoonful of castor oil, repeat dose in six hours and stopping ment when the bowels become loos

Roup, or contagious catarrh, spread and causes heavy loss. In form it kills many birds. When it a chronic character it renders the less, either for egg production or Japanese Produce Remarkable Poultry.

BY EDWIN MEGARGEE.

The Black-Tailed Japanese Bantam, as its name implies, had its origin in Japan, as some of its odd characteristics would clearly indicate. The almost uncanny ability of the Japanese in producing both weird and beautiful creations is well known. Witness the dwarf cedars, the Phoenix fowl, the odd and beautiful varieties of goldfish and their quaint spaniels, which are all so greatly admired. Therefore, it is not to be wondered at that they should, from unpromising material, produce this wonderful little breed of fowls.

Just what steps were taken to create and fix the type cannot be told. Inquiries sent to the government authorities in Japan elicited the very meager information that they were produced by crossing a number of native breeds of bantams.

The Japanese breed these birds in many combinations of colors, but of these the varieties which breed true to type are the pure white, pure black and the black-tailed white, which is the subject of the illustration. Though the white and black varieties are bred somewhat in America, the black-tailed is far better known here.

These miniature fowls present a very charming and quaint appearance. Their ridiculously short legs, their flowing tails, carried aloft like a banner, and their long wings with tips brushing the ground, make an extraordinary picture, and one which appeals to all lovers of the odd and beautiful.

When properly bred the black-tailed Japanese bantam possesses the following points:

The head is large, the eyes prominent, the comb fairly large, single, with five points. Wattles and earlobes medium in size and smooth in texture. Neck short and gracefully curved. The wings long, broad and drooping. The back very short, the breast full and round, the body short and deep with short fluff. The shanks very short, giving the bird a crouching appearance.

In the male the saddle feathers are very abundant, the tail very large and carried so upright that it almost touches the back of the head. The sickles are very long, pointed and slightly curved.

In both sexes the body color is white, the tail black and white in the male and black in the female, as shown. Cocks should weigh twenty-six ounces; cockerels, twenty-two; hens, twenty-two, pullets, twenty.

As utility poultry these little Japs are without value, though breeders of bantams claim that what their bodies lack in size they make up in tenderness and flavor. A small flock of these dwarfs may be kept in very limited quarters at little or no cost, and at once serve as pets for children and adults and regularly contribute dainties to the table.

BEAUTIFUL BLACK-TAILED JAPANESE BANTAMS.

The Japanese have a well-earned reputation as creators of odd and attractive varieties of plants and animals, and their bantams do not detract from this. The Black-Tailed Japanese Bantam is bred in America to practically the same standard as that used by its originators, and it is the most popular of the several varieties of the breed. These fowls attract attention because of their oddity. They are short-legged and short-backed, with wing tips brushing the ground. In both sexes the tails are large and carried upright. Much of their beauty is due to the striking contrast in color, the body being white and the tails black. In the male, both sickle feathers and tail coverts have a narrow white edging. In all varieties the comb is single. The desired weights are as follows: Cock, 26 ounces; hen, 22; cockerel, 22; pullet, 20. While these birds have no practical value as producers of market eggs or meat, they may be made to pay a profit from the sale of hatching eggs, exhibition and breeding stock. In any event, they are an ornament to the place, and make attractive and amusing pets.

Scratchings

[New York Sun:] Dust baths, so called, are a never ending source of chicken comfort. A roomy box partly filled with road dust, sifted loam or coal ashes, and placed in a sunny spot will prove to be a very popular resort. Few flocks are entirely free from lice, and though these do comparatively little harm during the cold months they are the source of continuous annoyance. A thorough dusting of the fowls occasionally with a good lice killing powder will subdue the pests.

[New York Sun:] Dried beet pulp, a by-product of the beet sugar factories, may be purchased at most large feed stores. It consists of the substance of the sugar beet from which the sugar and moisture have been extracted, and in appearance resembles certain flaked breakfast foods. After being soaked for a time in hot water these flakes swell up and look like pieces of freshly chopped beets. Most hens soon learn to eat this material very readily, though some refuse it for a long time. In such cases the addition of a little salt will often correct the trouble. The advantages possessed by the beet pulp are many. Its cost is low, it is easily prepared, and it may be stored for any length of time in a dry place without risk of deterioration. It is by far the most convenient form of green food, though its efficiency is doubtless less than that of fresh vegetables and sprouted oats.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] My advice to the beginner, says Charles V. Keeler, who wants to start right, is to buy the best birds your purse will allow up to April 1—good line-bred breeding stock, bred to reproduce itself. After April 1 and up to June 1 I advise the beginner to buy eggs. As a rule, if the beginner pays a good price for eggs he will obtain them from line-bred stock that has been properly mated and that possess the power to reproduce themselves in standard characteristics. More than one customer of mine has defeated me in the showroom for one or more prizes with stock hatched from eggs I sold him. This is as it should be. If the eggs are right, and the stock hatched therefrom receives proper care, the beginner stands a chance of winning even the first season's show in competition with old-time breeders. And this is as it should be.

[Baltimore American:] Travelers in Europe often grow enthusiastic over the superior quality of the table poultry found in certain countries and frequently come to believe that the superiority is due to the breeds of fowls generally bred there. Of course this is a mistake. No better chickens grow under the sun than are found in America. The difference in quality, then, lies solely in the method adopted in "finishing" them before placing them on the market. Too often—in fact in most cases—American poultrymen simply grow their stock to market size and then dispose of it without going to the trouble of further preparation. In England, France and Belgium, and of late in Canada, the poultry growers who cater to the high class trade pay special attention to the fattening process and thus make their market stock plump, tender and fine flavored.

[New York Press:] Barred Plymouth Rocks of superior exhibition quality are not easily bred. The very fine, even barring is difficult to produce, and the problem is one which is most fascinating. The ambitious souls who seek new worlds to conquer in poultry breeding will find a fertile field in the production of this magnificent fowl. Success in this line brings satisfaction, honor and financial reward.

Objectionable.

[Houston Post:] "Let me introduce you to the most honest young man I have ever known."

"But mamma doesn't want me to meet any poor young men."

Convinced.

[Birmingham Age-Herald:] "Did you come back on an all-steel train?"

"When the waiters and porters finished plucking me, I felt sure that it was."

HOW THE TIDE TURNED FOR ANGELO GIOVANNI.

By May C. Ringwalt.

IT WAS bitter cold in the bread line—and in Angelo Giovanni's heart.

The same heart that had been so warm with hope and happiness nine little months ago when he had left Italy for the Land of Promise to lay claim to his share of the milk and honey and pomegranates.

It was Italy that the big, lustrous, brown eyes were dreaming of now as Angelo stood there at the end of the line, shivering and stamping numb feet.

The Italy of sunshine and flowers, of olive groves and of vine-clad hills.

He had been poor in Italy, of course, but never abjectly miserable, never abjectly hungry.

The nostrils of the nose fashioned after the same pattern as Dante's quivered, and the grim set line of lips grew tremulous with desire.

Again he smelt the fragrance of his beloved garlic; again in tantalizing imagination his beloved spaghetti tickled his palate.

The waiting line shuffled forward, the advance toward the soup kitchen, half way up the block around the still distant corner, so slow as to be an almost imperceptible movement.

The brows of the Italian met in a dark scowl.

Behind the scowl the poor, ignorant brain was groping to untie that master knot of fate, to answer the unanswerable question of the universe—why the other man succeeds.

Tito, for example, who had come over in the steerage with him and now owned his own fruit stand, while he was a beggar in the bread line.

Jerk by jerk the line shuffled on, till at last Angelo stood at the corner crossway.

As though a great door had blown open at his back, the icy wind swept down the cross street and began to pelt him with stinging, sharp-edged flakes of snow.

An expression of utter despair settled dully upon the poverty-pinched face of the man in the bread line, the hunted look of an animal at bay.

The child of sunny Italy had lived through one American blizzard. But he could never face another. And he would not. The Land of Promise may have gone back on its word, but at least it still offered a way of escape. The river was near at hand. And there was no waiting line of detention there. He knew a dark, secret place out at the end of a pier where he could——

A yelp of pain broke through the dull ache of his thoughts—a ripple of ugly oaths and hoarse laughter following the little yellow alley dog kicked down the line till it spun in a whimpering heap at Angelo's feet.

The blood suddenly leaped warm again in the Italian's frozen veins, anger blazed in the despairing eyes.

"You kick ze lee-tle dog once more again," he yelled, excitedly shaking his fist," and I fight you—fight you to ze death!"

Again ugly oaths and hoarse laughter rippled down the line, but Angelo did not hear them.

He heard only the whimpering cry of the little yellow alley dog that he stooped to gather up in his arms.

"Ze skin and ze bones," he crooned over him, "and one big emptiness in ze inside!"

The human eyes of the dog and the dog-like eyes of the man met in understanding.

The icy sweep of wind grew fiercer, thicker and thicker hurtled the snow, but Angelo Giovanni was no longer conscious of the bitter cold, for love for the starved little animal shivering close in his arms lay warm at his heart.

And at last when he filed in at the open door of the soup kitchen and stood at the counter that ran the length of the room, in spite of the hunger gnawing at his own vitals, the little yellow alley dog had the first spoonful of broth from the steaming bowl set before him.

"Here, you thankless dago, you!" shouted a man from behind the counter. "Ain't you ashamed of yourself, wasting good soup on a pup!"

But the eyes of a woman filling the bowls at the spigot of a huge boiler had also been cast upon the thankless dago—eyes that saw deeper and truer.

"If you haven't any pressing engagement," she said in a low voice, leaning over the counter as Angelo gulped his last swallow of soup, "I'd like a word with you."

Giovanni looked up with a frightened start—to meet a kind smile and a hand outstretched to pat the yellow alley dog's rough little head.

"It's about a job," she said reassuringly. "We need an extra dishwasher, and I thought maybe you'd like the place." She leaned still nearer. "There'd always be a lot of soup bones and scraps, you know, for the puppy."

No Tail Lights for Sheep.

[London Correspondent New York Sun:] A discussion upon the questions of "tail lights for sheep" took place in the King's Bench Divisional Court this week, when R. J. Catchpole, a Suffolk farmer, appealed against a decision of Judge Wilmot, the county court judge at Halesworth.

The farmer brought an action against the owner of an automobile for damages caused by the alleged negligent driving of a motor car, whereby three sheep of a flock were killed. The county court judge dismissed the case, holding as he said he had done before, that it was contributory negligence on the part of the owner of the sheep to allow them to be driven along the high road after dark without lights.

Mr. Dodson, for the appellant, said it was a question of tail lights for sheep.

Acute Nasal Catarrh.

A cold, according to the majority of people, is a sort of necessary evil; something to be expected every winter, sometimes once a season and more often many times, but always at least once. Just as regularly as the winter rolls around most people "catch" colds.

Although considered by many as a minor disease, the effects of a cold in the head, or for that matter any sort of a cold, are most far-reaching. Just as drops of water will wear away the hardest surface, so will a cold undermine the physical condition and many serious diseases result therefrom.

Among the dangerous diseases resulting from a cold in the head are pneumonia, pleurisy, catarrh of the respiratory tract, oedema or swelling of the lungs, earache, catarrh of the ethmoid or sphenoid cavities or frontal sinus, causing increased and severe frontal headaches, long after the cold has apparently disappeared; or a similar condition of the antrum of Highmore causing tenderness over one or both cheeks. When the catarrh extends to the pharynx or larynx a cough follows and many times the lungs become so delicate and sensitive to microbe infection that it is not at all unusual for galloping consumption to finish the deadly work the cold in the head started. Then, too, the catarrhal infection many times spreads to the stomach and severe gastric troubles result, the patient never tracing this disease back to its origin—the "annual cold."

The first step, then, is to guard against taking the first cold, or if you do take it, then be wise and lose it just as soon as you possibly can. Use the ounce of prevention and save the pound of medicine you will have to consume unless you act quickly and rid your system of the first germs of the cold.

To begin with, one of the best rules to follow during the season when colds are prevalent, is to always remove your outer wraps when you enter the house. Thus the atmospherical change which is the most frequent cause and the most influential can be, in a measure, avoided. The exposure of the back of the neck to a draught of cold air or the feet and ankles to cold and dampness are among the frequent causes. It is an established fact that one takes cold more readily from the back than from the front. Perhaps it is because we are accustomed to face currents of air, but whatever the reason, I strongly advise any one susceptible to colds to avoid a draught on the back of the neck as he would the plague. It should be the rule of every one that if it is impossible to move out of a draught, to at least turn about and face it. The chance of taking cold is in that way minimized. People are apt to put extra covering across their chests and neglect their backs when by all means, if in danger of taking cold, they should equally guard the back.

Always breathing through the nose when out in the cold or dampness is a very helpful rule, but in spite of all these precautions, there are times when the system is impaired by some defect in the working of the intestinal tract and a cold settles its deadly talons on the unwary victim. Then, if the long wearisome struggle with the cold is to be avoided, one must act very speedily. The sooner after one realizes a cold is imminent that one begins treatment the more quickly will the disease respond.

Perhaps a few words on the various symptoms of an attack of acute catarrh or cold in the head will not come amiss.

A "cold in the head" is usually preceded by a feeling of lassitude or weariness and more or less frontal headache, then occur irregular chilly sensations in the back followed by more or less feverishness and an uncomfortable feeling of dryness in the nose, followed shortly by the inclination to sneeze. Of course by the time this stage is reached most people realize that they have "caught" cold.

My advice to all who can do so is to go home immediately. Don't wait until the day's work is finished. Then it will be too late to cure the cold with simple remedies It is far better to lose, say half a day's work, than to be incapacitated for good work for at least a week and many times two weeks. If the rule of taking every incipient cold at the first warning sneeze and routing it by simple methods is followed, one's general health will be greatly benefited.

Let me suppose you will follow my advice. You go home and, as soon as you can, get into a very hot bath in a very warm room. You stay in the bath until you feel warm and comfortable. During the bath drink something warm, say a cup of hot tea, or a hot lemonade, or if you wish a hot toddy. Then you hustle into bed and stay there until you feel your circulation has become normal. I would advise remaining in your room for the balance of the day. Eat plenty, for food helps to equalize the body temperature. After your circulation has become in a measure normal, take a good laxati Senna tea, the old-fashioned remedy which our grandmothers gave, is as good a laxative for a cold as any I could recommend. This should be taken immediately after the hot bath and always taken very hot. If a bath is not available take a hot mustard footbath and the hot senna tea or a hot tea made of couch grass, perl. better known as "dog's grass," one of the best known remedies among the peasant class of Europe. These are old-fashioned remedies but they are just as effective today as they were in the years gone by. Unless the cold has gotten too great a start on the system, I never advise the taking of drugs. Attend to your cold when it starts and you will find no need for drugs.

A cold is practically a disarrangement of the circulation. The first thing, then, is to get the circulation back to normal. This done, care should be exercised for a few days as to what one eats. Eat plenty, but see that your system does not have an opportunity to become clogged. The old expression, "Feed a cold and starve a fever," is to my mind a good one to follow. Of course great care should be taken for a few days, keeping the body well protected when out in the cold. At this time see to it that the back of your neck is always warm. Put an extra covering over your entire back. Perhaps you will say all this is a great deal of trouble, but remember how much trouble and also expense a cold is when it has gotten a start and how deucedly inconvenient it is as well.

Exercise is a splendid thing with which to ward off a cold. During the Civil War the soldiers on march had no opportunity to jump into a hot bath and rid their systems of colds, so they resorted to exercise, and in many cases it was effective. When a soldier felt a cold coming on he would take violent exercise and if possible a long tramp, well wrapped up. This was said to help keep off a cold.

One thing I should like to emphasize and keep on emphasizing until every one heard me, and that is the use of soft gauze or paper handkerchiefs for those suffering from cold in the head. This precaution is a necessary one and if everyone heeded it a great many of the colds resulting from contagion could be avoided. If you have a cold, and you have any of the milk of human kindness in your make-up, you will demonstrate the fact by getting a supply of paper handkerchiefs and using them. Fire burns up millions of germs that might otherwise be distributed. Therefore do your part and let the fire do the rest.

Radium Therapy for Cancer.

Although a great many pathologists have little faith in radium treatment for cancer, such as is now being conducted by eminent surgeons on Congressman Robert G. Bremner of Passaic, N. J., I am a firm believer in the efficacy of radium if resorted to at an early stage of the disease.

I have seen some very remarkable cures effected with this wonderful mineral on various skin diseases. I spent much time at the Radium Institute of Rue d'Artois, in Paris, France, and studied the effect of radium therapy on various diseases. One of the cases I recall distinctly was that of a woman afflicted with a cancer of the forehead. The cancer, when I first saw it, was about the size of a dollar. It was being treated with radium and the woman had been in the institute for four months when I first began watching the case. I spent over two months on this one case and during that time the cancer turned from brown to a grayish white color and grew perceptibly smaller. The infected cells seemed to be replaced by healthy ones from beneath. The treatment was by means of a lead plate that fitted over the forehead. In this plate was a circular opening that came over the cancer. The radium, of which an infinitesimal quantity was used, was mixed with a kind of varnish and spread over a circular disk just a bit larger than the opening over the epithelioma. The marked improvement I saw in this case leads me to state that if taken in time I believe radium will have a salutary effect on such a growth.

Some eminent surgeons say that cancer is contagious while many deny it. Others believe cancer is a local infection because it has been inoculated from one animal to another of the same species and if this can be brought about experimentally they can see no reason why it cannot happen accidentally. Tillmanns, who spent years studying the cause of cancers, says there is no evidence of a bacterial origin of epithelioma. That the parasitic origin has not been proved and protozoa have not certainly been found.

Cancer, it has been demonstrated, can be transferred from one part to another part of the same individual, or from one individual to another of the same species, but never to one of a different species. Although very rare, it is possible for cancer to be spread by contagion, but because it is possible to sometimes transfer cancer this does not by any means prove that the disease is parasitic or infectious; it merely shows that tissue has been successfully transplanted.

Functions of the Pineal Gland.

The investigations of the function of the pineal gland, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association, have yielded the following as probable: An interference with the metabolism of fat is often found in connection with pathologic states of the pineal body, the preponderance of evidence indicating that obesity is connected with a hypofunction of the gland. The changes due to disturbance of this function take place in young subjects, principally boys under 7 years of age and consist in abnormal tallness, unwonted growth of the hair, premature sexual and mental development and early maturity. These changes usually are associated with symptoms of brain tumor and seem to depend in most cases on a destructive lesion of growth of the pineal body.

It is evident that these changes are similar to those that have been observed in affections of the pituitary body.

That's One on Me.

A READER of the Times Illustrated Weekly kindly reminds me that I got a little mixed on my scriptural quotation—not on the quotation itself (Old Version,) but I gave credit to Pilate when I should have given credit to King Agrippa.

That reminds me—Shakespeare seldom made a correct quotation from the Bible, but he had a good reason; as there were no Bibles in his day except those in the churches, and they were chained, he depended upon memory, and even Shakespeare slipped a cog now and then.

But I have no such excuse, as I have an Unabridged and a Bible ever within reach, and because I criticised Editor Lee of Health Culture for using the word "laundried" for "laundered" he says "Warman must keep a spelling-book on his desk."

Cardiac Diseases Among Soldiers.

Some remarkable statistics of the prevalence of heart disease among the soldiers engaged in the Civil War have been gathered. According to these statistics organic disease of the heart was rare, only 3778 cases being registered as having been taken on sick report among the white troops during the five and one sixth years, and no doubt in many of these the disability existed before enlistment. The records of discharges, however, show that no less than 10,636 men were lost to the service on account of heart disease. The difference between these figures is believed to be connected in a general way with the large number of cases of acute rheumatism that were reported. One writer has shown that of thirty cases of organic heart disease, taken indiscriminately from his note-books, one-half were attributable to rheumatism, six antedated the enlistment of the men, four were sequent to pneumonia, one to measles, and two to the fatigue of hard marching, while in two no probable cause was manifested.

A functional condition known as irritable heart was a recognized result of active field service, and among the heart affections this was the most notable product of the war. A transition from irritability to hypertrophy was noted. These conditions were attributed to over action of the heart during engagements, the result of nervous excitement and anticipation of danger. Many cases of irritable heart were received into the general hospitals after the continued exertion, anxieties and excitement of the seven days' fight from Richmond to Harrison's Landing, Va.

Why We Eat Meat.

Scientific research has never solved the problem of why we eat meat satisfactorily to either party, but Prof. Rubner, a German privy councillor, undertakes to point out why we eat meat—if we do —and who of us ought to and who ought not to. Adults, he says, eat meat in order to get a sufficient supply of nitrogen containing albumen. As he puts it:

"Albumen has two important functions: material and dynamic. It is the basis of all the specific nutritive processes of the cells. If a minimum of about an ounce is not provided the cells die. Under natural conditions it is usually only nursing infants who exist with this low provision of albumen. . . . If albumen in excess of the nitrogen minimum is consumed it merely yields energy.

"Since the child, a growing organism, needs no more albumen than the minimum contained in milk, the balance can not be disturbed so long as growth is continued, since this minimum provides for growth. In emergencies the organism falls back on the nitrogen supplied for growth, which of course causes a temporary checking of that growth. But in the adult the relation between albumen and the organs is entirely different. For the adult a minimum of albumen is not the normal condition. The [illegible]itive processes are accomplished slowly and only with larger quantities of albumen. Hence a loss suffered by the organs of the adult is replaced very slowly even in favorable conditions. In daily life we must allow for accidental injuries to the organs and be able to restore them rapidly. Hence we need a considerable excess over the minimum. An insufficient provision of nitrogen causes loss to the cells, especially in the muscles. This danger, however, is not so great among hard-working men as among the inactive, apparently because the working organ is able to utilize more fully even a small excess of nutriment than the passive organ."

In the tropics Prof. Rubner says heavy meat eating is not advisable and laborers there can thrive on vegetable food poor in nitrogen. Persons engaged in arduous brain work insist on the appetizing quality of their food, he says, because they are not performing muscular labor, and their appetite is frequently capricious. Physicians always recognize meat as one of the best means of stimulating a jaded appetite. It is known also from physiological experiments that scarcely any other form of food acts so favorably on the processes of digestion.

Victory for the Osteopaths.

The war of the old school against the new school physicians has received a setback in Illinois. The question was over the right of osteopaths to practice surgery, and prosecution was begun by the State Board of Health, composed of members of the old school of drug users. At the conclusion of the trial the court instructed the jury to bring in a verdict favoring the osteopaths.

Post Set by Jeff Davis.

[New York Sun:] After investigations, continued at intervals for a period extending over several years by Dr. W. Germain and Joe Kirby of Sioux Falls, S. D., an iron post situated in the middle of a road east and south of the village of Rowena, east of Sioux Falls, has been identified as a mark set by Jefferson Davis, later President of the Southern Confederacy, to designate the junction points of Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa.

At the time of placing the historic post in its present position Jefferson Davis was the head of the Federal army in the Northwest and was stationed at a military post situated on the present site of Prairie du Chien, Wis. This was several years before the commencement of the Civil War. Davis was directed by the War Department to establish the boundaries of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Dakota Territory. The post was driven into position in 1859 and has remained there ever since, the government never finding it necessary to change the boundary, so accurate was the work.

In his report to the War Department concerning the survey Jefferson Davis wrote that within a radius of 100 miles of the point where he set the post was the richest soil in the world. The prediction doubtless looked like a wild one at the time, but the excellence of his judgment has been fully proved during the years which have rolled by since he penned his prediction, for the territory referred to by him now each year adds millions of dollars to the wealth of the nation in the annual production of new wealth in the form of crops of all kinds, live stock and other industries.

John Powers, one of the earliest settlers in the region near Sioux Falls, states that he remembers seeing the post as far back as 1865, but never knew until the present time that it was placed there by Jefferson Davis. No white man of that time knew anything concerning the iron post, and it is considered somewhat remarkable that the Sioux Indians, who then roamed the prairies of Dakota, did not steal it for its value as old iron.

Dr. Germain had the mystery as to the post in his mind for thirty years. He commenced years ago to trace its history. Every early settler was questioned and no possible clue was left uninvestigated. Even the Sioux Indians who in the early days made their home in this part of the territory were questioned, but they knew nothing as to when or by whom the post had been placed in its present location. Joe Kirby, who is a Sioux Falls attorney, later appeared on the scene and his penchant for investigating historical objects set him to work on the mystery of the post.

Recently the attention of Dr. Germain and Mr. Kirby was directed to the old and musty records in the War Department at Washington, and after an exhaustive research the origin of the post was discovered from the reports made by Jefferson Davis to the War Department at the national capital, the old reports yet being in a good state of preservation. Thus the mystery of more than half a century was solved.

Playing Gopher. By C. O. Perrine.

A CLOSE CALL.

IT WAS one of those marvelous Southern California winter days when nature seems to have become mixed in her chronology and brought on a touch of June instead of January. Only the snow-covered mountains a few miles away, and the bare branches of the great weeping-willow tree by the roadside, near which we swung our hoes, showed the real season. When it came time to open our lunch boxes we found quite welcome the shade afforded by the trunk of this tree.

I was a newcomer on the —— ranch, one of the largest orange groves in the Riverside district. Jim Marston, my fellow-worker, had been there for some years, and held the position of foreman. As we seated ourselves in the midst of the fresh young grass, now sprouting from the December rains, the scene was far from suggesting anything of danger. The only sounds were the rustle of paper as Jim reached for another sandwich, and the rumble of a wagon as it crossed the bridge spanning the irrigation canal an eighth of a mile toward the foothills. It was therefore with some surprise that I heard Jim say: "The closest call I ever had for cashing in was very close to this identical spot."

I looked around to see what possible element of danger might be present. The only conjecture I could frame was expressed in my question: "What did you do—fall out of the tree?"

"No," Jim answered, "but the tree played a star part in the game, all the same."

"Well, what else could happen? The tree didn't fall on you, did it?"

"No, I'll tell you about it." Jim slowly finished peeling the juicy orange he held in his hand, then began: "One of our big irrigation pipe lines runs down this street. It passes not over ten feet from here, between us and the orchard. The pipe is just a quarter of a mile long from the intake at the canal to the distributing box down at grove 7 where the water is turned into the small flumes. You see we're about midway between the two.

"Summer before last we had been having an ever-increasing amount of trouble in getting the required amount of water to run through the pipe. It is of ordinary vitrified tiling, thirty inches in diameter, the joints cemented together to make it water-tight. I surmised that the roots of this willow had found a crack somewhere and had grown in and partly filled the pipe. After the last irrigation I had intended having it cleaned out, but in the hurry of other matters had forgotten it until the morning the water was to be turned on again. About 8 o'clock I happened to pass the intake, and it came to me that the work had not yet been done. Adams, the zanjero, was due there about 10 o'clock to turn on the water."

"Zanjero," I interrupted, "what's that?"

"It's a Spanish word meaning 'ditchman,' replied Jim. "That's what they call the water-company men who tend to regulating the water."

"Well, I realized that there wasn't much time to waste if the pipe was to be cleaned that day. The men were all busy elsewhere, so I decided to do the job myself. I hurried to the toolhouse for a lantern and spade. Returning to the intake, I took off my hat and coat, laid them to one side, and let myself down into the box. You've seen the intakes along the canal—a square, open box four or five feet deep, between the gate in the side of the canal and the end of the pipe. As I stood there with just my head and shoulders above ground, Pete Johnson, foreman of the next ranch below here, drove past on his way to town.

"Hello, Jim, working hard?" he shouted, pulling in, and then: "What in the world are you doing down there?"

"Playing gopher," I answered jokingly: "I guess some roots from the big willow down street have gotten into the pipe. The water hasn't been going through well lately, and it's up to me to get in and clean them out."

"With a 'Well, be good,' he drove on. I dropped down on my hands and knees and crawled into the pipe. It was just large enough so that by holding the handle of the lantern between my teeth, and dragging the shovel in one hand, I could make fair progress. It took several minutes to reach the source of trouble, where I found just what I had expected. A willow root had penetrated the pipe, and under the influence of the moisture had grown, as willow roots will, and spread out over the bottom of the pipe in a great mass of fibers resembling as much as anything the hair in a mattress. The sediment in the water, settling among the roots, had formed a solid sod-like mass impossible for the water either to wash away or to run through. The growth was nearly a foot thick, and eight or ten feet long. Setting my lantern on the roots a little in front of me, I began to dig out the mass with my spade, cutting it into chunks eight or ten inches square, throwing them behind me as I progressed. These the water would wash down into the distributing box, from which they could be easily removed.

"I could see a little segment of light at the lower end of the pipe, but the water from the last irrigation still filled it to within six or eight inches of the top at the lower end. There is a good deal of fall from the canal down to here, but the lower third of the pipe is very nearly level, so the water nearly filled the pipe for a good distance toward me, and only stopped a few feet below where I was working.

"The roots didn't cut out as easily as I had hoped they would, and in my cramped position I had to rest often. I gave no thought to the time until I was nearly through. When I did pull out my watch, I was surprised to find it already a minute or two past 10 o'clock.

"'Gracious! I'll have to hurry,' I thought, 'but Adams is late half the time, and I guess I'll take a chance on it and finish up.'

"Well, it was just about two minutes later that suddenly a great splashing roar came sounding down the pipe. Adams had come, and in two or three minutes 300 inches of water—stream enough to more than half fill the pipe—would be upon me. I dropped my spade in a hurry and by a sort of contortionist stunt turned around with my head upstream. Then I started on the fastest bit of crawling I ever did. Of course there wasn't one chance in forty of Adams hearing me above the roar of water in the intake, even though the pipe would carry my voice far. All the same I put two good lung power into yelling: 'Help! Turn off the water; help; help!'

"Before I had gotten far the water met me. For a minute I made fair progress against it, but as the full force of the stream reached me, I went slower and slower. The pipe was smooth and rather slippery, and I had little chance to brace myself. Not until then did I begin to get really scared. I knew very well that if I should be carried down into the lower part of the pipe, I would certainly be drowned. It wouldn't take the little air space above the water there long to fill up, and I wouldn't be able to hold my breath half long enough to be carried clear through.

"Of course it didn't take me long to think all this. Just then my hands and knees struck an extra slippery place, I lost my hold, and away I went down the pipe. I scrambled in vain for a new grip, and soon had to turn on my back to get my face above water to breathe. At the rate I was sliding I guessed I had about a minute to live. Gee! what a way to die, anyway! Drowned like a gopher in his hole. I remembered what I had said to Johnson earlier in the morning, and reflected sadly that I hadn't meant it so seriously.

"Then my feet struck something solid, and I stopped sliding. It was the chunk of roots I hadn't finished cutting loose. The shock of finding I still had a chance for life set my heart pounding. More from instinct than reason, I set up hollering again: 'Help! help!' and I got an answer, but from the bottom of the pipe instead of the top. The water as yet hadn't quite cut out the little spot of daylight, and up the pipe, barely audible above the roar, came the voice of Sagota, a Japanese irrigator. He told me afterward he was sitting on the edge of the distributing box waiting for the water to come, when he heard me yelling. As he was clear away from the sound of the water, my voice reached him quite clearly. His first thought was that I must be calling down the pipe from the intake. But no one was in sight there, so he dropped down into the distributing box and, putting his mouth close to the end of the pipe, called: 'Wassa matta, Mista Ma'ston, wassa matta?'

"'Shut off the water, quick; I'm in the pipe!' I called back.

"'All li', all li!' came the answer, and I saw his shadow as he climbed out of the box.

"Now that I had greater hope of rescue, I began to think over the situation again. The water was backed up in the pipe above me, and pressed at my back with considerable force. I wondered if the chunk of sod would stand the strain. I had cut off the main root where it came through the crack, and the surface of the pipe didn't offer much to cling to.

"Sure enough. Pretty soon away I went again, root and all. I grasped at the sides of the pipe for a hold, and my hand clasped the spade, which had remained where I dropped it until the roots gave way. It seemed in the way, and I gave it a shove in front of me to get rid of it. The blade struck some projection—probably a joint that hadn't been put together quite snug—and checked my progress. It slipped off in a moment, but it gave me an idea. I held the end of the handle to the top of the pipe so the blade made a greater angle with the bottom. Soon it caught again, and this time held for a couple of minutes. Then some little move on my part slipped it off again. This happened two or three times, and each time I stopped in deeper water. I knew the pipe wouldn't fill up much more, as the water would soon begin to run out the top of the distributing box, but as the spade kept slipping, and letting me farther down the pipe, all the first fear returned to me.

"It seemed a terrible time since Sagota had left the distributing box. Why wasn't the water shut off? Then I remembered. The gate in the canal was held in position by a clamp which was loosened by a wrench. Adams carried this with him in his cart, and without it Sagota could do nothing. As Adams drove a pretty good trotter, I knew the best I could hope for was that Sagota might catch him at the next intake, half a mile down the canal.

"Again the spade slipped, and this time when it caught again I had to prop myself on one elbow and hold my face close to the top of the pipe to breathe. One more slip would just about carry me under. I held myself rigid till my muscles cramped, lest some move might set me going
I must shift my position, just a

"Can you hear a silence? Well finest thing I ever heard was

If I Had Known.

Editor's Note—The memorial poem or drapa, to use the old Norse term, comes from the heart of a father suddenly left desolate by the death of a young son, just budded into manhood. It will find an echo in many living, sorrowing hearts and may also bring to them the comforting decision to still act well life's part until death reunites the true and living in eternal peace.

If I had known!
Who ever dreamed that such a storm could brew?
The jagged lightning flashed,
With air so balmy and from sky so blue;
High hopes forever dashed.
If I had known!

If I had known!
That touch of his strong hand as on he passed
Away amid the throng;
His voice, his look—the last in life, the last!
And oh! death seems so long.
If I had known!

If I had known!
Would I have told him more? and would my heart
Have throbbed against his own
In perfect harmony naught can impart,
Save only love alone?
If I had known!

If I had known!
Could I on self rely? I fear me lest
My race would ne'er be won.
Lead, kindly Light! I'll do my daily best,
Just as I would have done
If I had known.
—[Russell Kelso Carter, in National Magazine.

Aeroplanists.

They fly and die! till we might name anew
The heavens for them, if there they shone and stayed!
But no, they are falling stars for sad re view:
Landron, who downward flamed from skies essayed;
Moisant and Hoxsey, smiling where lov
laid;
Vivaldi, Selfridge, past their soldier care;
And that Peruvian boyish-manly shade,
The almost Hannibal of Alpine air.

Their tragedy appalls, and still the list
Is multiplied. Will, therefore, they desist
Not until science slumbers, and the knees
Of vigor tremble, and the sightless seas
Blow smooth to darers. Then, ah, physicist!
Devise to save such gleaming souls as these.
—[R. V. Trevel, in Youth's Companion.

Princess Nicotine.

To airy Princess Nicotine,
By poets long time sung,
Though it is easy to be seen
That you're no longer young,
I love you none the less, my heart,
Though in the ancient days
Sir Walter turned his lyric art
To crowning you with praise.

For you are still as young and fair,
As in those other times
When grateful poets everywhere
Poured forth their loyal rhymes
To prove you queen of sweet surcease
From trouble and from woe—
A sort of Hebe, bringing peace
To mortals high and low.

I love you for the kindly veil
You cast o'er ugly things;
And for the hints that never fail
To give the spirit wings,
As when you hover o'er a scene
By worry sore beset,
And 'neath an opalescent sheen
Envisor all regret.

But most of all, dear Nicotine,
I've loved you since that day
When, in a nook of leafy green
And roses hid away,
I found—my Polly blowing rings
Of incense rich and rare,
As blithely as the bird that sings
His heart out on the air!
—[John Kendrick Bangs, in Ainslee's.

HUMOR.

[Michigan Gargoyle:] Hip: What does it mean to say that a girl is as pretty as a picture?

Hop: Merely a frame of mind.

[Detroit Free Press:] "Is she good to the children?"

"Very. She lets them do everything their father doesn't want them to do."

[Boston Transcript:] First Loafer: Hallo, Bill! Got a new overcoat, I see. What did it cost yer?

Second Ditto: Six months. I never wears cheap duds.

[Judge:] Madge: You seem annoyed about something. Did you forget you were standing under the mistletoe?

Marjorie: No; but Charlie did.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] Gabe: Bagley says he would rather fight than eat.

Steve: I don't blame him. I had dinner at his house one night.

[Puck:] She: And they've named that simpleton Louis the Fourteenth?

He: Yes; it's just this way: He gets invited to lots of affairs where otherwise there would be but thirteen guests.

[Tit-Bits:] Maude: She's such a quiet little person that I'm surprised to hear she's wearing a diaphanous skirt.

Edna: Perhaps she believes in the old saying that little girls should be seen, but not heard.

[Washington Star:] "How did this idea of Santa Claus get started?" asked one small boy.

"Well," replied the other, "it was probably invented by parents who wanted to shift the responsibility for the unsatisfactory showing on Christmas morning."

[Tit-Bits:] Wife (as the sugar is passed:) Use the tongs, William.

Bill (from the country:) 'Tain't 'ot, is it?

[Buffalo Express:] Mr. Newrich (reading a newspaper headline:) Japanese Turn Agnostics.

Mrs. Newrich: Isn't it wonderful what those Japanese acrobats can do!

[Chicago Journal:] "Now a few words about selling this dictionary. A young woman will open the door a few inches."

"Yes."

"When she learns you are a book agent she will try to close it."

"Well."

"At this point you insert the dictionary."

[Blanco y Negro:] "Look, Elvira, at your fiance walking with another girl!"

"Why do you tell me of it? It was on that account I turned my back, so as to appear not to notice it!"

[Pathfinder:] "Why is it," queried the fair widow, "that they always say a man 'pines' for a woman?"

"I suppose," growled the fussy bachelor, "it's because the pine is about the softest wood there is."

Are You Suffering from Painful Afflictions of the Feet, Broken-down Arches, Callouses, Bunions, Etc?
Call on us for relief.
There are numerous Arch Supporters put on the market to correct flat feet that are made over a form, and in some cases answer the purpose. There is no ready-made Arch Support manufactured in this way that will give the desired results in more than 10 per cent of the cases. The reason is that there are different ligaments in the foot that may be affected and thus cause pain in the various joints. Our Arch Supports are made by perfect measurements and are guaranteed to relieve every case. WESTERN ORTHOPEDIC APPLIANCE CO., 731 South Grand Avenue, Los Angeles.
